The London Engines Are Given Full Test

Many Leading Citizens Watch a Most Interesting Test, with From Two to Four Streams --A Good Exhibition Fully Satisfactory.

Now that our citizens are thoroughly awakened to the fact, that this city positively requires better and more adequate fire protection, the action of the London, Ont., fire engine people, has not only aroused much enthusiasm over a previously moribund subject, but has convinced many of them that the London people have the goods.

It is an open secret that the Brantford engine people sell more engines than the London concern. Still the greatest assurance that any possible purchaser of any kind of goods can get, is a free and solicited examination of such goods, under any conditions.

The London people, on Thursday shipped here a chemical engine and one of their 1,000 gallon (to a minute) steam engines.

The chemical engine was exhibited on the evening of Thanksgiving Day, on the market square. An alarm of fire was rung, which resulted in a large attendance at the trial. On the market square a large pile of empty boxes, straw and other inflammables, saturated with kerosene was set afire. This blazed up very rapidly, the beams of light and tongues of fire, overtopping the surrounding buildings. In the space of very few seconds, after the chemical engine was let loose, the flames had dwindled to a black mass of charred sticks.

The main test, and one that involved the greatest expenditure, and future possibilities in case of a bad conflagration, was held yesterday afternoon at the corner of Murray and Aylmer streets. Shortly after three o'clock, the large steam engine, which weighs about five tons, was dragged from its temporary shelter in the Simcoe street fire hall.

Every item of the test was fairly made. On arrival at this creek, near the corner mentioned above, with steam down to about 30 pounds, the intake pipes was connected with the engine and lowered into the creek. Two lines of two-inch hose, with one-inch nozzles were attached. At the word "go" the power was put on, with steam down to about 50 pounds. At once two streams, one thrown up the creek and one to the south, were pouring water to a height of carried perpendicularly, of perhaps 150 feet. Although urging out two full streams, the engine, without seeming vibration of any amount, steadily but only kept to its work, but steadily increased its steam pressure. After the two-hour test had been carried on for perhaps three-quarters of an hour, the power was shut off.

Then the firemen, who took a most commendable interest in the test, attached a coupling whereby three streams of water were thrown simultaneously. One stream, direct from the engine was thrown down the creek, and a divided stream from two nozzles went back to the upper reach of the creek. Now this attachment throwing water towards the old tannery was a very severe test. From the engine a two-inch hose led for some, 50 or 60 feet to thecoupling which divided the stream, between two branch hose, of the same diameter, viz., two inches. Had a larger diameter supply hose run from the engine to the dividing coupling, it would give a better supply of water to each of the two divergency lines of hose. Even though, thus handicapped, most powerful streams issued from each of the northern nozzles. Firemen Johns, holding one nozzle, whilst standing on the bridge was able to throw a clear stream of water far over the large chimney on the old tannery.

FROM A HYDRANT.

After demonstrating the efficiency of the engine whilst pumping its water direct from the creek, a very fair test was given of its power on the market square when supplied from a hydrant. At first two lines of hose were attached direct to the hydrant to demonstrate the power of our local waterworks circulation. This was a most interesting test. Without an actual gauge being applied, it was impossible to closely compare the difference between streams thrown by water pressure alone, and those supplied from the same source, but augmented by the engine's powerful pumps. In the matter of supply from a hydrant to an engine, the relative power of the engine is largely dependent upon the size of main supplying the water.

The larger the main, the better force can be supplied to an engine, as the tremendous suction created by a powerful engine, counterbalances to some extent, the seeming benefit afforded it by the actual water power pressure. In yesterday's test, the streams thrown by the combined engine and water power pressure, seemed about twice the strongest.

The streams thrown by the engine, sucking from the hydrant, would easily throw a compact stream of water over the adjacent clock tower. This would clearly reach the highest portion of any building in Peterboro.

THOSE PRESENT.

Great interest was shown by the firemen, who did all in their power to materially assist the engine people in making a successful test, but, in the interests of the public, to try every means known to their experience, to make the test severe. This was a good showing of the brigade, who acted under supervision of Chief Rutherford, present during the long trials. Mayor Beat, took much interest in the test, and asked Mr. Pritchard, secretary-treasurer of the London Company, many questions of practical import.

Mr. Pritchard told The Times that his company asked no favors from the city, he said the engine could be judged sufficiently by the tests made yesterday, even though tested under disadvantageous conditions.

Among those present were noticed, Mayor Beat, Aldermen Tovey, Hicks, Johnston, Adams and others, Mr. Henderson, superintendent of the local water works, Brownscombe, city treasurer, many Peterboro merchants and professional men.

By suggestion, much amusement was caused this crowd, when some belated lone pedestrian advancing towards the scene of the test, would suddenly discover an immediate need for his umbrella. The firemen handling the nozzle, would by a slight deflection of it, cause some well known man to run the gauntlet through a heavy fall of very wet spray. By suggestion of Mr. Pritchard arrangements were completed with Mayor Beat, and Ald. Johnston, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee for a business meeting yesterday evening. At this meeting, Mr. Pritchard made what seems a fair proposition. Learning that the Committee had no power to conclude a definite deal for the engine, at present, has offered to store the engines, cleaned by his own men, in the local shedsuntil some understanding is attained. He said that the brigade, in case of a fire breaking out, in at perfect liberty and welcome to use the engine. Should the city decide not to buy the engine, it will be shipped elsewhere for exhibition. Mr. Pritchard, jr., will arrive in the city Monday to try and conclude arrangements about the purchase.

WHAT CAME OF THE ROYAL VISIT

How Her Royal Highness Led to a New Canadian Industry.

ONTARIO'S SODILITE WORKS

The Princess Took a Specimen Home With Her and Interested Capitalists.

Montreal, October 21. — Mr. Joseph James, of Actinolite, Ont., formerly of Montreal, who is at present on a visit to this city, tells an interesting story of how the Duchess of York, now Princess of Wales, came to start an industry in his section of the country.

It appears that the Princess takes a great interest in mineralogy and while in Canada her Royal Highness took occasion to look over the extremely fine collection of Professor Wilmot, of the Geological Survey. Coming across a beautiful piece of blue stone, the Princess asked if she might have it as a specimen to take back to England with her, and, of course, the genial professor lost no time in transferring it to her possession. This stone is what is known as sodilite, and so far as can be ascertained is not to be found in this particular color in any section of the world.

In the redecoration of Marlborough House, which took place after the Royal couple returned from their Canadian tour, the Princess took great interest.

The decorators were doing a large amount of mosiac work, and it occurred to the Princess that the stone which she had brought over from Canada would look particularly well when introduced, not only on account of its rarity, there being nothing like it in the possession of the decorators, but for its real beauty as well.

The decorator, with a keen eye to business, made inquiries as to where her Royal Highness had obtained the stone, and upon being informed, he immediately opened communication with Prof. Wilmot. The professor on his part informed the man in England that the specimen of sodilite which he had the honor to present to the Princess had come from North Hastings, near Bancroft, in the Province of Ontario.

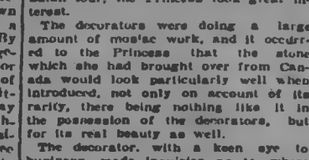
Looking to its possibilities for mosiac work, the decorator immediately sent out a representative, the result being that the land where the discovery was made was acquired, and today upon this property there is not only a quarry, but a complete works, containing cutting and polishing machinery, lathe, etc., so that the product may be sent abroad ready for use, and as a pretty compliment to her Royal Highness, and in memory of how the enterprise had its birth, it is called the Princess Quarry. In charge of the enterprise is Mr. T. Morrison, of England, while the quarry superintendent is Mr. D. Winning.

Mr. James states that considerable quantities of sodilite have been sent to England in the rough, there to be cut and polished, but now that the Canadian works are in operation, future shipments will likely all be of the finished article.

In speaking of sodilite, Mr. James, who has had considerable experience in minerals, states that he has seen nothing approaching it. It is not only a beautiful stone, but it is the only natural blue which has ever been discovered fit for mosiac work, and owing to its rarity no doubt the owners of the property, who, by the way, are all Englishmen, have a good paying investment.

So it was that business came through a woman's fancy, as Mr. James puts it.

THOUSANDS UPON THOUSANDS of the best known people in Canada have greatly benefited by the use of Allen's Lung Balsam. It cures the deepseated coughs and colds as well as all cases of Croup, Quinsy, Bronchitis, and similar affections.



At Yesterday's police court Chas. Burgoyne was charged with failing to send his boy to school. The boy had only attended thirty days in eight months. Burgoyne explained that he thought the boy was at school. During several months the boy had not attended school for a single day. The magistrate said Burgoyne would look after his dog better than this. He intended to punish all parents who neglected their children like this, and imposed a fine of $5 to be paid in 10 days, or 10 days in jail. Con Kane was discharged on a similar charge, as he had attended to the matter since.

Jas Kelly was charged with having been drunk in a public place on October 20th, viz., at the C. P. R. platform. Mr. Dodds, C.P.R. station agent, recognized the prisoner. On Wednesday evening, tried to get the prisoner to keep quiet. He, with much difficulty, related some of the language the prisoner had used in the presence of other passengers. The prisoner then asked Mr. Dodds what right he had to interfere with him. The Dominion Express driver gave evidence corroborating that of Mr. Dodds.

The magistrate said that the railway stations must be kept decent. To ensure this he imposed a fine of $10 to be paid forthwith, with the alternative of 20 days in jail. Kelly said he had never been in a police court before. For lack of "the necessary" he will for 20 days enjoy the quail on toast and canvas-back duck provided in Castle Nesbitt.

NEGLECTED CHILDREN.

During a lull, between cases, the magistrate delivered a little homily on the duty of parents towards children, regarding sending them to school. He said a correspondent had suggested that magistrates be empowered to flog children systematically staying away from school. This, however, was beyond the powers of a police magistrate. Mr. Dumble enumerated the only offences for which a magistrate could order the whip for boys, and scheming school was not included. He intimated his intention of fining parents heavily, who did not see that their heildren attended school.

The young man Cunningham, who it is alleged, a few days ago tried, to take the short route to oblivion, via poison, because his best girl had "thrown him the mitten," was on trial next. His Worship simply asked Cunningham if he worked in the shanties. On receiving a satisfactory answer from the prisoner, his Worship advised him to go back to work, work being the greatest cure for mental worries. Mr. Dumble also advised Cunningham to shun the seductive glass and all would come out right. Cunningham, duly repentant, was allowed to go. Let us advise him to remember the saying of a pretty well posted American, who in speaking of the fair sex, said, "I'd lie for you, I'd sigh for you, but I'm —— if I would die for you or any other woman!"

ATHLETIC WORLD

SPRINTING.

The Times has been asked to publish the following acceptance of a challenge:

Mr. W. Stewart,

I hereby accept your challenge to a five-mile road race, to be run on Oct. 28th, 1905, starting at 2 p.m. One lap around the Driving Park, down to Downer's Corners and finish at the Exhibition Grounds corner.

Yours,
G. BARRIE.

Dated October 27, 1905,
This should ensure a good race.

GOLF.

There was a very attendance at the local links on Thanksgiving Day. The gentlemen were hosts for the occasion and set up a most toothsome repast. The struggle in the finals for Mr. Peter Campbell's trophy, was particularly interesting, extra holes having to be played. Mr. W. H. Bradburn finally won from Mr. Cyril Moore. Afterwards the mixed foursomes were played. Mrs. W. H. Hill and Mr. W. H. Bradburn tied the round with Miss G. Hall and Mr. Coulthardt, the net score being 43. Mrs. R. M. Dennistoun and Mr. H. D. Burnett had the best gross score, the figure being 48.

The Edmison trophy, presented by County Magistrate Edmison, was won by Mr. Robt. Neill, by a score of 92.

RUGBY.

"Peterboro knocked the Toronto-Argonauts out of the running in the intermediate O.R.F.U. series, Thanksgiving Day, when they defeated the combination team for the second time this season by a score of 8—6 on the Varsity athletic field. At Peterboro last Saturday the score was 18 to 7, making the total on the round 26 to 13. The credit for the victory must be ascribed to the splendid punting of Shaw and the excellent defensive work of the back division. Shaw outgamed the Argos' halves, kicking with and against the wind. Mulhern pulled off some nice runs, and Crowley made few mistakes. Ford played a good form until he was hurt by a tackle and compelled to retire. The husky Hurtubise, Regan, Gilbert and McDonald were the stars of the wing line.

The following were the Peterboro team;

Peterboro—Back, Ford; half-backs, Mulhern, Shaw, Crowley; quarter-back, Gillespie; snap-back, Hurtubise; inside wings, Regan, Craig; middle wings, McDonald, Meagher; outside wings, Crough and Gilbert.

Referee, R. Hayes, Hamilton; umpire, F. J. Robbins, Hamilton.

The following players are requested to be on hand at Riverside Park this afternoon. Practice will begin at 3 p.m.: Graham, Quinlan, Moore, Fitzpatrick, Walker, Caniff, O'Brien, Dickson, Simson, Dillon, Craig, Dercelier, Roddy, Thornton, Ford, Mulhern, Shaw, Crowley, Gillespie, Hurtubise, Regan, Craig, Meagher, McDonald, Crough, Gilbert, and any others are welcome.

THE SECRET OF YOUTH

De Soto looked for the secret of youth in a spring of gushing, life-giving waters, which he was sure he would find in the New World. Alchemists and sages (thousands of them), have spent their lives in quest for it, but it is only found by those happy people who can digest and assimilate the right food which keeps the physical body perfect that peace and comfort are the sure results.

A remarkable man of 94 says: "For many long years I suffered more or less with chronic costiveness and painful indigestion. This condition made life a great burden to me, as you may well imagine.

"Two years ago I began to use Grape-Nuts as food, and am thankful that I did. It has been a blessing to me in every way. I first noticed that it had restored my digestion. This was a great gain but was nothing to compare in importance with the fact that in a short time my bowels were restored to free and normal action.

"The cure seemed to be complete for two years I have had none of the old troubles. I use the Grape-Nuts food every morning for breakfast and frequently eat nothing else. The use has made me comfortable and happy, and although I will be 94 years old next fall I have become strong and supple again, erect in figure and can walk with any body and enjoy it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a reason."

Flames Add to Horror of Russian Position

Incendiary Fire Started in Warsaw and One Part of the City is in Flames---Sword and Famine Threaten the Czar's Realms.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 27.—Isolated from the rest of Europe owing to the complete tie-up of the railways, by the strikers, with disorders on every hand, and the entire country threatened with armed revolution, Russia is indeed in a pitiable plight, and chaos reigns in all parts of the realm. The strike is spreading, and all the professions are falling victims to the movement. Industrial life throughout the country is coming to a standstill.

International railway communications has practically ceased, and in the interior few trains are moving, and these are operated only by railway battalions. The general impression here is that the situation cannot long continue as at present, and either the workmen will be starved into submission or pillage with military interference and bloodshed on a large scale are bound to follow.

A food or water famine is already threatened at Moscow and other points.

Already many disorders have occurred and pitched battles between the soldiers and strikers are becoming more numerous, although the revolutionary leaders are using every effort to prevent bloodshed.

FIRE ADDS ITS HORRORS.

As if anything further were required to add to the horrors of the situation an incendiary fire broke out in Warsaw last night and has not yet been extinguished. One part of the city is in flames. Late yesterday railway communication beyond the Russian frontier was entirely discontinued and the telegraph lines are working badly. The lines in the interior of Russia seem to be cut.

The students began to congregate at the University in the Vassili Ostrov district to-day, announcing that they intended to hold the building as the students of Kharkoff, held their university against the military, and to hold a big meeting to-night to which workmen of all the Social groups are invited. Warnings have been issued that the Government will not permit revolutionary meetings at the universities and higher schools under the guise of student assemblies. General Trepoff has despatched troops to surround the building and trouble is momentarily feared. To add to the alarm the strikers have succeeded in stopping the machinery of the electric light plant and the city is in darkness.

PETERBORO WATER

A Blood-sucking Leech Found in Family Water Supply.

How is it since our local water supply has recently been microscopically examined by a Toronto expert the result been made known to our local authorities, that such result of that analysis has not been published.

The Times recently published a statement based on information gained from a civic employee, and that statement whether right or wrong was sufficiently against the purity of our local drinking water to call citizens' attention to the need for precaution. It is commonly known that our local water is not as pure as it might be. We do not seem as alarmists, still it Peterboro's drinking water is not fit for drinking in its native purity or impurity, there is no sense in, ostrich like hiding our heads in the face of danger. If our water should always be boiled before using, why not risk any possible condemnation of the waterworks, which cannot be made prepared, and save a possible epidemic by letting the public know where they are at?

Yesterday Mr. Stephen Parey, showed several citizens, a leech which he claimed came through the family tap, from our common source of drinking water.

Now it is not the visible and directly tangible danger such as a few more blood sucking leeches that raises distrust of our water, or that contains the basis of a general epidemic. It is in the invisible, to the human eye, bacteria, that we may drink in scores, and generate in our systems in their millions, that people should be warned against. If the test of our local waters was satisfactory, it is the duty of our local authorities to have it published and end a very prevalent distrust.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Where Peterboro People Spent Their Holiday.

Peterboro on Thanksgiving Day seemed quiter and more Sabbath like than is usual on a real Sunday. Among those who spent the holiday out of town, we might mention;

Mr. Lou Perrin in Tweed.
Mr. Jos. Carey in Orillia.
Mr. James Dwyer in Havergock.
Mr. W. Strahan in Norwood.
Mr. R. R. Hall, M.P., left for Ottawa Thursday night.
Dr. and Mrs. Caldwell in Toronto.
Mr. W. Stewart in Toronto.
Mr. William Hooper in Lindsay.
Rev. Dr. O'Brien in Belleville.
Miss Shirley Wesley in Lindsay.
Mr. E. S. Clarry in Millbrook.
Mr. Fred Cook with friends in Lindsay.
Mrs. T. D. Mulholland in Jamestown.
Mr. Wm. McCormack in Toronto.
Mr. Hague Sawers went to Barrie.
Miss Ada Robertson in Burleigh with friends.
Mr. Barton Earle, in Toronto.
Mr. W. F. Johnston, barrister, in Port Hope and Cobourg.
Miss Minnie McAuliffe, Charlotte street, in Lindsay.

THE RIFLE MATCHES

A Large Attendance Sees Some Good Shooting at the Butts.

From 70 to 80 people, despite the somewhat cold weather of Thanksgiving Day, walked or drove out to the rifle butts in the east side.

The match was for members of the 57th Regt., and the boys in red turned out well. Taken as a whole, the shooting was somewhat inferior to that of last year. This was due to several new men taking part and some of the older shots dropping out. The wind was strong at times, but on the whole, conditions were favorable for shooting. Hot lunch was served on the ground by Mr. T. Hooper. There were three tents, one for the officers, one for the men and one for the quartermaster. The matches began at nine o'clock and were concluded about four.

The Times was unable yesterday to procure a complete list of prize winners; this will appear in Monday's issue.

IS A GREAT MONEY GETTER

Gospel Tabernacle Secures $80,000 in Few Hours.

New York, October 27.—The Tribune says: At the annual missionary services of The Gospel Tabernacle here $34,265 was subscribed. Of this $25,350 was pledged after the morning sermon of the Rev. Albert B. Simpson, pastor of the church, and the remaining $12,915 was subscribed at an afternoon meeting. While only one of the givers' names were made public, it is said that more than half of the gifts were either in cash or cheques. The half dozen largest subscriptions were simply promises written on cards, but the givers are all wealthy men who annually contribute large sums to this fund.

The largest single gift was $10,000, made by a business man who was, Mr. Simpson said, converted in the gospel tabernacle a number of years ago. A gift of $7,500 was received from a man and his wife, who several years ago accidentally dropped into the tabernacle one morning for the annual missionary service. Both became interested and although not church members, have annually given large sums to the fund. Half a dozen subscriptions of $5,000 were received. A man's gold watch and a wedding ring were sent up by some unknown persons. The sermon preached by Mr. Simpson was not of a character to evoke great missionaries. It was a text taken from Mark: "Jesus stood against the treasury." The earlier part of the afternoon meeting was taken up by addresses of missionaries. Rev. Mr. Wickware, from the Congo, told of atrocities he had witnessed there. The soldiers, he said, would go to the natives and demand a certain amount of rubber, the alternative being the cutting of a certain amount of hands. In many instances the missionary had known, he said, of the hands being taken. He told of seeing an old woman forced to carry on her back a great basket full of human hands, from which a trail of blood was running. The hands were being carried to the Congo state authorities. He had photographs, he added, of the scenes described.

ELEVEN YEARS of constant use in Blythe, Ont., is Dr. H. J. Milne's experience with "The D. & L. Emulsion." Do you suppose he would have continued ordering it unless it was the best?

STRANGE CASE OF SUICIDE

Vienna, October 27. — An Austrian manufacturer named Gustaf Thoen committed suicide at the Bohemian resort, Joachimsthal, this week, in an unusual manner. He went into the town, hoisted to all the barrel organs to find out the one which played the liveliest tune, and commissioned the attendant operator to go with him to the bathing pond.

It was after bathing hours, and nobody was about. The manufacturer called for three tunes, and finally ordered a new waltz to be played three times while he undressed. He then sat at the end of the diving board in correct bathing costume and demanded the waltz once more. Then, to the horror of the organ grinder the merchant raised a revolver, shot himself through the head, and fell into the pond. The organ grinder fished out the body, but found that the man was dead.

Davis & Lawrence Co., Ltd., Montreal.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the block of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 270 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $300,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $150,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $70,000.00 to $80,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividens and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have 40 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.50 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 60 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionaires get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1904 produced $15,811.56 per hour, every hour, day and night. Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sums of $20,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? Then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the other cities in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock so they would have something that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

Pale and Anxious

Your Countenance Indicates the Body's Awful Struggle for Health.

Impossible to work or think clearly when there is no reserve of vigor, no nourishment in the blood, no supply of nerve energy.

The life of the half-sick man is pitiful, in fact, almost criminal, when bounding strength is so quickly derived from Ferrozone.

This nutritive tonic is guaranteed to strengthen all men, women and children. Weak organs get new force, vital energy is generated. Muscle and fat are added, healthy color is restored and the blood fairly tingles with new-found life.

Read the evidence of Jno. Carter, of 40 King St. East, Toronto, who says:

"After a severe attack of dripge my health was almost shattered. I suffered constantly from nervousness and dyspepsia. At night I would waken with terrible palpitation and heart pains. Work became a great effort. At ten in the morning I was so tired and weak I could hardly walk another minute.

"Then came a bad attack of rheumatism which laid me up in bed. I could scarcely lift the weight of a pound and to stoop or bend was impossible. My druggist recommended Ferrozone, and he knew what he was talking about, for it rebuilt my strength, gave me abundant appetite, better blood, and new nerve energy. The rheumatism has disappeared. I weigh more, feel refreshed and vigorous, and am able to work ten hours a day. Ferrozone did it all."

You will be steadied, toned and strengthened for all time to come with Ferrozone. Get the genuine in boxes or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., or Kingston, Ont.

OUR TARIFF

There is some talk in Massachusetts about reciprocity with Canada. The subject is no longer discussed in Canada. Hope of obtaining a reciprocity agreement with the United States has been abandoned and a policy of higher protection for domestic manufactures is to be adopted. The manufacturing interests of the Dominion are expanding and are acquiring greater political influence. They demand a revision of the tariff for their benefit, and according to all appearances they will get it soon.

Many of our manufacturers are confident that higher duties on American competing products will give them a practical monopoly of the home market. They are likely to be disappointed. There are many articles which they cannot afford to sell so cheaply as their American rivals, even after the goods have paid a heavy duty. The manufacturer on the American side of the international boundary will not be willing to be forced out of the Canadian market, and he will cut his prices. He sells his goods there now for less than he does at home, and will sell them for still less.

Recently the Minister of Trade and Customs of the Commonwealth of Australia almost doubled the invoice value of American harvesters. The object was to give greater protection to the Australian manufacturers, who alleged that their rivals undervalued their machines. The counter move of the so-called harvester trust was to reduce considerably the retail price of its goods. According to the Australian papers the trust is determined to crush out the "infant industry" of manufacturing agricultural machinery in the Commonwealth.

Presumably some American manufacturers will adopt the same policy of cutting prices to keep their foothold in Canada. They can afford to sell goods here for a trivial profit or at the cost of production because of the large profits they make in the home market. It is not likely that the volume of American exports to this country will be reduced by any changes that may be made in our tariff, but the trade may be less profitable than it has been to Uncle Sam.

TO AVOID PNEUMONIA

The pneumonia season is now fairly open and will continue through the next six or seven months. The prevalence whilst this most deadly of virulent bacterial diseases shall attack will depend chiefly upon the kind of care people take of themselves. Those who strive to keep in good general health need have little fear of it.

Drunkenness is foremost among the habits of mankind that aid in the propagation of pneumonia. Overeating is another form of intemperance which makes people fall its easy victims. Failure to bathe frequently and breathing through the mouth increases the liability of contracting the disease. Overheated houses are the cause of many cases. People toast themselves in furnace and steam heated flats, dwellings and offices until they are incapable of standing severe weather, and when they venture outdoors they catch colds which in many instances develop into pneumonia and speedily bring them to their death beds. There would be a great deal less pneumonia if the rule were generally adopted of never letting the temperature of house or office exceed 70 degrees.

We suggest profitably add the desirability of taking regularly during cold weather a reasonable amount of outdoor exercise. Most people get outdoors more or less in warm weather, but in the late fall, winter and early spring, when the windows and doors in buildings and cars are kept closed, and it is necessary to go out if fresh air is to be got, a majority, disliking to brave the cold, keep closely indoors. The germs which cause pneumonia have no enemy so deadly as fresh air. Investigations show they are always much less numerous in the mouths and nostrils of outdoor than of indoor workers. Those who have been accustomed to stick close to the stove or radiator during cold weather would do well, therefore, to adopt the practice of taking a brisk half-hour's or hour's constitutional in the fresh air daily. It is one of the surest preventives not only of pneumonia but of most other ailments and diseases. Persons who have the patience to take precautions need have little fear of pneumonia.

DO THE RIGHT THING when sore chest and tickling throat warn you that an all-winter cold threaten. Use the staunch old remedy, Perry Davis' Painkiller, and get rid of the pest in twenty-four hours. 25 and 50 cts.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even-numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Province (except nos 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7 50 per annum for an individual, and from $40 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 0x1500 feet. The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

W. W. CORY.
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

A trip around the world in 60 minutes at a mere trifle.

Scores upon scores of people are daily taking advantage of our very liberal and decidedly interesting offer.

Magnificently finished and exquisitely photo-color views in place of the oldtime and antiquated views of the past. A most pleasant and interesting hour to spend journeying around the globe viewing the places of greatest interest, most beautiful scenery, etc., at a mere trifle of cost through our liberal plan. These views illustrate some of the most noted places in the world—mountain scenery both in America and Europe—waterfalls and other famous natural phenomena, some of the world's most famous buildings, places of historical interest and places famous for beautiful architecture or beautiful natural scenery. This set is of the greatest educational value, presenting, as it does, such realistic likenesses of scenes and places that we all should know about. We want every household in this city to have one of these sets. Imagine yourself taken through the Orient, on a trip to California, through the world's Fair to see the splendid scenes as though you were right there on the spot. By a special process, a combination of lithographing and half-tone work, we are able to offer a collection of colored views from every part of the world in the most beautiful, natural and startling life-like color effects, which must be seen to be appreciated. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and beauty of these views. Come and see them. We want each and every household in this city to have a set of these.

It wasn't so very long ago that hundreds of thousands of people spent many pleasant hours with the stereoscope, but heretofore they were compelled to pay enormous prices for views, think of it, as high as 50c each for colored pictures. We sold thousands upon thousands of stereoscopic views, in colors, at 50c each in those days, but imagine each and every view had to be colored by hand. In the past few months we have had repeated demands for them, and being able to secure the latest and most beautiful colored views to furnish to the public at a ridiculously low price, we entered into the stereoscope plan on quite a large scale, and have taken immediate advantage of the International Art Association, who have spent an enormous amount of money to get out special color plates and have finally completed their end, namely: To place on the market thousands of magnificent stereoscopic views, the most beautiful, interesting and exciting scenes from every land, in the grandest and most exquisite natural colors.

Now we come to our great special offer. Read our plan carefully as it describes the stereoscope and tells how to secure the scope and views at almost no cost to you.

First the stereoscope. The Stereoscope is our world-famous "Aluminum Crystal Lens" Stereoscope. Genuine aluminum hood, bound with dark rich red velvet. Frame is of fine finished cherry wood with patent folding handle, folding underneath frame, and sliding bar. The lenses are extra fine quality, selected for clearness and brilliancy, 1¾ inches in diameter, ground from best quality glass and carefully adjusted. This Crystal Lens Aluminum "Scope" has won universal praise from lovers of the beautiful, and as a means of entertainment stands second to nothing.

STRICTURE AND KIDNEY DISEASE CURED.

G. E. WRIGHT.

"I had stricture for eleven years. It finally brought on Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I had an uncomfortable shooting pain in the groin and feeling as though something was in the urethra. My back was weak and I could scarcely stoop over. Urine was full of sediment. Had a desire to urinate frequently. Family doctors, so-called specialists, patent medicines, electric belts, all failed. I was discouraged. I had spent hundreds of dollars in vain. Finally I consulted Drs. Kennedy & Kergan as the last resort. I had heard a great deal about them and concluded from the fact that they had been established over 25 years that they understood their business. I am delighted with the results. In one week I felt better and in a few weeks was entirely cured. Have gained sixteen pounds in weight."

A Tangled Web

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

"Oh! yes; it is clear enough. Helen, like myself, has hesitated, and he is returning for her final decision. I wonder if she has taken this method of informing me? It is rather well done. Probably my engagement would facilitate matters, and we might both live happy ever after! Why not? Helen and Mark Winton deserve it. How constant and true he has been. That is his character, though. What perfect trust one could have in him. How good he will be to his little step-daughter. What a funny jumble of relationships. Shall I be his step-daughter too? No, no; neither in fact or fiction can I ever be anything to him, nor does it matter much. Oh! no, nor could I have any pleasanter, more disinterested partner for life than Clifford Marsden. I ought to be thankful for so fair a lot. I shall soon grow to love him. I love him already—a little. I wish he would come; I shall not tease him any more. I will be very good—very good—he deserves it. Perhaps, when Helen goes to India, she will leave Beatrice with me, she is too young to go out just now. I do hope she will; I shall then have a little bit of the old home to cling to. Oh! how happy, how happy the last year has been, till my blind eyes were opened. What a foolish, conceited girl I have been. Yes, I will marry Clifford—dear Clifford; he will be very dear to me soon, and then I shall be happy again. How intolerable unhappiness is. If I could but throw it off!"

She wiped away the tears which would spring to her eyes; she put away Winton's letter, and setting out her writing things, resolutely fastened her attention on the directions she had promised to send Bea's little Kindergartnerin.

When about half through her task, the door was opened by the clerical-looking master of the house, who solemnly announced "Mr. Marsden." Nora sprung up with a movement of genuine pleasure.

Marsden was looking better and brighter than when he left. He had more color, his fine blue eyes looked darker than usual, his distinguished figure admirably arrayed, his easy grace, his whole style and appearance were fit for an ideal lover.

"By Heaven! Nora," he exclaimed with delight, as he clasped her outstretched hand in both his own, "you are glad to see me?"

"Yes, very!" returned Nora, with a little nervous laugh, and leaving her hand in his.

He drew her to the light, and gazed into her face with longing tenderness, while a slight knitting of the brows showed how intently he tried to read her thoughts.

"My darling!" he said, in a low tone, "there are tears in your eyes? What has grieved you—tell me?"

"Oh! nothing. What could I have to cry for? Yet the tears did come; I don't know why."

Clifford felt in some vague way flattered by her tears.

"Then you have thought of me, Nora? Can you decide? Will you try to love me, and be my wife?"

"Yes," she returned, quietly and distinctly. "I am sure I shall love you as you deserve. I am growing fond of you already. I missed you so much yesterday and the day before, and looked forward to seeing you, and now I am quite happy you have come—that is love, I suppose?" smiling archly and frankly.

"Dearest," returned Marsden with a quick sigh, kissing her hand before he released it. "For God's sake spare me such arguments! You only prove how much you have to learn! However, your promise to be mine is all I ask now; assure me once more that you will be my wife?"

Touched by the eager, pained pleading of his eyes, Nora gave him her hand again, and said softly, solemnly: "I do, indeed, promise to be your wife and to love you."

"Sweetest, kindest!" cried Marsden, his face aglow with joy. "One word more—when? There is no need for useless delays. When, Nora?"

"I will not marry before the fifteenth of next February," she said with decision.

"But, Nora, that is more than two months off."

"Very little more than two."

"And why not before?"

"On the fifteenth of February I shall be twenty-one, and I want to settle part of what I possess on Helen and Bea. Did I not tell you once?"

"Yes, yes, of course; and quite right too; but your marriage need not prevent that? I shall assist you in making this settlement."

"Yes; but I would prefer making it while I am my own mistress."

"Your own mistress! Why, you will always be your own mistress! But do not let us quarrel over details, all that will arrange itself. Now, let me put this ring on your finger. It is my signet, and I fancy it seems more like taking possession when you wear the crest of my house."

"That is a curious fancy," said Nora, as she let him slip his onyx seal-ring on her slender finger. "Your best title is my free consent."

"It is free?" he asked. "You don't know how I have longed and schemed for this moment! I never felt so doubtful of success before. I never could make sure of you! Even now, Nora, you do not love as I want to be loved. I feel that keenly. But I have your promise, and you can not hold back your affection from one who hungers and thirsts for it as I do! You are the one supreme good of life to me, and I have waited patiently."

"Not very long!" said Nora, who was touched and moved by the intense feeling in his voice. "Why, Clifford, we only met at Lady Dorrington's dance in June! At that time I was a mere child!"

"Nearly six months ago! It is an age! Do you remember the night of that lightning ball of mine when you accused me of taking too much champagne? I knew then that I could not bear to exist without you, and pressed you to my heart in the waltz. I would have done so if death had been the penalty. Then I felt I wanted to carry you away from every one to be mine—mine alone."

"And why—why do you care for me so much?" cried Nora uncanily; his vehemence displeased her, she scarce knew why.

"How can I tell?" he returned more calmly. "Some witchery I could neither resist nor explain!" There was a pause, and Nora went to the writing-table, and began to look over her letter. "I wonder what can have detained Helen," she said; "she ought to have returned by this time."

"She has, probably," observed Marsden smiling. "I told the servant to let her know I was here, and she has perhaps kept away."

"Then let me go and find her; she will be pleased."

"Yes," interrupted Marsden. "She is a nice, charming creature, and my good friend! but do not seek her yet, I have a thousand things to say. Must you finish that letter?"

"Yes, indeed! I shall only be a very few minutes; it is about Bea and her travels; she comes up with fraulein in a few days."

While she wrote, Marsden leaned over a high-backed chair and gazed at her, and then they glided into talk of the future. He was full of pleasant projects, of traveling, of spending a few months at Vienna, of a cruise in the Mediterranean, of everything save residing at sweet Evesleigh.

"Now I really will look for Helen!" cried Nora, moving toward the door. Marsden interposed between her and it.

"Once more," he exclaimed, "before this heavenly hour is ended, tell me you will love me—that nothing shall separate us."

"I do promise," said Nora, moved by a strange feeling of compassion.

"Then give me one unstinted kiss."

Gold Bug Stock

Has been withdrawn from the market by the Company. There is none of it for sale except a small block on which I have an option. This stock I am placing at 25 cents per share. 100 shares will cost you $25.00. In my judgment it will sell for 60 cents per share on the open market inside of 90 days. The papers of Oregon say that the rich find of ore in the Gold Bug mine is the greatest sensation known in the State in many months. Hon. George A. Newman, Assistant Adjutant General of Iowa, has just been to Sumpter, visited the Gold Bug, bought heavily of the stock, and on his return tells me it has the finest ore and is the best looking property he saw any place in the West.

I give Bank references, the very best. I sell every share of this stock on honor. If you want 100 shares send $25.00 to the Mechanics' Savings Bank, Des Moines, telling them to turn the money over to me when I deliver the stock, to be sent to you. If you want 1,000 shares send $250. Everything about the Gold Bug is legitimate. It is now one of the richest mines of the North-West. We think that the first dividends will be paid in January or February, 1906, and you will see this stock selling at $1.00 per share on the open market in less than one year. Five strong veins, much of the ore literally sprinkled with free gold. Let me tell you about it more in detail. Address,

Watch the Skin for Bad Blood

It Comes to the Surface in the Form of Pimples, Boils, Rashes and Humors.

Where the blood is weak and depraved the system lacks staying power and force. Frightful ulcers and unsightly blotches break out, the skin becomes yellow and muddy, the eyes lack lustre.

Reader, does YOUR blood need attention? If so get Dr. Hamilton's Pills at once: they filter out all poisons, eliminate disease-making germs, nourish and re-vitalize every drop of blood in the body.

No medicine exerts such a marvellous influence for good as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they clear the complexion, make it exquisitely beautiful; they cure pimples, rashes and skin troubles of every kind. Read the following carefully;

No Appetite Bad Color Caprea Debility

"I was run down," writes Mr. Albert K [illegible] was dull a dushe[illegible]thy, appetite was poor, and I constantly suffered from rheumatism.

I found it hard to sleep, and felt worn out and tired all the time. Dr Hamilton's Pills made an instant change. I grew stronger, my blood was re-vitalized, rheumatism vanished. To-day I am healthy, happy and a Pills every respect.

You will never realize what good health means until you feel the quick vitalizing effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Every tired, overstrained, nervous man and woman should use this grand tonic regularly. Life will then be full of happiness and buoyant health. All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1, by mail if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

Brantford Men Visit Peterboro.

A party of well known Brantford gentlemen were in the city on Thanksgiving Day. They were Dr. Hart, W. R. Turnbull, W. Gibson, and M. McPherson, and they thoroughly enjoyed the holiday. The party took in our local Home and expressed themselves as well satisfied with everything they saw. They had only kind words to say of Peterboro which they regard as a place of great activity and much public spirit.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured.

with Local Applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials free.

AMERICAN DEBUT OF MR. JEROME

English Author and Humorist Delights His Audience with His Anecdotes and Sketches.

Mr. Jerome K. Jerome made his first appearance before an American audience at the Empire theater yesterday afternoon in a humorous recital, which consisted of anecdotes and sketches and some readings from his books.

There was a large gathering in the theater to greet Mr. Jerome, and it evidenced, naturally, a good deal of curiosity as to just what the English humorist would look like, and, in particular, what he would make of his own humor.

As to the first point, Mr. Jerome provided new proof of the fact that a man's ability to see the funny side of life need not necessarily be reflected in his face. A countenance of serious cast his proved to be, reluctant at all times in its play of expression and unalterably opposed to anything resembling a smile. Those near to the stage, however, could detect a boyish twinkle about the eye now and then.

A deliberateness of movement and a certain stiffness of carriage were noticeable also, agreeing well with the quiet, matter of fact tone of the speaker's voice. As might have been expected, this was just the sort of personality to express happily the dry humor of the thoughts with which Mr. Jerome's writings are filled, and the recital of such bits as the author selected at random for an hour and a half proved, therefore, delightful and kept the audience in a constant ripple of laughter.

Mr. Jerome quoted most freely from his later writings—especially from "The Seconds Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," although he scored also with such well known sketches as "Mr. and Mrs. Sparrow," and the always delightful account of Uncle Podger's adventures during the hanging of the picture.

There were several capital hits in passing at the "alleged American conscience" and the American frailty as to knowing it all, and the house was especially tickled when Mr. Jerome spoke of the great number of charming American wives he knew abroad, ventured to wonder why the corresponding American husbands didn't transplant their business interests so as to see something of them.

The above is taken from the New York Herald of Oct. 18th. The press of New York and Boston are unanimous in their appreciative comments on Mr. Jerome's humorous recital. He will be here on Nov. 1st. Plan of hall at Ormond & Walsh's.

FASHIONABLE GATHERING

Mrs. (Dr.) Halliday, Water St., Entertains at a Large "At Home."

About sixty of Peterboro's leading ladies of local society, enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. (Dr.) Halliday yesterday afternoon.

The hostess, Mrs. Halliday, assisted by Mrs. Vernon, received her guests in the spacious dining room, which by a judicious and plentiful decoration of pink chrysanthemums, was turned into a veritable scene of beauty. The large drawing room, was most tastefully embellished by a free use of yellow chrysanthemums, which decorated beautifully with the permanent rich but homelike toute ensemble of this most comfortable apartment.

After the guests attending the "at home," had duly met the hostess and exchanged the customary pleasantries, they intermingled throughout the large hall and drawing rooms. Refreshments were served in the back drawing room, the hostess' assistants being Mrs. (Rev.) J. C. Davidson, Mrs. P. Campbell, Miss Drummond, of Toronto, and the Misses Edith Parker and Hanks Clementi.

The beautiful floral decorations and tables, lighted by silver candlesticks, surrounded by the many fair faces of Peterboro's society, presented a striking scene of beauty. Among those present, might be mentioned, Mrs. J. C. Davidson, Mrs. E. B. Edwards, Mrs. W. H. Hill, Mrs. J. H. McClellan, Mrs. P. Campbell, Mrs. Mutton, Miss Clementi, Mrs. Crane, Mrs. Grubb, Miss B. Hall, Miss Moore, the Misses Barbee, Mrs. A. Stevenson, Miss Hatton, Mrs. R. E. Wood, Miss Lundy, Miss A. Hall, Mrs. D. J. Lundy, Miss Wilmot, Mrs. Sherwood, Mrs. W. J. Sherwood, Miss Rose, Mrs. Hammond, Miss Mulholland, Mrs. C. H. Clementi, the Misses Collins, with visitors from Toronto: Mrs. Rupert Bradburn, Mrs. Geo. Rubidge and others.

PRETTY MONTREAL GIRL

SAVED BY PE-RU-NA

SUFFERED DREADFULLY WITH PELVIC CATARRH.

ONE BOTTLE OF PE-RU-NA BROUGHT LONG-SOUGHT RELIEF.

MISS NELLIE SOUTH.

An English Woman's Letter.

Miss Nellie South, late of Manchester, Eng., writes from 86 Prince Arthur St., Moutreal, Can., as follows:

"Peruna has made a wonderful change in my life. It has brought me health and happiness.

"Since my seventeenth year I have had female complaint and irregularities. My general health suffered, I had pains in my back and lower limbs, my eyes were dim, and I became morose and unreasonable.

"Mother sought the advice of our family physician, who prescribed for me, but I grew no better under his treatment.

"Then read of Peruna and procured a bottle. This one bottle did more than all the doctor's medicine I had taken previously. I felt so much better and kept on taking it for six weeks with marked improvement in my health.

"I cannot express my gratitude. Peruna has been a great blessing to me."—Nellie South.

Pelvic Catarrh—The Base of Womankind.

What used to be called female diseases by the medical profession is now called pelvic catarrh.

It has been found by experience that catarrhal diseases of the pelvic organs are the cause of most cases of female diseases.

Dr. Hartman was among the first of America's greatest physicians to make this discovery. For forty years he has been treating diseases peculiar to women and long ago he reached the conclusion that a woman entirely free from catarrhal affection of these organs would not be subject to female diseases.

FEW WOMEN ARE ENTIRELY FREE FROM CATARRH.

He, therefore, began using Peruna for these cases and found it so admirably adapted to their permanent cure that Peruna has now become the most reliable remedy for female diseases ever known. Everywhere the women are using it and praising it. Peruna is not a palliative simply; it cures by removing the cause of female diseases.

Dr. Hartman has probably cured more women of female ailments than any other living physician. He makes these cures simply by prescribing Peruna.

We have on file thousands of testimonials from grateful women like the one given above. We can give our readers only a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic and grateful letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

WRITE DR. HARTMAN FOR FREE MEDICAL ADVICE.

If you suffer from pelvic catarrh, do not neglect it. Take Peruna at once. There is danger in delay. Peruna can be purchased at any first-class drug store at $1.00 per bottle.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Addres Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

Pretty Weller St. Wedding.

A very pretty scene was enacted at 116 Weller street, on Thursday night, when Miss Ida May Edmondson, daughter, of Mr. Henry Edmondson, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Maxwell Martyn, of Montreal. The groom is a son of the late Mr. Richard B. Martyn of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Crothers, in the presence of a large number of guests. The bridesmaid was Miss Iysa Martyn of Toronto, and Mr. W. T. Edmondson, brother of the bride, was best man. The bridal party, during the ceremony stood beneath a beautiful arch of smilax and ferns. The bride was charmingly gowned in pearl grey silk voilenne, en traine, with berthe of real lace and wide silk girdle and carried a large bouquet of white roses. After an extended wedding tour, the happy couple will reside in Montreal.

—Millbrook Reporter says: Mr. J. C. Kells was in Peterboro on Saturday. Mr. S. T. Medd, of Peterboro, was out on Tuesday. Mr. Robt. Fair, of Peterboro, was out on Thursday last. The Misses Georgie and Lottie Mowat, of Peterboro, were guests of Miss Ida Douglas last week.

A mother's love starts a man or woman on the right path. The right remedy at the right time fits a mother for the ordeal. Motherhood is often looked forward to with feelings of great dread by most women. At such a time when she is nervous, dyspeptic, irritable and in need of a uterine tonic—something which will calm the nervous system through the special organs, and a strength builder, she will find Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription just what is needed. Here is a medicine that has stood the test of a third of a century with approval, in that time it has sold more largely than any other remedy put up especially for women's weaknesses. It is guaranteed by the proprietors not to contain a particle of alcohol—which could only do harm to a sensitive system.

The World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N.Y., proprietors of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, offer a $500 reward for women who cannot be cured of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, biliousness and headache.

Dastardly Outrages At Cavanagh House

Clothes Lines Stripped and Garments Partly Stolen and Remainder Flung in Creek--Many Windows Broken by Rifle or Catapult.

That some ill-disposed ruffian or ruffians are determined to wreak vengeance, for some cause unknown, on Mr. Thomas Cavanagh is in evidence by the dastardly outrages committed on Friday night and Saturday morning.

On Friday night the long rows of newly washed clothes, were left hanging on the lines to the south or rear of the Cavanagh House. During the night some evil-minded person or persons, gained access to the platforms, over, and alongside the creek flowing by this old established hotel, and deliberately, not only stripped the washing off the lines, but threw the recently laundered articles into the creek. When the maids of the hotel, to whom a majority of the articles belonged, on Saturday morning unlocked the back doors of the hotel, they noticed that the lines were bare. The mere of absolute theft of the whole outfit at once presented itself; however a search of the premises, followed by a look at the creek disclosed the fact that these midnight thieves had taken away about half of the clothes and flung the remainder into the creek. The creek here, at this season of the year, is only from two or three inches to a foot in depth. As might be expected in a creek flowing by numerous stables and other unsavory buildings, the water is not of the cleanest. Those clothes recovered will all have to be re-laundered.

This act of theft and vandalism is particularly despicable, as most of the clothing stolen, or soiled belongs to hard working girls at the hotel.

Still another act, or series of acts, showing a mean system of spite was observed both Friday night and Saturday morning. On Friday night, two windows, one in the kitchen and one in a pantry, both to the south side of the hotel, were smashed. A large stone was found lying in the cupboard, sufficiently telling the story of how the window there was broken.

On Saturday morning, as the female employes of the hotel, under superintendence of Mrs. Cavanagh, were working in the kitchen, a window was smashed. No stone could be found this time. It was at once feared by the girls working in the kitchen, near the broken window, that a small rifle ball had passed through the window.

The following were the two windows broken Friday night, thereby arousing Mr. Cavanagh to a sense of the danger run not only to his property, but to those housed in the building. As all these were broken, were on the west side of the kitchen portion of the house, Mr. Harry Stapleton, for some two hours occupied a position in the large barn immediately to the west of the hotel to watch for further developments. Although Mr. Stapleton kept a close watch during the whole time, he could not detect any person acting suspiciously. However, as he was watching the windows, some 80 to 100 feet away, two more missiles, too small to be found, crashed through three more panes of glass.

The supposition is that maliciously disposed men or boys were using catapults from a distance.

This is a most outrageous state of affairs; that not only should property be systematically destroyed in broad daylight, but that four or five women be thoroughly terrorized. The employes were absolutely afraid to work in the kitchen, fearing that the missiles smashing the glass might be bullets. The police now have the matter in hand, and it is altogether likely that arrests will follow.

Should a conviction result, a most serious penalty should be inflicted to warn people that such malicious acts will not be tolerated or done with impunity.

PROMINENT MAN GONE

Death of Mr. Geo. Campbell, Ex. M.P.P. of East Durham.

Yesterday afternoon there passed away at his residence, about one mile south of Millbrook, in the township of Cavan, a gentleman well known in this and surrounding counties.

About one o'clock yesterday afternoon, Mr George Campbell, treasurer of the township of Cavan, passed away, somewhat unexpectedly, at the age of 62 years.

Mr. Campbell was a man universally respected by the very many people in Peterboro, Northumberland, Durham, and other counties who knew him. Some few years ago, he was elected member of the Provincial Legislature, for the county of East Durham. For many years, the deceased very ably filled the position of reeve of Cavan. He was also warden of the United Counties of Durham and Northumberland.

Mr. Campbell leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter to mourn his loss. A sad feature of Mr. Campbell's sudden death is that one of his sons and his daughter are both in Toronto, they having gone to that city for Thanksgiving Day.

The deceased is a brother-in-law of the late Mr. William Walsh, of Ormond & Walsh. He was a son of the late Mr. Thomas Campbell, a large land and mill owner, at Garden Hill, township of Cavan. The funeral arrangements are not yet fully complete, but will be announced in tomorrow's issue.

INSISTS HE IS THE EMPEROR

Jacques Lebaudy, Refuses $200,000 Because He is Not Addressed as Ruler of Sahara.

Paris, October 30.—Jacques Lebaudy refused to have any communication with anyone who fails to address him as the Emperor of Sahara. It is said that he recently refuses to accept a sum amounting to $200,000, which his two cousins, partners in a sugar refinery in Ancona, wished to remit to him because they declined to address him as His Majesty, Jacques I., First Emperor of Sahara.

SPANKED HER BOY

"Boy" was 82 and Mother Only 111 Years.

Red Bank, Penn., October 28.—Mrs. Betsy Freeman, of this place, never heard of Dr. Wm. Osler until today. When her friends, who had assembled to celebrate the one hundred and eleventh anniversary of her birth, told her of him she laughed until the rafters fairly shook, and then declared that she was only sorry she did not know him before; then she would have sent an invitation to Osler to attend.

Then, just to show her guests that she is still a young woman, she called her youngest son William to her side. She informed "Willie" that he had been a naughty boy and forthwith proceeded to lay him across her knee and administer a sound spanking. "Willie" is 82 years old.

Friends and neighbors for miles around assembled at the home to help the old lady celebrate. Mrs. Freeman is in the best of health and appears no older than a woman of 50. She knew every person who was present, and addressed them by their first names. Her faculties are unimpaired and her greatest pleasure in life is reading her Bible, which she does for hours at a time. She has memorized a great part of the book.

BIG YIELD OF CANADA WHEAT

WILL OUTDO THE STATES

In a Few Years—Wonderful Production of Cereals.

Winnipeg, October 29.—Western Canada expects to make her record crop this year, in quantity and quality. The experts of the Grain Growers' Association estimate the total at 85,000,000 bushels of wheat and 40,000,000 bushels of oats; and the greater part of the wheat, according to their judgment, will grade No. 1 hard and No. 1 northern. Other authorities, more sanguine, expect 100,000,000 bushels of wheat, and some prophets are predicting 110,000,000 bushels of wheat and from 65,000,000 to 75,000,000 bushels of oats. The prospects for good prices were never better. There is no crop failure anywhere in Canada. Usually there are bad spots, owing to local conditions—because of too much rain or too little—but this year in an area of 1,000 by 400 miles the yield seems to be even and perfect. The weather conditions have been continuously favorable, from seed time to harvest, and a few days longer will see the entire crop in the elevators or on its way to market.

Labor is very scarce. Field hands have been receiving $2.50 a day and their board, and if any wheat is lost it will be because the harvesters were not able to gather it.

Dr. William Saunders, Director of Experimental Farms for the Government, says that he has been over the entire Dominion, and that the crops of this season exceed all expectations as well as precedents. He believes they will furnish the greatest advertisement that the lands of Canada have ever had, and will bring in twice as many investors and homesteaders as came this year. Dr. Saunders believes that Canada will shortly be able to furnish Great Britain with all the wheat and flour she needs and release the English people from their dependence upon the United States in meats as well as in breadstuffs. He says:

"Were one-fourth of the land said to be suitable for cultivation in Manitoba and the Territories under crop with wheat annually, and the average production equal to that of Manitoba for the last ten years, the total crop would be 812,000,000 bushels. This would be ample to supply the home demand for 30,000,000 of inhabitants (supposing the population of Canada should by that time reach that figure), and meet the present requirements of Great Britain three times over. This estimate deals only with a portion of the West, and leaves the large Eastern provinces out of consideration altogether. From this it would seem possible that Canada may be in a position, within comparatively few years, after supplying all home demands to furnish Great Britain with all the wheat and flour she requires and leave a surplus for other countries."

Canada ranks tenth in the list of wheat-growing nations. The United States stand first, with an average of 650,000,000 bushels, Russia second with 450,000,000 bushels, France third with 326,000,000 bushels; then come India with 250,000,000 bushels, Hungary with 175,000,000 bushels, Italy with 160,000,000 bushels, Germany with 140,000,000 bushels, Argentine Republic with 125,000,000 bushels, Spain with 100,000,000 bushels, and then Canada. This year's estimates, if they prove true, are likely to lift Canada from the tenth to the eighth notch in the list, and if Dr. Saunders' predictions are well founded the present generation may see a bigger wheat crop harvested in Canada than in the United States. The tendency south of the border is to break up the wheat fields and adopt diversified farming, because it is more certain and pays better profits, but wheat will be king of Canada for a half a century.

Canada has the davantage of having her wheat fields cultivated almost exclusively by experienced farmers, while the early settlers upon the wheat lands of the United States were a heterogeneous mass from all corners of christendom, often ignorant of the proper methods of farming, often ill supplied with tools and implements, and frequently lacking the proper kind of seed. Canada, on the other hand, has been able to profit by the experiences of forty years of wheat farming upon the North-Western prairies of the United States. Seventy-five per cent. of the immigrants who are taking up land here are up-to-date, well-to-do, educated farmers, familiar with the chemistry of the soil and the most profitable methods of cultivation. They are not wearing out their lands by planting every year, but are preserving their fertility by summer fallowing, rotation of crops and by observing other principles of the agricultural science. This means a great deal. It will count several bushels to the acre for several years.

During the fiscal year of 1904 about 56,000,000 bushels of wheat were shipped to England from Canada. The exports have been increasing with remarkable rapidity. In 1899, only fifteen years ago, the total was only 4,000,000 bushels. Canada consumes about 30,000,000 bushels in her local market, and its requirements will be easily supplied by ordinary farmers in the Eastern provinces, so that the great volume of grain which comes from the Western prairies will be available for export. This question is receiving serious attention on the other side of the Atlantic, and last year W. P. Wood, president of the London Corn Traders' Association, spent several weeks in Canada, investigating all phases of the situation, for the purpose of making a report to the Board of Trade of Great Britain. Marshall Stevens, manager of the Manchester Ship Canal, was also here on a similar errand, and will make a report to Parliament on "The Security of Our Food Supply in Time of War." Neither Mr. Wood nor Mr. Stevens has published the results of his inquiries—at least, if they have done so the reports have not reached Canada—but they may be expected at any time.

It is not believed, however, that either gentleman was expected to make any practical recommendations, but rather to secure information as to present conditions and possibilities for the education of public sentiment. Mr. Stevens is the author of an elaborate scheme for the benefit of Canadian wheat growers. He has recommended that the British Government erect a number of enormous elevators at Liverpool, Manchester, Southampton, Plymouth, London and other British ports for the free storage of Canadian wheat, awaiting sale for consumption. The British live almost from hand to mouth. At present the visible supply of breadstuffs in Great Britain does not often exceed twenty days' consumption, one of the most critical situations that can be contemplated with a foreign war in prospect. He argues that, in case of war with a strong naval power, the British people will be liable to starvation, and points out the advantages of keeping two or three months supply of breadstuffs in storage at government expense.

LOCAL DEER SLAYERS

Many Peterboro Nimrods Leave Today Abunting.

Probably the exodus from Peterboro this fall, is the largest in many years. In addition to the many sportsmen setting forth for our northern lakes to-day, the following well known exponents of rod and rifle, leave for Parry Sound in a special car, viz.—Messrs. J. E. A. Fitzgerald, Milne Hamilton, George Dawson, of Montreal; Dickson Bell, J. D. Collins, Robert Kingan, J. B. Pentland, C. Curtis, Sam Ray, Joseph Gibson, Arthur Head, and L. Steele, of Lakefield. Mr. Douglas Hastie will be the chef.

The Sucker Lake party consisting of Messrs. J. B. Larocque, R. Shepherd, Wm. Gere, Fred Ruechea, Walter Greenwood, Geo. Williamson, W. J. McCallum, Archie Larocque and John Alexander, leave to-day for their usual haunts.

Messrs. Herb. Kendry and Gus White are going to Long Lake. They will join a party of friends from Lindsay, and expect to have great sport.

Messrs. William Snowden and his son Harold, now at Gold Lake Fishing Lodge, did not return Saturday, as expected. The deer season opening so soon proved too great an attraction. They will not return till the end of this week. Their party will then be augmented by Messrs. Thos. Rutherford, George Matthews, Herbert Snowden, John Stanger, Frank White and others.

NEWLY INCORPORATED

Messrs. Thorn & Co., With the Toronto Branch, Now Incorporated.

The last issue of the Ontario Gazette contains an announcement of local interest, as it effects one of Peterboro's young and lusty business concerns. The notice, in question, refers to the incorporation of the Thorn Plumbing Co., whose large perpendicular and illuminated sign on Simcoe street attracts much attention. The Thorn Company is capitalized at $20,000. The directors of the company are men well known in the city; Messrs. J. L. Thorn, A. J. La Fay, F. W. Jenkins, A. J. Jackson and F. G. Garbutt. The newly incorporated company will take over and handle the business of Thorn & Co., plumbers. The increased capital that will thus be available, must necessarily result, in this growing business rapidly increasing, and enable the firm to secure large contracts on more advantageous terms.

Messrs. Thorn & Co., are thoroughly practical men, having a large establishment at 517 Queen street west, Toronto. This, as well as the Peterboro business, will be absorbed and managed by the new company.

MR. HUMBER ARRIVES

Immense Loss Sustained by Georgian Bay Lumber Company.

Mr. Orlando Humber, well known in this city both personally and as a prominent lumberman and mill-wright, has arrived in the city, having returned from the Georgian Bay Lumber districts.

Mr. Humber has been engaged for several months as manager of the Georgian Bay Lumber Co. His company met with a very heavy loss a few days ago in taking out a raft containing some 41,000 logs from Georgian Bay. A very heavy storm arose, causing the booms encircling and confining the logs to part and scatter abroad.

It is estimated that not one-half of them will be recovered, although five large tugs have been working and a large number of men employed in attempts to gather the scattered timber. The daily expenses of the company in this work of recovery will amount to about $600 a day.

Mr. Humber will spend some time in the city.

LOCAL STRIKE

Chas. Gunsolus Has Lockout in His Hunter Street Shop.

It was reported yesterday that Mr. Charles Gunsolus, the Hunter St. saddler and harness maker is up against a strike. It seems that work has recently been somewhat slack, and whilst Mr. Gunsolus is the only union harness maker in the city, he could not keep on the full staff of employes as full pay. On Saturday, having a demand made for higher wages, Mr. Gunsolus explained matters, and offered to let the men draw lots to see which would stay as he could not keep the full staff at present wages, just now. This was refused, so Mr. Gunsolus paid off the men that night.

It is to be hoped that an amicable settlement will be effected.

Prov. Government Set Up At Moscow

Formal Insurrection by Political Parties There ---Revolutionists are Determined to Force an Armed Conflict.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 29.—Serious rioting occurred at Reval last night. This morning the city is ablaze. The theater and spirit shops are burning.

Moscow, Oct. 29.—At a meeting of delegates representing the different political parties it has been decided to unite in the establishment of a government and to act independently of the imperial authorities.

Irkutsk, Siberia, Oct. 29.—The railway men on the Trans-Baikal line have struck.

Libau, Oct. 29.—All the schools here are closed.

Tiflis, Oct. 29.—There is a general strike of every class here. Business is at a standstill. The population is nervous.

Krementchug, Oct. 29.—The municipal council has petitioned the Government to remove the Cossacks from the city.

Gomel, Russia, Oct. 29.—The strikers here to-day threw a bomb at the chief of police while he was driving through the principal thoroughfare. His carriage was wrecked, and the chief and two Cossacks, who were escorting him, were badly injured.

Skopin, Province of Riazan, Russia, Oct. 29.—The local Zemstvo is appealing by telegraph for relief for the famine sufferers. Flours costs four cents a pound.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 29.—Telegraphic communication in this city has ceased. St. Petersburg is entirely isolated from Moscow.

Briansk, Russia, Oct. 29.—A mob broke all the windows of the railway station to-day, and drove out the telegraph operators.

Ostroff, Oct. 29.—Railroad communication here has been stopped. No grain is moving, and no papers are being printed.

CAPITAL IN A PANIC.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 29.—A condition bordering upon panic prevails here to-day. Business is completely suspended. Soldiers are everywhere in the streets, and bloodshed on a large scale is feared. The Government is trying to appease this inflamed populace, but the revolutionists seem determined to force an armed conflict. The last railway link connecting the capital with the outside world was broken last night, when the Finland Railway discontinued service between St. Petersburg and the Finnish border, but communication by water is still open. The cabs are still operating, although the post-offices is closed, and the only newspapers to appear today were the Official Messenger and the army organs, which printed directions for the military.

REVAL IN FLAMES.

From all over the empire, the story is the same—work stopped, no newspapers printed, schools closed and the business life of the people suspended. The cry of the masses is always the same—political liberty. The military everywhere are in possession; the inhabitants are terror-stricken. Many cities are in darkness, and at Reval a mob began work last night. The rioters sacked the shops, and this morning, the city is on fire. The theater and spirit shops are burning. Kharkoff is under martial law.

The most startling news, however, comes from Moscow, where all the political parties have joined in a resolution to set up the provisional government. Details, however, are lacking, and the exact progress of this attempt at formal insurrection is not known.

DEMONSTRATION AT FUNERAL.

Kharkoff, Russia, Oct. 29.—There was a great demonstration at the burial to-day of the fifteen victims of the recent rioting, but the students and workmen preserved order. The procession marched through the streets without any clergy, and singing the Marseillaise and dirge music. At the cemetery revolutionary speeches were made over the graves, which were adorned with red flags. The troops and police were powerless to interfere. Subsequently partial law was declared.

REVOLVERS FOR STRIKERS.

Warsaw, Oct. 29.—Thirty thousand infantry and 5,000 cavalry, with 98 guns, have been collected in this city in readiness to stifle any disturbances. The military at noon dispersed a meeting of the employes of the Vienna Railway, who had gathered to discuss the situation. A battalion of engineers controls the telephone service. The employes of the suburban railways and suburban street railways joined the strikers to-day.

The revolutionary leaders are reported to have distributed thousands of revolvers to the strikers. The only way of leaving Warsaw now is by the steamboats down the Vistula to the Prussian frontier. A proclamation establishing full martial law will be issued in the course of the day.

Infantry are camping in the streets of Lodz and all traffic there has stopped.

MISS MOORE'S MARRIAGE

Well Known and Popular Peterboro Society Girl Weds.

Much interest has been taken in local society and political circles during the past few days in the recent marriage of Miss Mary Crawford Moore, eldest daughter of Mr. W. D. Moore, at Fernie, B.C.

The Toronto Globe devotes quite a long space to this fashionable marriage, as both the high contracting parties are known in that city.

The wedding was celebrated on Oct. 18th, at the residence of Mr. George Lindsay, K.C., Fernie. The bride, Miss Moore, was married to Mr. Edward Foster Ambery, son of the late Dean Ambery, of Trinity College, Toronto. Rev. E. R. Bartlett, of Christ church, performed the ceremony, in the beautifully decorated drawing room, surrounded by the many friends of all concerned.

These fulfilling the envied duties of bridesmaid and "best man," were respectively, Miss Macoun of Ottawa, and Mr. Rochfort.

As Mrs. Lindsay, was unavoidably absent, Mrs. McEvoy, acted as hostess, in her usual charming manner, receiving the guests and fulfilling the duties of hostess.

After the very pretty ceremony was over, a dainty wedding breakfast was served. Many congratulatory and amusing impromptu speeches enlivened this most charming dejeuner, Mr. Lindsay, in a very happy speech, proposing the health of the bride.

As the bride, after wedding festivities were concluded, dressed in a most becoming tailor made suit of navy blue, with hat to match, was leaving the house to catch the train, she and her husband were greeted with a shower of colored confetti, mingling with the outburst of hopes for their happiness.

The happy couple went to Spokane and other far western points, for their wedding tour. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Ambery will reside on Baker avenue, Fernie.

Owing to the prominent places in Peterboro society held by Mr. and Mrs. Moore, and the prominent position occupied in political circles by Mr. Moore, it is needless to say that many letters of congratulation have been sent to Mrs. Ambery.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES.

ITALIAN ENVOY NOW IN MONTREAL

He Comes as Special Commissioner of Commerce for Italy.

FAVORED NATION TREATY

Italy is Anxious to Secure Admission to Canada for Her Wines.

Montreal, October 30.—Marquis Doria, special commercial commissioner for Italy, has arrived in the city, and taken up his residence in Philips square. He is working in connection with Mr. Jerome Internoscia, the acting Consul-General for Italy.

His special mission is to inquire into and report upon the possibility of developing trade, to find out in what direction the interchange of commodities may be advantageous and profitable, and to prepare the way as far as he can for the framing of a treaty between Canada and Italy by which the most favored nation treatment may be arranged between the two countries. To this end he has been placed in communication with the authorities in Ottawa.

Italy feels that such a treaty would be greatly to their advantage in one important export at least, that is by the extension to her wines of the same tariff privileges accorded to French wines. At the present time the Italian wines pay practically twice as much as those of France. Italy is prepared, of course, to make suitable return in her markets for such a privilege. In the commercial treaty between Britain and Italy the favored nation clause exists, but this does not extend to Canada. Of course such a convention cannot be brought about at once, but Marquis Doria hopes that within a few months he will have made such progress that when Count Mazza returns from his two months leave of absence in Italy, or a new Consul-General takes his place, that things will be well under way towards the realization of this object.

—A large number of enthusiastic Lakefield nimrods will leave to-day in quest of the elusive buck and doe.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 270 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $300,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $30,000.00 to $50,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividend and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.00 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 40 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1901 produced $15,811.50 per hour, every hour, day and night. Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $20,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on D. C. stock so they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

How Consumption Starts

Tired When You Waken—Languid All Day—Nerves Worn Out —Soap All Gone

Your limbs feel "draggy" and excessively weak. A night's sleep seldom brings satisfying rest. Continuous headaches, exhaustion and nervous sensations destroy your health. Soon every spark of vitality is used up. Then you catch tuberculosis.

Start to-day. Build up, get new nerve force, and overcome this process of decay. Use Ferrozone, which physicians consider the most vitalizing, uplifting tonic ever made.

Think of the instant effect—at once the appetite increases, delightful color in the cheeks proves that rich, red blood is being circulated. Tired muscles are invigorated, flesh and weight are added. Nerve force develops, and bounding, joyous health is finally established.

This is certain—Ferrozone restores failing strength from any cause. The experience of Mr. Thos. Lloyd, of Oshawa, Ont., proves this.

"Household worries and nerve troubles about exhausted my strength. I was weak and miserable. My cheeks lacked the color of health, and occasionally I had spells of rheumatism. Then my appetite fell off, and nothing could tempt me to eat. Worn-out feelings, chills and despondency filled my very being. I became anaemic and dwindled down to a shadow. Consumption was very near. Ferrozone put strength in my body with a rush. It built me up, strong, virile and happy, and I have been well ever since."

Ferrozone cures sickness by curing the real cause—lack of blood and nerve tone. It keeps people at their best—fit, ready and anxious for work. In 50c. boxes only, six for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

NIAGARA FALLS SPOLIATION

Appeals are pouring into the United States Government to save Niagara Falls from spoliation and perhaps destruction, that is, the American Fall. The Boston Transcript comments that as long as Niagara remains under state control it is in danger.

Next winter there will be a fresh effort to obtain control of this natural wonder for purely commercial purposes, destroying its matchless and far-famed grandeur and leaving only a ragged and unsightly chasm.

It is now stated that a compromise with the men who have been trying to steal the power of the cataract has been proposed. This is to the effect that the lower gorge shall be dammed to a height of a hundred feet, eliminating the rapids. It is estimated that such a work would supply 1,500,000 horse-power and that this would keep the predatory power companies quiet several years. But the rapids are a part of the spectacle, and such a concession would be likely to hasten the time when they would grab everything above and below.

It is up to the people of New York to take this matter in hand and enlist, as far as practicable, the power of the general government to help them. To make the result satisfactory it would be necessary to act in conjunction with the Dominion Government. To permit the attempted robbery of the Falls to succeed would be an international disgrace.

AN ALLOWANCE FOR THE WIFE

Miss Margaret Mather, in Chicago, a few days ago, before an audience of women, made a strong plea for "an allowance for the wife" and her argument was founded on such good reason that the justice and wisdom of it cannot be questioned. Miss Mather ascribes much of the family discord of the present day to the action of many husbands in refusing to allow their wives a regular and sufficient amount for the maintenance of the home and for their own personal wants. Wives who are thus curtailed in their finances often find it necessary to resort to the use of their husbands' credit in a secret manner. They borrow money from stores where they have accounts and the bills come to their husbands as purchases and are paid as such. Miss Mather says that many of the larger stores have regular arrangements for such contrivance with their women patrons.

Considered as a matter of abstract justice the wife's right to an allowance, both for the expenses of her household and for her own private use, is unquestionable. Such allowances necessarily must be governed by the income of the husband. If a matrimonial partnership is to be fairly conducted it should be quite proportionate to this. The wise wife who knows just what her husband's earnings are will arrange her expenditures accordingly. Aside from the question of justice it is poor business for a husband to be niggardly or careless in the matter of household finances. The husband who denies his wife money enough properly to conduct their home and for her own expenses is not "playing fair." Further, he is laying excellent foundations for domestic unhappiness. If the wife cannot secure from him the money she needs she is forced to get it, as Miss Mather says, through the surreptitious use of his credit. This necessitates the careful keeping of an unpleasant secret on the wife's part. It is a bad combination; frenzied financing was never meant for the home.

Many wives are undoubtedly extravagant in their tastes and wasteful in the use of money. Some husbands are probably justified in reserving for themselves exclusive control of the family purse strings. But it is an easy wager that the wife who spends more on her luxuries than the husband spends on his is the noteworthy exception. It requires only a few 10 cent cigars, a few luncheons, or a few games of billiards to cost a sum that many wives would be glad to have for a month's allowance. And some men drink besides. Altogether, the wives are right in demanding an allowance. If all husbands were wise there would be no need for such a demand.

Chicago Record-Herald.

The Chicago Record-Herald is a conspicuous example of the success with which the public rewards fearless non-partisanship in the columns of a great metropolitan daily paper. It is an independent newspaper, in which men and measures are invariably viewed wholly from the standpoint of the public good, and not from that of the interests of any particular political party. It is the very reverse of neutral—fearless and outspoken on all great questions of the day, but presenting its editorial opinion upon independent opinion and entirely regardless of political affiliations. Partisanship is barred as strictly from the news columns as from the editorial page. All political news is given without partisan coloring, thus enabling the reader to form correct conclusions for himself. In the ordinary partisan newspaper political news is usually colored to such an extent as to make it difficult if not impossible for the reader to secure a sound basis for intelligent judgment.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Robert Smith Knocked From His Bicycle by Street Car,

On Wednesday evening, shortly after quitting his work, Robert Smith a local bricklayer, had a narrow escape from death or mutilation. Smith, mounted on his bicycle, was wheeling down the G.T.R. tracks from Simcoe street to Charlotte street, on his way home. Just as he was about to cross the street railway tracks at Charlotte street crossing a street car struck the front wheel of his bicycle. Smith was thrown in front of the fender on his face and was dragged several feet before the car could be stopped. Fortunately the car had not got well under way or in all probability the chances are Smith would have been mangled under the wheels. Smith claims he did not see the approaching street car, owing to intervening of a passing conveyance between him and the car, particularly so as his attention was taken up avoiding the usual crowd of people returning home along this street at such an hour.

A trip around the world in 60 minutes at a mere trifle.

Scores upon scores of people are daily taking advantage of our very liberal and decidedly interesting offer.

Magnificently finished and exquisitely photo-color views in place of the oldtime and antiquated views of the past. A most pleasant and interesting hour to spend journeying around the globe viewing the places of greatest interest, most beautiful scenery, etc., at a mere trifle of cost through our liberal plan. These views illustrate some of the most noted places in the world—mountain scenery both in America and Europe—waterfalls and other famous natural phenomena, some of the world's most famous buildings, places of historical interest and places famous for beautiful architecture or beautiful natural scenery. This set is of the greatest educational value, presenting, as it does, such realistic likenesses of scenes and places that we all should know about. We want every household in this city to have one of these sets. Imagine yourself taken through the Orient, on a trip to California, through the world's Fair to see the splendid scenes as though you were right there on the spot. By a special process, a combination of lithographing and half-tone work, we are able to offer a collection of colored views from every part of the world in the most beautiful, natural and startling life-like color effects, which must be seen to be appreciated. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and beauty of these views. Come and see them. We want each and every household in this city to have a set of these.

It wasn't so very long ago that hundreds of thousands of people spent many pleasant hours with the stereoscope, but heretofore they were compelled to pay enormous prices for views, think of it, as high as 50c each for colored pictures. We sold thousands upon thousands of stereoscopic views, in colors, at 50c each in those days, but imagine each and every view had to be colored by hand. In the past few months we have had repeated demands for them, and being able to secure the latest and most beautiful colored views to furnish to the public at a ridiculously low price, we entered into the stereoscope plan on quite a large scale, and have taken immediate advantage of the International Art Association, who have spent an enormous amount of money to get out special color plates and have finally completed their end, namely: To place on the market thousands of magnificent stereoscopic views, the most beautiful, interesting and exciting scenes from every land, in the grandest and most exquisite natural colors.

Now we come to our great special offer. Read our plan carefully as it describes the stereoscope and tells how to secure the scope and views at almost no cost to you.

First the stereoscope. The Stereoscope is our world-famous "Aluminum Crystal Lens" Stereoscope. Genuine aluminum hood, bound with dark rich red velvet. Frame is of fine finished cherry wood with patent folding handle, folding underneath frame, and sliding bar. The lenses are extra fine quality, selected for clearness and brilliancy, 1¼ inches in diameter, ground from best quality glass and carefully adjusted. This Crystal Lens Aluminum "Scope" has won universal praise from lovers of the beautiful, and as a means of entertainment stands second to nothing.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—I took your Nervo Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the bowels, swelling of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. he cried passionately; "I want more than mere words."

"Oh, yes! I will indeed—to-morrow," she said, feeling curiously averse to yield, yet not willing to refuse.

"Good God! to-morrow! Was ever such answer given to a love? No; now—now, or I will think you only mock me!"

He caught her in his arms, and, holding her head against his shoulder, pressed his lips to her, in an intense passionate kiss, while she felt the wild throbbing of his heart against her own; but, long before he was willing to release her, she struggled so vehemently to get free, that he let her go.

"Clifford! Cousin!" she exclaimed, standing at a little distance, with crimson cheeks and heaving bosom, "you frighten me!"

"If you loved as I do, Nora! But you will! you will one day come and kiss me freely, voluntarily. Why, Nora! have I offended you so deeply?"

She made no reply, but burst into tears and fled from the room.

CHAPTER XII.

The days of Mrs. Ruthven's dangerous illness were the worst and most distressful Lady Dorrington had ever known. She was really anxious about the sufferer, and she was infinitely annoyed by Marsden's unfeeling indifference. Except for the one hurried visit, he was content with a formal daily bulletin; nor did he seem much concerned if, by any accident, that was delayed. It was disgracefully heartless as an abstract fact, and it would have a fatal effect upon Marsden's chances when it came to the knowledge of Mrs. Ruthven.

What was Clifford thinking of? Had he discovered a mine? or had the reports which had reached Lady Dorrington, and been believed by her, as to his extravagance and embarrassement, been exaggerated? He was too trying! What was keeping him in London at such a time? Could there be any truth in the absurd idea that Nora L'Estrange was the attraction?—a mere nobody—slenderly dowered, and nothing remarkable in the way of beauty.

However, as time went by, Mrs. Ruthven held her ground. There was more tenacity in the fragile-looking, slender little woman than people thought, and at length she was able to sit up for a few hours, to listen to Lady Dorrington when she read the more interesting paragraphs of the newspapers aloud, and finally to read her own letters. But still, there was no intention on the part of Marsden, apparently, of coming to offer his congratulations in person. He wrote kindly and cordially, but in a strictly friendly tone, explaining that he was busy arranging his somewhat entangled affairs, and the preliminaries necessary for letting Eversleigh on a lease of several years.

This letter was in itself a severe blow. It was, however, as nothing compared to one received next day from the watchful Captain Shirley. After expressing his delight at hearing of her progress toward recovery, his regret at not being on such terms with Lord and Lady Dorrington that he might venture to run down and see her, he informed his esteemed correspondent he could now assure her that Marsden was positively engaged to Miss L'Estrange. He was with her and her step-mother every day, and all day. Finally he (Shirley) had been in a celebrated jeweler's shop in Bond street, where his attention was caught by an unusually fine ring, the design being two hearts united—one of rubies, the other of diamonds. The shopman said it was, he fancied, an engagement-ring, and made to order. He had scarcely finished examining it when Marsden came in, and after exchanging a word or two with him, went to the counter and asked if his order had been executed, whereupon this very ring was handed to him.

The next day Shirley had called on Mrs. L'Estrange, and was admitted, when he saw the identical ring on Miss L'Estrange's left third finger. There was but one inference to be drawn.

When Mrs. Ruthven read these lines she felt as if something snapped in her brain. Her heart beat to suffocation, and her imagination presented her with a confused, broken, shadowy mass of pictures from the past.

Was this the result of all Marsden's implied tenderness and admiration? Had he blinded her keen eyes, and deceived her sharp observation? He should pay dear—dear. And that careless, candid girl, whose easy indifference was absolutely insolent, whose comparative poverty and obscurity ought to have been a barrier to her advancement, was preferred before her wealth and beauty and carefully cultivated grace. It was too maddening. If she could destroy both, she would.

And how every one would talk! She had been so sure of becoming Mrs. Clifford Marsden, of Eversleigh Manor—every one knew that the marriage was expected—and now to be deceived, cheated, deserted, for a mere insignificant, half-developed creature! Mrs. Ruthven felt murderous. Her head was dizzy, she passed a terrible night, and next day the doctor was sent for in hot haste, as his patient showed every symptom of a relapse, and before twelve hours were over, she was rambling incoherently in a high fever.

She must have sustained a mental shock of some description, the doctor said, but no one could surmise what had caused it. Mrs. Ruthven had had sufficient foresight, feeling terribly ill, to tear the letter into minute fragments, and burn them, and from her speech little could be gathered save that she repeatedly accused Shirley and others of stealing her jewels.

This relapse was a great additional trouble to [illegible] was at her wits' end to discover its origin.

"Some of those horrible letters, no doubt," she confided to her husband. "I wish she never had had them; at such a time the absence of some confidential attendant is very awkward. You see, we know nothing of her former life and connections."

Still the wealthy widow held on surprisingly, but after this second attack, recovery was very slow, and the doctors complained of want of vitality.

All this time, in gray foggy London, Marsden's wooing prospered, and Nora grew quite accustomed to his daily presence.

He was himself cautious and self-restrained. He took care not again to startle her by such a passionate outburst as had disturbed her on the day she had accepted him. He watched with infinite care and tact his opportunity for winning a caress, and flattered himself he was daily advancing in her affection, and becoming more necessary, yet there came at intervals torturing spasms of doubt, when it was borne in upon him that he was only liked, endured, and slightly feared, such moments made him savage, exacting, unreasonable. He strove hard to resist these moods, knowing well how much of what he had built up with infinite care they undid.

Through all, Nora was so sweet, so patient, so compliant, that he grew more passionately fond of her day by day, even while he longed for her to show him some caprices, some little tyrannies indicative of pleasure in her sense of power over him. She did not love him yet—not yet—but she would be true to him, and love would come.

Gold Bug Stock

Has been withdrawn from the market by the Company. There is none of it for sale except a small block on which I have an option. This stock I am placing at 25 cents per share. 100 shares will cost you $25.00. In my judgment it will sell for 60 cents per share on the open market inside of 90 days. The papers of Oregon say that the rich find of ore in the Gold Bug mine is the greatest sensation known in the State in many months. Hon. George A. Newman, Assistant adjutant General of Iowa, has just been to Rumpler, visited the Gold Bug, bought heavily of the stock, and on his return tells me it has the finest ore and is the best looking property he saw any place in the West.

I give Bank references, the very best. I sell every share of this stock on honor. If you want 100 shares send $25.00 to the Mechanics' Savings Bank, Des Moines, telling them to turn the money over to me when I deliver the stock, to be sent to you. If you want 1,000 shares send $250. Everything about the Gold Bug is legitimate. It is now one of the richest mines of the North-West. We think that the first dividends will be paid in January or February, 1906, and you will see this stock selling at $1.00 per share on the open market in less than one year. Five strong veins, much of the ore literally sprinkled with free gold. Let me tell you about it more in detail. Address,

BLOOD DISEASES CURED

Drs. K. & K. Established 25 Years.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.

Before Treatment.

After Treatment.

He was surprised at how the sores healed. I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swelling of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores began to heal, I became hopeful, I continued the treatment for three months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you think proper.

We treat Nervous Debility, Varicocele, Stricture, Blood Poison, Blood and Skin Diseases, Urinary, Bladder and Kidney Complaints of men and women.

READER Are you a victim? Have you lost hope? Are you intending to marry? Has your blood been diseased? Have you any weakness? Our New Method Treatment will cure you. What it has done for others it will do for you. CONSULTATION FREE. No matter who has treated you, write for an honest opinion Free of Charge. Charges reasonable. BOOKS FREE—"The Golden Monitor" (Illustrated), on Diseases of Men. Sealed Book on "Diseases of Women" Free.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT. Everything confidential. Question list and cost of treatment FREE.

he cried passionately; "I want more than mere words."

"Oh, yes! I will indeed—to-morrow," she said, feeling curiously anxious to yield, yet not liking to refuse.

"Good God! to-morrow! Was ever such answer given to a love? No; not—now, or I will think you only mock me!"

H caught her in his arms, and, holding her head against his shoulder, pressed his lips to her, in an intense passionate kiss, while she felt the wild throbbing of his heart against her own; but, long before he was willing to release her, she struggled so vehemently to get free, that he let her go.

"Clifford! Cousin!" she exclaimed, standing at a little distance, with crimson cheeks and heaving bosom, "you frighten me!"

"If you loved as I do, Nora! But you will! you will one day come and kiss me freely, voluntarily. Why, Nora! have I offended you so deeply?"

She made no reply, but burst into tears and fled from the room.

CHAPTER XII.

The days of Mrs. Ruthven's dangerous illness were the worst and most distressful Lady Dorrington had ever known. She was really anxious about the sufferer, and she was infinitely annoyed by Marsden's unfeeling indifference. Except for the one hurried visit, he was content with a formal daily bulletin; nor did he seem much concerned if, by any accident, that was delayed. It was disgracefully heartless as an abstract fact, and it would have a fatal effect upon Marsden's chances when it came to the knowledge of Mrs. Ruthven.

What was Clifford thinking of? Had he discovered a mine? or had the reports which had reached Lady Dorrington, and been believed by her, as to his extravagance and embarrassment, been exaggerated? He was too trying! What was keeping him in London at such a time? Could there be any truth in the absurd idea that Nora L'Estrange was the attraction?—a mere nobody—slenderly dowered, and nothing remarkable in the way of beauty.

However, as time went by, Mrs. Ruthven held her ground. There was more tenacity in the fragile-looking, slender little woman than people thought, and at length she was able to sit up for a few hours, to listen to Lady Dorrington when she read the most interesting paragraphs of the newspapers aloud, and finally to read her own letters. But still, there was no intention on the part of Marsden, apparently, of coming to offer his congratulations in person. He wrote kindly and cordially, but in a strictly friendly tone, explaining that he was busy arranging his somewhat entangled affairs, and the preliminaries necessary for letting Eversleigh on a lease of several years.

This letter was in itself a severe blow. It was, however, as nothing compared to one received next day from the watchful Captain Shirley. After expressing his delight at hearing of her progress toward recovery, his regret at not being on such terms with Lord and Lady Dorrington that he might venture to run down and see her, he informed his esteemed correspondent he could now assure her that Marsden was positively engaged to Miss L'Estrange. He was with her and her step-mother every day, and all day. Finally he (Shirley) had been in a celebrated jeweler's shop in Bond street, where his attention was caught by an unusually fine ring, the design being two hearts united—one of rubies, the other of diamonds. The shopman said it was, he fancied, an engagement-ring, and made to order. He had scarcely finished examining it when Marsden came in, and after exchanging a word or two with him, went to the counter and asked if his order had been executed, whereupon this very ring was handed to him.

The next day Shirley had called on Mrs. L'Estrange, and was admitted, when he saw the identical ring on Miss L'Estrange's left third finger. There was but one inference to be drawn.

When Mrs. Ruthven read these lines she felt as if something snapped in her brain. Her heart beat to suffocation, and her imagination presented her with a confused, broken, shadowy mass of pictures from the past.

Was this the result of all Marsden's implied tenderness and admiration? Had he blinded her keen eyes, and deceived her sharp observation? He should pay dear—dear. And that careless, candid girl, whose easy indifference was absolutely insolent, whose comparative poverty and obscurity ought to have been a barrier to her advancement, was preferred before her wealth and beauty and carefully cultivated grace. It was too maddening. If she could destroy both, she would.

And how every one would talk! She had been so sure of becoming Mrs. Clifford Marsden, of Eversleigh Manor—every one knew that the marriage was expected—and now to be deceived, cheated, deserted, for a mere insignificant, half-developed creature! Mrs. Ruthven felt murderous. Her head was dizzy, she passed a terrible night, and next day the doctor was sent for in hot haste, as his patient showed every symptom of a relapse, and before twelve hours were over, she was rambling incoherently in a high fever.

She must have sustained a mental shock of some description, the doctor said, but no one could surmise what had caused it. Mrs. Ruthven had had sufficient foresight, feeling terribly ill, to tear the letter into minute fragments, and burn them, and from her speech little could be gathered save that she repeatedly accused Shirley and others of stealing her jewels.

This relapse was a great addition[illegible] Eversleigh. She was at her wits' end to discover its origin.

"Some of those horrible letters, no doubt," she confided to her husband. "I wish she never had had them, as such a time the absence of some confidential attendant is very awkward. You see, we know nothing of her former life and connections."

Still the wealthy widow held on surprisingly, but after this second attack, recovery was very slow, and the doctors complained of want of vitality.

All this time, in gray foggy London, Marsden's wooing prospered, and Nora grew quite accustomed to his daily presence.

He was himself cautious and self-restrained. He took care not again to startle her by such a passionate outburst as had disturbed her on the day she had accepted him. He watched with infinite care and tact his opportunity for winning a caress, and flattered himself he was daily advancing in her affection, and becoming more necessary, yet there came at intervals torturing spasms of doubt, when it was borne in upon him that he was only liked, endured, and slightly feared; such moments made him savage, exacting, unreasonable. He strove hard to resist these moods, knowing well how much of what he had built up with infinite care they undid.

Through all, Nora was so sweet, so patient, so compliant, that he grew more passionately fond of her day by day, even while he longed for her to show him some caprices, some little tyrannies indicative of pleasure in her sense of power over him. She did not love him yet—not yet—but she would be true to him, and love would come.

Has been withdrawn from the market by the Company. There is none of it for sale except a small block on which I have an option. This stock I am placing at 25 cents per share. 100 shares will cost you $25.00. In my judgment it will sell for 60 cents per share on the open market inside of 90 days. The papers of Oregon say that the rich find of ore in the Gold Bug mine is the greatest sensation known in the State in many months. Hon. George A. Newman, Assistant adjutant General of Iowa, has just been to Sumpter, visited the Gold Bug, bought heavily of the stock, and on his return tells me it has the finest ore and is the best looking property he saw any place in the West.

I give bank references, the very best. I sell every share of this stock on honor. If you want 100 shares send $25.00 to the Mechanics' Savings Bank, Des Moines, telling them to turn the money over to me when I deliver the stock, to be sent to you. If you want 1,000 shares send $250. Everything about the Gold Bug is legitimate. It is now one of the richest mines of the North-West. We think that the first dividends will be paid in January or February, 1906, and you will see this stock selling at $1.00 per share on the open market in less than one year. Five strong veins, much of the ore literally sprinkled with free gold. Let me tell you about it more in detail. Address,

Eagle Lake Hunters Gone.

Quite a number of the Eagle Lake Hunting party left the city on Saturday night with canoes and the advance guard of the baggage. The rest of the party will leave to-day. It is understood that the commissariat department included a cook, screw among the other goods and groceries. The Times is not given to gambling, but we will wager fur sandwiches against buttons, this party brings home its share of game.

Haliburton Lake Surveyed.

The Government surveying party, now engaged in surveying the upper waters of the Trent Valley Canal, under superintendence of Mr. R. B. Rogers, has finished surveying Haliburton Lake and is now at Redstone Lake in Harburn township, about twenty miles north of Minden. It will require about six weeks to complete the preliminary survey, Mr. Rogers returns on Wednesday to Redstone.

Girls Wanted.

A couple of good smart girls to work in our bindery. Steady work. Apply at once. Times Bookstore.

Ketchecum Lake Deer to Suffer.

The Ketchecum Lake party, who for the past month or two have each and every one, talked of nothing but deer and dogs, tents, [illegible] on their quest of sport. They will occupy their lodge at Lake Ketchecum and will return about November 17th. This party of deer stalkers includes the following well-known gunners:—Messrs. W. H. Hall, Duncan Walker, Chas. Wilson, Robt. Gibbs, Robert Stuart, of Chicago; William Irwin, Ald. Robert Hicks, Vincent Eastwood, R. M. Dennistoun, W. G. Morrow, Geo. W. Bennett, and David Johnston, of North Monaghan.

A Coming Local Horse.

Mr. Jas. Elmhurst, of Keene, has a 4-year-old colt by Directum, dam of the sire Aberdeen, which although green, has stepped the mile in 2.20 this fall. Mr. Elmhurst is now training this mare for winter races in the Midland circuit. She has no mark as yet, and as futurities do not regularly horses making any mark thereat, from entering a higher class, on turf, great possibilities are open for Mr. Elmhurst's young one. She will probably make some of those winter at Ottawa this winter look like 30 cents.

LOCAL INCIDENTS

BY THE TIMES MAN ON THE STREET.

—Chief Beazel has a key that was found Saturday morning. The owner is requested to call at the police station.

—Dr. Margaret O'Hara, who spoke in Peterboro several times in May leaves for her mission field in Central India on Thursday.

—Mr. T. H. Crowley of the Soo, with a prominent Montreal capitalist, is on his way to Bancroft to exploit his recent mineral discoveries.

—It is an encouraging fact about the senior gym. class at the Y.M.C.A. that the attendance to date has averaged larger than for several years.

—Messrs. Amos and Alex. Shearer, of Roseneath, and R. J. McCamus, of Keene, will hunt near Bancroft, having shipped their outfits last week.

—The first meeting of the Senanga Club this fall took place yesterday afternoon at the Y.M.C.A., when a number of the young men were entertained to tea.

—Mr. Art. Mitchell will leave to-day for Bancroft, where he will join a large hunting party. Rev. R. MacKnight, of Peterboro, will also be a member of the party.

—Messrs. Jas. Henderson, of Keene, Alex. Keitle, Thos. English, A. Sykes, Levi Fife, of Lang, and Thos. Thompson, of Hiawatha, will leave for Apsley on a deer slaying trip.

—Don't forget to take in Jerome K. Jerome's splendid lecture on Wednesday. His humorous lecture Wednesday. His humorous lecture will be a certain cure for the blue.

—The Peterboro Cereal Company keep a buyer on the local market. They require many thousands of bushels of oats, wheat and other grains, to keep their fine new mill employed.

—Mr. Fred Long, the Palace Restaurant chef is laid up with inflammation of the eyes. His brother, an expert cook is relieving him during his illness, so that the appetitising chops and oysters still move along.

—Visitors in town for the holidays will find our stock complete with new designs in china and useful souveniers at a very low price. Nicely hand-painted pin trays in opal ware for only ten cents each. Times Book. store.

—Andy Fawcette, the old man who was charged by his wife with non-support, appeared before Police Magistrate Dumbie Saturday morning, and was allowed to go. His wife did not appear to give evidence against him.

—Mrs. Stewart, who lives on Wolfe street, had an umbrella taken from her residence last Friday. Mrs Stewart has a good idea of whom the guilty parties are, and it may save them a police court case by returning the same to the Times Bookstore or leaving it in the police station at once.

—Rev. W. C. Allen, M.A., has been appointed rector of Cavan, succeeding his father, the Ven. Archdeacon of Peterboro, who was rector of the parish for fifty-four years.—Toronto News.

Little Master Brooks Injured.

We regret to say that Master Fred Brooks, the little son of Mr. J. M. Brooks, of the Palace Hotel, is laid up, and in an almost alarming condition. The little fellow a few days ago, climbed up on the high seat of a local watering cart. On trying to get down, the boy fell heavily on his head. Mr. Brooks reports that the doctors in attendance do not think there is any fracture of the skull. Still the poor little fellow suffers some pain and passes sleepless nights. Mr. Brook's many friends will join him, in wishing for a speedy recovery.

BOR ING THE CITY WATER

To Save Yourself and Your Children From Typhoid.

It is an open secret that the city water of Peterboro is far from what a proper regard for health would endorse. A glass of our city water, taken from one of your domestic taps, and left standing all night, shows a muddy precipitate, and a large jug full, left standing for twenty-four hours, in a moderate temperature develops a noticeable smell; the jug or receptacle containing it will be found to show a slimy interior from the deposits made. Dr. Amyot, of the Provincial Board of Health, recommends that all such water be thoroughly boiled before using. This easy precaution may save individuals from typhoid or other diseases, and the community from a serious epidemic.

Mr. and Miss Edmison out West.

County Police Magistrate Geo. Edmison, on Friday had a most reassuring letter from his son, Mr. H. H. Edmison. The latter gentleman, accompanied by his sister, Miss Edgar, are at the Blue Mountains, and on their journey westward trips reached Victoria, B.C., and intended leaving for Seattle and Portland, from which place they will take the boat to San Francisco. They will also visit Los Angeles, Salt Lake City and Chicago before returning. Mr. and Miss Edmison are thoroughly enjoying their trip, and Mr. Edmison's health is greatly improved. They expect to be home in about three weeks.

Jack's Lake Hunting Party.

The Jack's Lake party intent upon thinning out the deer in that district, leave early this morning for the scene of their coming hunt. They have a fine new lodge on the shore of the lake, equipped with every comfort and convenience. This party consists of Mr. R. C. Strickland, Lakefield; Messrs. G. W. Hatton, George B. Stephenson, W. D. P. Heatherote, Alex. Elliott, Major (Dr.) Young, A. P. McDonald, Hazen Ritchie, Harold A. Morrow, Wm. Gould, Peterboro; Wm. Brooks, Young's Point; Col. H. A. Ward, M.P., D. B. Chisholm, and Sam Bennett, Port Hope. Mr. R. J. Weese is the cook for the company.

Mr. T. Bradburn Remembered.

A very pleasant social function was enacted on Friday night at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson Braden in Smith township, when some 40 of their friends and neighbors gathered there to wish the host and hostess God-speed. Mr. Braden has recently purchased the beautiful home in Lakefield of Mr. Samuel Wallace, and will move there this week. The evening was spent in music and games, and a very pleasant evening was spent by all present. At the close of the evening all the guests sat down to a fine oyster supper, and many references to the good fellowship of Mr. Braden were made. Everyone was sorry that he was moving away, but at the same time wished him and Mrs. Braden every success in the new home.

Extension to Premises.

Work upon the building of an extension to the warehouses occupied by Messrs. Perkins, Ince & Co., wholesale grocers, Charlotte street, will, it is understood, be commenced in the near future, if the plans at present under consideration are carried out.

The expanding business of this progressive firm, it is said, has created the necessity for increased facilities, to be secured only by an increase in warehouse space.

The new building, the plans in view for which are for a one-storey brick structure forty feet in length, will be situated at the southern end of the present warehouse. The contractor for the work, it is understood, will be Mr. James Graham.

Oil in Deore.

David Forsythe has "struck oil" or what appears to be oil on his farm, lot 5, concession I, Douro township, which has for some time been the cause of no little speculation and comment among those who have visited the spot. The discovery, which was made accidentally while boring an artesian well, has revealed the presence of natural gas in large quantities, and from the analyses made there is excellent reason to believe that the property contains petroleum in large quantities. Some years ago, Mr. Forsythe drilled to a distance of 82 feet, in the well, the peculiar odour of the water was at once noticeable, and gas escaped in such quantities as to ignite and burn freely for hours.

Peat Being Used in the City.

Mr. D. H. Moore, local agent of the recently improved peat manufactory, has received an experimental car load of Canadian peat. Yesterday a gentleman well qualified to judge, a man who has handled as much coal, as all the coal companies in the city, yesterday informed a Times representative that he yesterday afternoon saw some of this new source, for this county at least, of heat. This gentleman said that he saw the peat burning in both a cook stove and an open grate. He said that it makes as hot a fire for stove purposes as coal and that for grate use it far excels coal, burning freely and without the unpleasant gas and smoke of coal. As this new fuel will probably be sold cheaper than coal, it may result in our local coal combine bringing prices down to those charged within 25 or 30 miles from Peterboro.

THE VITAL CENTER

The stomach is your vital center.

No man is stronger than his stomach.

The average man measures his physical vitality by his heart, his kidneys, or his lungs. Yet it is the stomach that should be first considered when you cast up the account of health.

Every organ of the body is sustained and nourished by food which is converted into nutrition in the stomach and conveyed to every part of the system in the form of blood. For this reason, when the stomach is strengthened with Mi-o-na and is able to convert the food into nourishment, all other organs soon become well. This explains many cures of heart, liver or kidney diseases in the cases where Mi-o-na is used. It is the most wonderful health restorer known.

Just one little tablet out of a 50 cent box of Mi-o-na for a few days, and you will soon see a great improvement in your health.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialists which will be sent free. The R. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

Two away a third of a century Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has held most largely than any other blood purifier or stomach tonic.

Bigger sales to-day than ever before. Is that not the true test? Cures others, why not you? Makes rich red blood. An imitation of nature's method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverished blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative extract of herbs and roots, without the use of alcohol, like Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This vegetable medicine coaxes the digestive functions and helps in the assimilation of food, or rather takes from the food just the nutriment the blood requires.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood and entirely eradicates the poisons that breed and feed disease. It thus cures scrofula, eczema, erysipelas, boils, pimples, and other eruptions that mar and scar the skin. Pure blood is essential to good health. The weak, run-down, debilitated condition which so many people experience is commonly the effect of impure blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery not only cleanses the blood of impurities, but it increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and it enriches the body with an abundant supply of pure, rich blood.

No matter how powerful the intellect or the resources of intellectual power, it must be backed up by physical force. Every day the youth or man must manufacture a pint of rich, arterial blood, that is pure, stimulating to the brain, and that can rebuild the tissues that were destroyed in yesterday's work.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

LOCAL TALENT PRAISED

Mr. R. N. Jolliffe's Singing Commended by Toronto Press.

Speaking of a recital in which a Peterboro vocalist took part, the Globe says:—Master Campbell Weeks the twelve-year-old Toronto violinist, gave a recital last night in the Gerhard Heintzman concert hall before an audience composed of well-known amateur and professional musicians. Master Weeks won a very gratifying triumph. He showed that since his first appearance a few seasons ago he has gained in largeness of tone and certainty of technique, to say nothing of increased understanding in interpretation. The assisting soloists were Miss Cornelia Heintzman, pianist, who played Henselt's study, "Si-doiseau petals," and the famous octave study of Leschetizky with surprising facility of execution, and Mr. Norman Jolliffe, baritone, who sang a couple of numbers, with a fine sympathetic voice and smooth, finished style. The accompanists were Mrs. S. T. Church and Herr Weigand, who followed and supported the soloists with care and judgment.

WILL SEE MAN'S FINISH

In the Year 3140—How London Sociologists and Biologists Figure It Out.

London, October 31.—"The Eternal Feminine" has ceased to be a joke, and is rapidly becoming a solid fact of vital interest to English sociologists and biologists, who estimate the preponderance of women today at slightly over 7 per cent. and who predict an enormous increase in the disparity of numbers between the sexes.

"The year 3140," said a well known sociologists, "will see the final triumph of women.

"There will then be 100 per cent. more women than men living in Great Britain. Twelve centuries later there will only be one man to every three women."

Every London borough, except Poplar, Southwark, Stepney and Woolwich, all industrial centers, has more women than men. In Kensington, for instance, there are nearly two women to every man.

The outer suburbs show the same excess of female population. There are nearly 5,000 more women than men in Bethenham. In a population of about 35,000. Richmond has a surplus of 6,000, and Ealing 7,000. Croydon, with 182,896 people, has nearly 14,000 surplus women.

ANXIETY OF THE GERMANS

Situation in Russia Causes Utmost Interest.

Kaiser Deeply Affected by Troubles of the Czar.

Berlin, October 31.—There was a great rush for papers yesterday, owing to the increased anxiety aroused here by the situation in Russia. Since the stirring times of the recent war there has not been such a good sale for newspapers. These, living up to the desire of the public for sensations, are published with startling headlines, one of which indicates that the Czar is preparing for "immediate flight,' another that Russia is in "full revolution." A third offers "Bloodshed and Barricades in St. Petersburg."

It was told that the Kaiser is deeply affected by the troubles of Emperor Nicholas, for whom he feels sincere sympathy and affection. It is even whispered that should matters become desperate the Kaiser would not hesitate to go to the aid of the Czar.

People anxiously desirous of reaching Warsaw, Moscow, and St. Petersburg are besieging the railway ticket offices fruitlessly, for there are no trains. The only route now possible is by ship from Stettin, a sixty-five hour voyage, with no steamship starting till Sunday. Even then night will prevent the ship from reaching St. Petersburg.

Inquiries made late last evening at the ticket offices by would-be travelers were met with the uncompromising reply:

"There is no communication with Russia, and the railroad authorities cannot say when there will be."

STR. LAKEFIELD BURNT

Fine New Tug, with a Scow Load of Wood, Now Beneath Deer Bay.

Messrs. Gray & Morin, of Lakefield, the tug men, who last year built and equipped the fine towing tug Lakefield, have suffered a heavy loss by fire. On Sunday the tug Lakefield, which attached to their scows, was at the lower end of Deer Bay. They had brought the tugs there to load cordwood for Messrs. Clem Gordon and Leglante of this city.

Being a day of rest, the owners, with their employes, had banked their fires and laid up the tug, hitched to a scow on which were already loaded about 30 cut of her carrying capacity of about 125 cords. Just beside these two craft were two other smaller scows, also for wood, which carried about 60 cords each. The large scow was the property of Messrs. Boyd of Bobcaygeon.

Shortly after dinner, all hands, leaving the tug, moored close to a high perpendicular bank, where the water very quickly deepened, and all seemingly in safe condition scattered through the woods, intent on looking for partridge or other purposes. The proprietors went to a spring at some considerable distance for drinking water, and were delayed by seeing some partridge on their way back. On their arrival at the mooring spot, they were horrified to see both the tug and the part loaded scow of wood, blazing fiercely. They shouted for their assistants, and, at once, did what they could to quell the flames. It was soon seen however, that the tug was gone beyond all possible help, with such limited means as they had of fighting fire. They turned their attention then to the scows. The one partly loaded, was also on after some considerable time got her. By dint of great effort the man managed to save the other scows.

Those employed on the scows, as well as the proprietors lost everything, their clothes and blankets even being burnt. The loss of Messrs. Gray and Morin will approximate $6,000 on which there is only a small insurance. There was no insurance on the scows or wood aboard.

The spot where the fire occurred is about 19 miles from Lakefield, by water, and nine from Young's Point. The tug was built last year in Lakefield.

This boat was formerly the steamer Alert, which was burned last year. She was 85 feet long and was one of the best tugs on inland waters.

The tug or what charred remains are left of it, are at present sunk near the shore, at the spot above noted. Her owners fear that the ruined hull, which contains a fine boiler and engine, will slide down the very rapidly shelving beach into water, that, a very few feet from the shore, is probably deep. If she slides into this depth, it would be hard work, for deep water divers to recover her, as her hull is too badly burned to permit of enclosing by divers, with planks, and then pumping out the water to raise her.

OUTRAGE CONTINUES

Mr. Cavanagh Has Still More Windows Broken Yesterday.

In yesterday's issue, we noted that the Cavanagh House, on Simcoe St. had been the victim of a cowardly and criminal act of vandalism, by parties yet unknown. As noted long strings of clothes hanging out behind the hotel to dry had been partly stolen, and the remainder, tied up in a bundle, enclosed by a woman's garment flung into the creek that passes the spot. Not only this, but Mr. Cavanagh had five large panes of glass smashed in broad daylight on Saturday.

A Times representative who visited the scene on Saturday noticed, by the breaks in the glass, that at least three out of the five panes were evidently broken from within the house.

Yesterday morning the maliciously disposed parties, broke three more panes of glass, one in the south window of the dining room and two in the west windows of the kitchen. These breakages occurred between 6 and 7.30 in the morning.

The Times' man yesterday made a careful examination of these windows. One of those broken in the kitchen, had the pieces of broken glass all fall outside the window frame. The other two had evidently been hit by some small hard missile, as a shot from a catapult or pea-shooter. The last two mentioned panes, whilst so badly broken as to require replacing, were not smashed enough for the glass to fall out. Along the cracks in the star shaped breaks, a close scrutiny showed from the small chips of glass, still holding loosely on, that beyond a doubt, the windows were broken from within. A curious feature of the matter is that of the three panes broken yesterday, two were new panes, only inserted Saturday to replace panes broken that day. There has been a too systematic continuance and likness in these breakages to consider the idea of accident for a moment.

The whole matter looks like a carefully laid plot to injure Mr. Cavanagh, and it is now up to the police to detect the offenders and stop proceedings in this usually law abiding city.

The dining room window, evidently broken from within, was smashed about 7.30 a.m., when no one was eating, or servants in the room. The doors had been closed, but the door entering from the front of the house, was not locked.

EMPLOYING PRINTERS

Company, and the Giele & Pflaum Company.

Pastoral Read in St. John's

The pastoral of the Archbishops and Bishops of Canada was read in St. John's church on Sunday and occasioned much interest. It deals with the social problems of the day and the observance of the Lord's Day. In this connection it recommends to churchmen the work of the Lord's Day Alliance. The pastoral also deals with marriage and divorce, and with other matters. It will be read in all the Anglican churches from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

FALL CATARRH

A great many people suffer more with catarrh during the fall months than at any other season of the year, the changes in weather seeming to have a bad effect upon the disease.

Some of the cures made by Hyomei seem marvelous when one remembers that the patients had suffered from catarrh since childhood and that for years they had been unable to get a good night's sleep, on account of the disagreeable tickling and dropping at the back of the throat caused by this offensive disease. A few days' treatment with Hyomei brough quick relief, and its continued use made a complete and lasting cure.

By breathing Hyomei through the pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, all the air passages of the lungs and throat are filled with air laden with Nature's own remedies for the cure of catarrh. All disease germs are killed, and the irritated mucous membrane is healed.

The complete outfit costs but $1.00, extra bottles 50 cents. Compare this small expense with the fees charged by specialists.

If you cannot obtain Hyomei of your dealer, it will be forwarded by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price. Write today for consultation blank that will entitle you to services of our medical department without charge. The R. T. Booth Company, Hyomei Building, Ithaca, N. Y.

Does Rev. Flag Float Over Black Sea Fleet?

Report That Crews Have Mutinied, Killing Two Admirals---Authorities Fail to Supress Anarchical Exuberance at Several Points.

Odessa, Oct. 31.—Persistent rumors are in circulation here to-day that the crews of the Black Sea fleet mutinied on arriving at Sumsun, on the coast of Asia Minor, killed Admirals Dikoff and Chouknin, and raised back to Sevastopol, after hoisting the revolutionary flag.

It is impossible to verify the rumors.

The authorities are confiscating all political telegrams.

RESTRAINED FROM VIOLENCE.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 31.—The city continues outwardly calm, but there is the most intense excitement beneath the surface. The strike committee continues to restrain the people from violence, this being considered to be the best means of attaining the ends in view, but behind the scenes the members of the committee are holding constant meetings with the leaders of the various groups, and seem to be preparing for a bold stroke at the opportune moment. The committee believe that the longer an open collision, which would favor a show of hands can be avoided, the better their chances. The army, they say, is being gradually won over to the people's cause. Only the Cossacks, who are referred to as Emperor Nicholas' "Swiss Guard," are absolutely faithful to the existing regime. The Ismailovsky Guard Regiment, which was reported to be disaffected during the troubles of last winter, is now reported to have refused to do guard duty, and to be confined to barracks, surrounded by Cossacks. An investigation by the Associated Press, however, failed to confirm the report.

FIRED UPON COSSACKS.

During the night firing occurred at the Polytechnic School, where a number of students are held as prisoners. The Cossacks surrounded the building, disarmed the workmen with their whips. They were denounced by the students from the windows and were finally fired upon and two soldiers unharmed. Thereupon the Cossacks fired two volleys. The result is not known.

A policeman in the Vasili Ostrov district was found dead this morning, having been murdered on his beat. Many of the police are afraid of losing their lives, and refuse to do patrol duty. Their places have been taken by foot soldiers.

The city is filled with false and sensational reports set afloat by the revolutionists.

GROWING WORSE.

The news from the provinces indicates that the authorities are getting control in some sections, but the general situation is growing worse instead of improving. In many places the students and strikers are fighting the "Black Hundred," as the bands of roughs are termed. The demands of the people are increasing proportionately with the success of the demonstrations. The cry for a constituent assembly is now almost universal, but the "Reds" declare that even that would not satisfy the people and add that there "must be some lamp-post work." On account of the food pinch even the first-class restaurants have increased their prices. The Minister of Finance has issued an order permitting meat importation by water. The scarcity of milk is especially felt.

PEASANTS ON RAMPAGE.

Lodz, Russian Poland, Oct. 31.—The situation here grows worse hourly. The infantry when ordered to fire on the people are discharging their rifles in the air. The shops are closed and those whose owners refuse to abide by are destroyed. Crowds are busily tearing down Russian flags which are displayed by orders of the police.

Bands of peasants in teh Government of Sewalki are destroying the Government alcohol stores.

INFANTRY KEPT IN BARRACKS.

Odessa, Oct. 31.—It is impossible to fix even approximately the number of yesterday's victims. The officials in charge of the hospitals, cemeteries and jails are strictly forbidden to give out the slightest information. The dead and wounded, whose numbers must be very considerable, have been removed by the police and hidden out of sight of inquirers. The infantry, of whose loyalty the authorities are doubtful, are kept in barracks, and the Cossacks and gendarmerie, who show no disclination to shoot down people on sight, are left to deal with the crowds. At one barricaded corner yesterday a student, on the appearance of the Cossacks, mounted a barricade, and appealed to them to join the people instead of killing their brethern, who were struggling for the freedom of their common country. The Cossacks answered with four volleys, killing nine and wounding about forty persons. Similar scenes are occurring everywhere. The streets fleeing before the charging Cossacks invade private houses, and hide in garrets and on the roofs. Many private apartments have been converted into temporary hospitals for the succor of wounded refugees.

COMMUNICATION WITH PARIS.

Paris, Oct. 31.—Communication between St. Petersburg and Paris remains uninterrupted. The streets of the Russian capital are [illegible] still sudden, and the people manifest an ominous silence, but no serious disorders are mentioned in the meagre reports received here. There is no confirmation of the London Daily Telegraph's statement that Emperor Nicholas has accepted the liberal program which gives legislative powers to the proposed National Assembly.

A despatch to the Journal from St. Petersburg quotes a personality of the court as saying that a constitution will be promulgated on November 3rd, and quotes another court functionary as saying that the law providing for liberty of the press, which is about to appear, gives little real relief. The functionary added that Count Witte is about to be clothed with extreme power to meet the situation. The telephone girls at St. Petersburg have joined the strikers and soldiers are replacing them, but the latter are attending chiefly to official calls. Many of the theatres are closed, the actors being among the strikers.

A despatch to the Petit Parisien from St. Petersburg, says the managers of the newspapers are conferring at the office of the Novoe Vremya, which has become anti-governmental.

JILTED WOMAN'S REVENGE

Disfigured Faithless Lover and His Bride With Acid

Paris, October 31.—A terrible revenge has been taken by a young woman of Chalus, a village near Limoges, upon a former lover, a farmer, who is said to have jilted her. The farmer married another woman, and as the wedding party were leaving the church the rejected woman appeared and threw the contents of a bottle of vitriol over them.

The bridegroom was disfigured in a frightful manner and may lose the sight of both eyes. The bride was burned about the face and neck and her mother and five other persons were injured. The perpetrator of the outrage escaped and is still at large.

A FARMER SLAIN

Lad Arrested While Offering Buggy For Sale.

Chanute, Kas., October 31.—Henry Tomlingson, a farmer aged 70 years, was murdered in his home near here today. Lem Rice, aged 16 years, an employe of Tomlingson, who was arrested at Humboldt, Kas., while trying to dispose of a horse and buggy which belonged to the dead man, is believed to have committed the crime. Rice a short time ago was employed for a few days by Tomlingson. Tomlingson was an old resident of the county and had been living alone.

Has Clue in the Hamilton Mystery.

Toronto, Oct. 29.—Inspector William Greer, of the Provincial Detective Department, who is working on the Hamilton murder case, was in the city today.

"Anything new in the case?" he was asked.

"Yes, there is," he said, "but nothing for publication yet."

The deluge of alleged clues continues, and Mr. Greer intimated that there was one which really might lead to something, but until he had proved it he declined to give details.

He will return to Hamilton immediately, and is again going further west.

Attempted Suicide.

Toronto, Oct. 30.—Mrs. Henry Montreuil found her husband in a semi-unconscious condition in his room at 123 1-2 Church street about six o'clock last evening. When he was taken to St. Michael's Hospital it was found that he was suffering from strychnine poisoning. He is thought to have taken about five grains, but is likely to recover.

Montreuil made a tour of the fall fairs against his wife's wishes, and on his return to London found that she had come to Toronto to work. He followed, and obtained employment at the C.P.R. roundhouse. Mrs. Montreuil says he has been dependent for a day or so.

Did Not Exercise Care.

Ottawa, Oct. 30.—The coroner's jury in the case of Philip Pit and Stephen Lalonde of Cornwall, who were killed at Irishside on Oct. 2d, by being struck by an engine, brought in a verdict censuring the Transcontinental Railway Commissioners for not exercising sufficient care in providing for the transportation of its men. The men were going up the Gatineau to work on the new railway, and were two of a gang of twelve. The conductor put them off because there were not enough tickets to go around.

Human Arm Found.

Montreal, Oct. 30.—A few days ago a human arm was found in the Grand Trunk yard at Point St. Charles, near the entrance to Victoria Bridge, and the manner of its getting there was shrouded in considerable mystery, as there had been no accident of that nature reported in this vicinity. An I.C.P. official has now cleared up the matter, and the remarkable part of the story is that the arm was carried nearly 600 miles on the truck of an I.C.R. car, and finally dropped off in Montreal. The arm was that of Martin Fahey, who was killed at Barnaby River, New Brunswick, exactly 589 miles from this city.

LABOR UNIONS IN IOWA

Big Decrease in Number of Iowa Organizations

Sioux City, Iowa, October 31.—Labor unionists in Iowa are depressed by a report of State Labor Commissioner Brigham. It shows a big decrease in the number of trade unions and that forty-five out of the ninety-nine counties in the state have not a single union. It is not doubted that this defection from the labor ranks was caused by the activity of the industrial associations and a declaration for the open shop whenever unions have made demands which the employers thought not justified.

At the last biennial reporting period there were 854 unions, but now only 554 are listed. Of these 554 reported a total membership of 41,97, as against 44,722 reported two years ago by 342 unions. An average wage is now reported of $33.31 with an average savings of $97.96; average life insurance of $2,308 and average fire insurance of $969.

OLD RESIDENT GONE

Mrs. Matthew Bird Passes Away At The Venerable Age of 82 Years.

This morning there will be laid to rest, after requiem mass in St. Peter's cathedral, in the St. Peter's cemetery, the last mortal remains of Mrs. Matthew Bird, who passed away on Sunday night at her residence, corner of Lake and Crescent streets.

Death resulted from senility, the deceased having been ill for about one year, though not critically so ill a few days ago.

The late Mrs. Bird, who was eighty-two years of age, had been a resident of Peterboro for over 60 years. Born in Tyrone County, Ireland, Mrs. Bird moved to Port Hope when she married. Shortly afterwards she and her husband, the late Mr. Matthew Bird, moved to what was then Ashburnham, residing on Lake street for about seventeen years, after which she took up residence at her late home, corner Lake and Crescent streets, where she has resided ever since, a period of over forty-four years.

Her husband, Matthew Bird, predeceased her by about twenty-nine years. Surviving members of the family are three daughters and two sons, viz: James, Mrs. Wm. Hogan, and Mrs. John Corcoran, of this city, and Mabel and Maggie, of Toronto. A grandson, Bernard Hogan, also resides in Peterboro, James Nellis, a brother of the deceased, was killed in the battle of Fredericksburg, in the American Civil war, and another passed away some years ago in Ops Township. A sister, Bridget, resides in South Dakota.

IS NOT A SUCCESS

Government Owned Telephone System in Japan.

Vancouver, October 30.—Even progressive Japan has not been able to make a success of a Government owned telephone system, according to the statement of Mr. R. Nakanaya, the Japanese Government expert appointed to look into telephone conditions in Canada and the United States.

"When a Japanese dies in Tokio," said Mr. Nakanaya to a representative of the Vancouver "Province," "one of the assets of his estate is his telephone, and the privilege of taking over the dead subscriber's instrument is [illegible]

"Yes, it is true that 5,000 people are clamoring for telephones in the city of Tokio alone," Mr. Nakanaya admitted in reply to a question, "and the Government is unable to supply the demand for the simple reason that it has not the instruments and has not the working force to instal the telephones if it had them, and then of course the Government has a monopoly.

"Of course many would-be subscribers die before their turn comes, and a man has the doubtful consolation of knowing that chance may throw an epidemic of disease among those on the waiting list before him; and should he be spared, his chances for getting an instrument during his lifetime are immeasurably increased by the deaths of others."

There was very little doing in police circles yesterday. At the morning session of the court, Jas. Schneider contributed $2 and costs to the city treasury, for having introduced fistic arguments into a dispute with an acquaintance.

John Stewart got $2 worth of information that will probably stay in his memory. He drove his team on the sidewalk instead of speeding them on the hard highway, hence the $2.

P. C. McGinty last night played host at the Hotel des Cops. His guest was by name Roberts, and he lives out north of Sundown, in the vicinity of Minden. The invitation to rest in the guest chamber, was a reward for Roberts using profane language whilst under the influence, on Simcoe street.

M'CURDY'S PAY VERY UNIQUE

No Big Bank of Railroad Men Come Anyway Near Insurance Limit.

LUCKY THEY GET A THIRD

It Took Canada's Premises 19 Years to Get as Much Money as McCurdy Got in One.

Few Big Men in the financial world draw a third of the salary that Mr. McCurdy, of the Mutual Life, gets. Few draw a third of the salaries paid to Mr. McCurdy's sons, or his son-in-law.

The president of the Canadian Pacific Railway struggles along on less than third; so does the general manager of the Bank of Montreal.

The same is true of all of the big railroad men and bank managers.

The limit for a railroad salary seems to be $50,000 or $60,000.

Mr. McCurdy draws $150,000, and his son nearly as much again.

The president of the United States has a salary of $50,000. M. Ruchet, the distinguished president of the Swiss Federation, draws $3,000 a year. Thebaud, the son-in-law of McCurdy, drew $147,687 in 1904 from the Mutual Life.

McCurdy in one year has drawn more money than the total salaries of Canada's premiers extending over a period of 19 years.

Emerson lived upon an income of $1,000 a year, eked out by lecturing, while writing his wonderful essays and poems.

Lord Roberts gets $25,000 a year; the president of the Harvard University $10,000. The church rarely pays $5,000. The average is more like $900.

The intellectual men, the men of the best education, those who are superior in developed capacity, those who are most important to society, work for small pay as compared with the self-selected masters of modern finance.

Canada Car Co. Begins Operations.

Montreal, Oct. 31.—The Canada Car Company, which was organized by Toronto and Montreal capitalists, began the operation of its huge plant, the largest corporation of the kind in Canada, to-day. The orders on hand include 1,000 cars for the Grand Trunk Railway. The capacity of the works is fifteen finished cars per day.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 270 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 18,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $300,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $40,000.00 to $60,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividends and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 60 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.50 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 90 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands! more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1901 produced $16,511.50 per hour, every hour, day and night, Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $30,000.00 per hour, and if you will add in this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock as they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

The Scourge of Consumption

Thousands Are Dying—If Tired Languid or Run Down Get Protection Before Too Late

Allow the blood to become thin, and immediately the whole system grows weak. The lungs are deprived of resisting power and the ever-present tubercular bacilli develops.

The most positive protection against consumption is Ferrozone, which restores the blood to full strength. Weak organs are instantly strengthened. Worn-out tissues are rebuilt. New life is given to the lungs and all danger of consumption is destroyed.

Mrs. E. J. Richardson, Manotick, Ont., tells as follows of her enormous gain in health from Ferrozone: "For two years I was not well. I was thin and anaemic. Towards spring I fell into a condition of nervous exhaustion. A dead tiredness hung over me like a cloud of lead. Housework of any kind I simply couldn't do. I took several remedies recommended, but nothing helped me greatly for I thought it might be tubercular. When I first read of Ferrozone I was convinced it was good. I took it regularly for eight weeks and the change in my condition was wonderful. My cheeks filled out and became clear and rosy. I gained eight pounds and now am strong and vigorous as possible."

Ferrozone feeds, nourishes and tones up the body—it sends the thrill and vim of robust health from head to foot—makes you feel better at once. Won't you use Ferrozone? Price 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

PETERBORO, OCTOBER 31 1905

CANADA'S EXPANDING COMMERCE.

A commercial statistician has gathered from the official reports that four countries of the civilized world made gains of more than 100 per cent. in their total foreign commerce, in the decade from 1894 to 1904. Japan, of course, is one. The other three are all in the Western Hemisphere. North America has two representatives in the short list—Canada and Mexico. South America has one—Argentina.

In the rate per cent. of gain Japan leads, with Mexico second, the Argentine third and Canada fourth. In rate or growth of exports the order is Japan, Argentina, Mexico, Canada. In imports these countries stand Japan, Mexico, Canada and Argentina. But in the increase in the actual volume of foreign trade, Argentina is first, with Japan a good second and Japan close behind, while Mexico is far below the island empire of the Orient.

In foreign commerce, relative to population, Japan is much behind Mexico. The Argentine leads Canada, gauged in that manner by a small margin, with Mexico a poor third. By the tests which are most significant in the business sense the two countries which easily surpass all other in the promise of future gains are Canada and Argentina.

THE NEW HOUSE

Concrete houses are no longer a "fad." This building material seems to have come to stay, under the influence of increased prices for brick and wood. Speaking of concrete for cottages and villas, the Country Calendar for September remarks: "It is indeed somewhat absurd to go on using wood when it is so dear and requires fire insurance. As soon as the concrete villa becomes familiar to architects and contractors the wooden house is likely to disappear from the countryside almost as quickly as it has from the city, and that without the assistance of such a law against frame dwellings as the cities have caused to be enacted for their own protection."

LABOR UNIONS AND EMPLOYERS

In an address prepared for the meeting of the Carriage Builders' Association held recently in Philadelphia, David M. Parry attributes the cause of the conflicts between labor and capital to ignorance on the part of the majority of the people of the economic laws. He says: "Once a thorough knowledge of economic laws becomes widespread, these conflicts will cease. No employer or set of employers, no legislature, no government and not even the labor unions can regulate wages. They are dependent upon economic conditions."

A general knowledge of these laws would make the opposition of the majority of the people to unionism more intelligent, but so far as the unions are concerned we doubt whether the knowledge would make any difference in their policy. Labor unionism is based on an ascending wage scale which is enforced without regard to economic conditions, and it cannot be said that this has always been done in ignorance of these conditions. Gompers, who claims to be a student of economic laws, has time and again urged his followers to resist a reduction in wages when conditions made it inevitable and this has been the almost uniform policy of labor unionism. Gompers goes upon the theory that economic laws may be suspended at will, or an employer is expected to change conditions in order that the unionists may have what they demand.

Guelph, Oct. 30.—Frank Grigat, aged twenty-four, was found dead on the road near Arthur yesterday. A small phial partly filled with carbolic acid, indicates the cause of death.

In his pockets were photos of himself, his deceased wife, and his deceased baby. On the back of his wife's picture were the words, "Mrs. Frank Grigat, dead." On the back of the baby's were the words, "Baby Grigat, dead." And on the back of his own were the words, "Poor Frank Grigat, dead." The message, "Good-bye, Frank," was on the back of the baby's photo. His young wife, a daughter of Mr. Henry Harper, Quebec street, Guelph, and her little one died within a few days of each other last year. While she was laying sick he attempted to commit suicide by taking a dose of paris green, and other attempts at suicide by drowning and hanging are also credited to him.

AUTUMN.

Shorter and shorter now the twilight clips
The days, as through the sunset gates they crowd,
And Summer from her golden coils slips
And strays through stubble-fields, and moans aloud.

Save when by fits the warmer air deceives,
And, stealing hopeful to some sheltered bower,
She lies on pillows of the yellow leaves,
And tries the old tunes over for an hour.

The wind, whose tender whisper in the May Set all the young blooms listening through the grass,
Sits rustling in the faded boughs to-day,
And rouses his cold and unsuccessful love.

The rose has taken off her tire of red—
The mullein-stalk its yellow stars has lost,
And the proud meadow-pink hangs down her head
Against earth's chilly bosom, witched with frost.

The robin, that was busy all the June,
Before the sun has kissed the topmost bough,
Catching our hearts up in his golden tune,
Has given place to the brown cricket now.

The very cock crows lonesomely at morn—
Each flag and fern the shrinking stream divides—
Uneasy cattle low, and lambs forlorn
Creep to their strawy sheds with nettled sides.

Shut up the door: Who loves me must not look
Upon the withered world, but haste to bring
His lighted candle, and his story-book,
And live with me the poetry of Spring.

A trip around the world in 60 minutes at a mere trifle.

Scores upon scores of people are daily taking advantage of our very liberal and decidedly interesting offer.

Magnificently finished and exquisitely photo-color views in place of the oldtime and antiquated views of the past. A most pleasant and interesting hour to spend journeying around the globe viewing the places of greatest interest, most beautiful scenery, etc., at a mere trifle of cost through our liberal plan. These views illustrate some of the most noted places in the world—mountain scenery both in America and Europe—waterfalls and other famous natural phenomena, some of the world's most famous buildings, places of historical interest and places famous for beautiful architecture or beautiful natural scenery. This set is of the greatest educational value, presenting, as it does, such realistic likenesses of scenes and places that we all should know about. We want every household in this city to have one of these sets. Imagine yourself taken through the Orient, on a trip to California, through the world's Fair to see the splendid scenes as though you were right there on the spot. By a special process, a combination of lithographing and half-tone work, we are able to offer a collection of colored views from every part of the world in the most beautiful, natural and startling life-like color effects, which must be seen to be appreciated. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and beauty of these views. Come and see them. We want each and every household in this city to have a set of these.

It wasn't so very long ago that hundreds of thousands of people spent many pleasant hours with the stereoscope, but heretofore they were compelled to pay enormous prices for views, think of it, as high as 50c each for colored pictures. We sold thousands upon thousands of stereoscopic views, in colors, at 50c each in those days, but imagine each and every view had to be colored by hand. In the past few months we have had repeated demands for them, and being able to secure the latest and most beautiful colored views to furnish to the public at a ridiculously low price, we entered into the stereoscope plan on quite a large scale, and have taken immediate advantage of the International Art Association, who have spent an enormous amount of money to get out special color plates and have finally completed their end, namely: To place on the market thousands of magnificent stereoscopic views, the most beautiful, interesting and exciting scenes from every land, in the grandest and most exquisite natural colors.

Now we come to our great special offer. Read our plan carefully as it describes the stereoscope and tells how to secure the scope and views at almost no cost to you.

First the stereoscope. The Stereoscope is our world-famous "Aluminum Crystal Lens" Stereoscope. Genuine aluminum hood, bound with dark rich red velvet. Frame is of fine finished cherry wood with patent folding handle, folding underneath frame, and sliding bar. The lenses are extra fine quality, selected for clearness and brilliancy, 1¾ inches in diameter, ground from best quality glass and carefully adjusted. This Crystal Lens Aluminum "Scope" has won universal praise from lovers of the beautiful, and as a means of entertainment stands second to nothing.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quarts.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7.50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 by 1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

BLOOD DISEASES

If you inherited or contracted any Blood Disease you are never safe unless the virus or poison has been eradicated from the system. At times you see alarming symptoms, but live in hopes no serious results will follow. Have you any of the following symptoms? Sore throat, ulcers on the tongue or in the mouth, hair falling out, aching pains, itchiness of the skin, sores or blotches on the body, eyes red and smart, dyspeptic stomach, sexual weakness—enlarged glands. Don't trust to luck. Don't ruin your system with the old fogy treatment—mercury, potash and patent medicines, which suppress the symptoms for a time only to break out again when happy in domestic life. Don't let quacks experiment on you. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT is guaranteed to cure you. OUR GUARANTEES ARE BACKED BY BANK BONDS that the Blood or Skin disease will never return. Thousands of patients have been already cured by our NEW METHOD TREATMENT for over 20 years, and no return of the disease. No experiment, no risk—not a "patch up," but a positive cure. The worst cases solicited.

HAD BLOOD POISON 12 YEARS

Before Treatment After Treatment

W. H. Patterson, of Saginaw, Mich., writes his experience in a disorder and especially of this kind, but I owe his much to Drs. K. & K. for the s[illegible] they have done me. I had a serious blood dis[illegible] when 24 years of age. The skin and blood symptoms gradually developed. Pimples and sores formed, running sores broke out, hair [illegible] pains in the bones at joints, [illegible] glands. I grew to hate the looks of one. I visited Hot Springs [illegible] four months each time. It helped me temporarily, but in six months after [illegible] home I was as bad as ever. Finally a Doctor friend of mine advised me to see Drs. Kennedy & Kergan. He said he had known of them for over 20 years, and as they made a specialty of these diseases and treated the worst cases by the [illegible] method, he could be cured. I was afraid of advertising doctors, but I took his advice. They agreed to treat me under a guarantee [illegible] way, investigated their financial standing and found they were perfectly re[illegible]le, so I commenced the new method Treatment. The eruptions disappeared in t[illegible] the bone pains in four weeks and in four months I was entirely cured. Yes, sir, I can recommend the New Method Treatment for Blood and Skin Diseases."

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

On one point Nora was steady, she would not marry till she had attained her twenty-first year, and on this Marsden was obliged to give way. As their marriage was not to take place immediately, he was anxious it should not be talked about. There was no use in bringing a storm of congratulations and questions upon them before the time, but he promised to speak to Lady Dorrington on the subject, as soon as he could intrude on her duties to her sick guest.

A fortnight had slipped away, and as yet no whisper of Marsden's engagement had got abroad.

There was no one in town, and Mrs. and Miss L'Estrange were scarcely known in Marsden's world.

Mrs. L'Estrange was much and most agreeably occupied with her little daughter, and pleased with her surroundings, making quietly the meanwhile preparations for the anticipated event, and had little time to notice how pale and thin Nora had grown, that her face looked all eyes, that she started nervously if suddenly spoken to, and that her hands held nothing very steadily. All seemed to promise fair and well. In the midst of this contentment Winton arrived from Florence, graver and gaunter than ever.

It happened that the day he first called, Marsden had received from his sister an earnest request to go to her at once, and he had started, intending to visit Evesleigh on his way back. Mrs. L'Estrange had been a little puzzled by Marsden's wish to let Evesleigh, she had no idea that retrenchment was so necessary to him. Still, neither she nor her stepdaughter saw anything to object to in the proposition. Indeed, Nora thought she would prefer traveling with him to settling down in the country; she was moreover most anxious that he should clear his estate and retrieve his fortunes.

It seemed to her, she knew not why, fortunate that Clifford should have been called away as Mark Winton came. She longed to hear him talk with her step-mother, once just once—in the old, quiet, sensible way, without interruption. When Marsden was present she was never quiet at ease; she felt he was watching her, that he was ever on the lookout for her notice or her avoidance. She dreaded slighting him, and feared the passionate delight which any little show of kindness on her part excited. To be still and tranquil for an evening or two was very charming; though she was distressed to find what pleasure it gave her to hear Winton's deep, somewhat harsh, voice, to listen even to his most trifling remarks. When—when would he speak to Helen, and put another final barrier between them? The all-absorbing topic of her own engagement had prevented any animadversion on Winton's letter; moreover, as Helen did not make any remark respecting it, Nora did not like to broach the subject.

It was late, and Bea was beginning to say good-night—a process which usually lasted some time—when Winton appeared. He had only arrived that evening, and apologized for intruding so late.

Beatrice, of course, greeted him rapturously, and her departure to the realms of sleep was postponed. When she had disappeared, and they were quiet, Winton looked round the room and said:

"It is almost like being at Brookdale, only I miss some of the furniture and ornaments."

"And the room is smaller," added Mrs. L'Estrange.

"Have you been ill?" were his next words, addressed to Nora, with an earnest look.

"No! Why do you ask? Do I look ill?"

"I think you do. London does not agree with you!"

"I have a slight cold, scarce worth mentioning," she returned.

Winton slowly withdrew his eyes from her; and, after looking down for a minute in silence, began to talk of Mrs. Ruthven and her illness, her relapse and her final recovery. Then he spoke of going to see his uncle, in Yorkshire, and they glided easily from one subject to another.

On rising to say good-night, he asked Mrs. L'Estrange at what hour he should find her next day.

"I don't think I shall be in much before four. I have a dreadful business before me in a visit to the dentist with poor little Bea, and we are to ransack Cremer's for some reward to encourage her drooping spirits. But, about four, you will find us at tea."

"Very well," he returned, and bid them good-night.

"I do not think you are looking so ill, Nora," said Mrs. L'Estrange, when he had gone.

"Oh, no! It was only Mr. Winton's fancy. There is nothing really the matter with me."

As soon as Mrs. L'Estrange with Bea and her governess had departed, after an early luncheon, Nora took a book and a comfortable corner of the sofa, determined to think only of the story, which was interesting and well told. She felt unaccountable weary, and was not at all surprised that Winton should have thought her looking ill. What an ungrateful, unaccountable creature she was! How happy most girls would be, in her place! But she was going to read, and not think about herself. So, with an effort, she fixed her attention on the page before her. She had not read long, when the unexpected announcement of "Mr. Winton" made her heart stand still. Why—why had he come so early? She started up in haste, and went to meet him, reading in his observant eyes the same questioning expression which had struck her the evening before.

"I am afraid Helen will not be in just yet," said Nora, with a friendly smile.

"Yes, I know I am rather early, but, if I don't interrupt you, I will wait," returned Winton, speaking more rapidly than usual. He drew a chair near her sofa, laying his hat on the floor, but still holding his stick, with which he seemed to trace the pattern of the carpet. "How is your cold—better?"

"Yes, thank you."

"When do you return to Brookdale?"

"Our plans are very uncertain," returned Nora, coloring, for she knew it was Marsden's wish they should remain in town and have a very quiet wedding.

How she wished some one would tell him she was engaged to Clifford! There was a pause, while Nora sought in vain for something to say.

"Did Mrs. L'Estrange tell you I was inclined to go off straight to India with Colonel and Mrs. Romer?"

"Yes, she did."

"But I felt I could not go without trying my luck in London. May I tell you why?"

"He is going to confide in me," thought Nora.

"Certainly, Mr. Winton," she said very kindly. "Perhaps I have some idea why already."

Winton looked at her steadily, with surprise.

"You may have, though I doubt it." Another pause, then with an evident effort Winton began, growing more composed and collected as he went on. "You may think me a presumptuous ass, but I will not lose the faintest chance for any false pride. Miss L'Estrange, though we have always been good friends, especially when I first knew you, I acknowledged you have never given me any hope that you would ever let me be more than a friend. And lately I have imagined, or rather felt, that you were changed in some way; perhaps that ought to have been enough to silence me, but, you see, when a man's whole future hangs on 'Yes' or 'No,' it is hard to be content with uncertainty, and there is a degree of sympathy between us on some subjects. In short, I can not leave without asking if there is any hope for me, for," looking straight at her with solemnity, "I love you well."

A Pointer for Farmers.

The Lindsay Post says: Farmers who have strayed cattle or other live stock on their premises should not forget that it is unlawful to hold them without advertising the fact in the local paper, and that this must be done within a reasonable time limit. A farmer leaves himself liable to costs if his failure to advertise leads the owner to incur expense in searching for the lost animal.

JOINT MEETING

Committees of Board of Trade and Retailers' Association Meet Fire, Water and Light Committee.

The following gentlemen, members of committees appointed by the Board of Trade, and Retail Merchants' Association, met in joint committee with the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the Council, viz., Mayor Hunt, Messrs. Ald. Johnston in the chair; H. LeBrun, R. Fair, Supt. Henderson, Crowe, McIntyre, Adam Hall, Hucks, T. E. Bradburn, Tovey, W. H. Moore and Adams. The meeting was called to meet Mr. Pritchard, but the chairman noted that he had just received a telegram from Mr. Pritchard, president of the Canada Fire Engine Co., of London, saying he would be unable to be present till midnight. The question of getting the people to grant money for fire protection was discussed. The general sentiment of those present was unanimously in favor of procuring better and more adequate fire protection. In consequence of Mr. Pritchard not being present, the discussion was general, bearing on the absolute necessity of better fire protection. It was clearly shown, and generally admitted by all present, that the by-law to be submitted, next January, was in the interests of every citizen of the town equally with those of the merchants, and residents in the central portion of the city.

It was noted by every speaker, that the joint committee did not wish to do anything that might, in any way, bind the citizens in general to any expenditure for fire engine, or other fire apparatus. All present distinctly felt it be understood that the contemplated request for money for fire purposes, be not only settled by popular vote, but by public opinion.

As the press were requested not to report the speeches of individuals, we might simply say that the meeting was practically unanimous in approving the purchase of a fire engine and other apparatus necessary to save Peterboro being wiped out in case of a bad fire.

A joint sub-committee was appointed to thoroughly investigate the matter of least expense incumbent pr adequate fire protection. This committee is composed of Aldermen Johnston, Hicks, Crowe, McIntyre and Mr. Robt. Fair. The meeting then adjourned at 10 p.m.

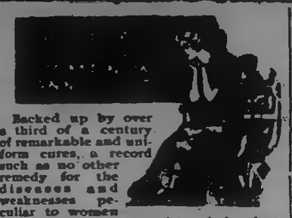
HOTEL PARTNERSHIP

Mr. Jas. Allen, Late Proprietor of the C.P.R. Hotel Joins Mr. Rickerby.

Yesterday partnership papers were signed whereby Mr. Jas. Allen, former proprietor of the C.P.R. Hotel, enters into partnership with Mr. John Rickerby, who up to yesterday was proprietor of this popular hotel. Mr. Allen, since selling out the C.P.R. has been engaged in the hotel business in Lakefield. He however, shortly after taking hold of the Lakefield House, sold out to some Peterboro men. Under the new management of these two well known hotelmen, the C.P.R. Hotel's business must rapidly increase. Since Mr. Allens management of the C.P.R. House, Mr. Rickerby has not only greatly improve the hotel equipments and interior, but has held the well established trade of his predecessor.



Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 in legal money of the United States for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

No other medicine than Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription could possibly "win out," as the saying goes, on such a proposition; but they know whereof they speak. They have the most remarkable record of cures made by this world-famed remedy ever placed to the credit of any preparation especially designed for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments. This wonderful remedy, therefore, stands absolutely alone as the only one possessed of such marvelous properties as to fully warrant its makers in publishing the remarkable offer made in the utmost good faith.

"A short time ago I was almost dead with nervous prostration, general debility and female weakness," writes Mrs. Loretto Webster, of 317 Virginia Ave., Lexington, Ky., Worthy Treasurer of Independent Order of Good Templars. "Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was recommended to me as a sure cure, and I found this to be true, for I obtained splendid results, securing fine health. Women ought to be grateful to think there is one safe and sure cure offered to them for their troubles. I advise every sick and suffering woman to stop spending money and wasting time with doctors' prescriptions, when a few bottles of your remedy is sure to cure. I am the happy mother of two children, boy aged sixteen, and girl, eight years."

Do not permit the dealer to insult your intelligence by suggesting some other compound which he recommends as "just as good," because he makes it himself. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has stood the test of time and experience. Thousands speak well of it—because thousands have been cured by it.

Editor's Advance Sheet.

In The Engineering Magazine for November, Mr. John F. Wallace, the late chief-engineer of the Panama Canal, reaches a most interesting point in his description of that work. It is the statement of just what was done during the first year on the Isthmus, what the work cost, and—most significant of all—what were the difficulties which led to Mr. Wallace's resignation. His disclosures of "Governmental red tape" and his plea for common-sense methods to take the place of the "moss-grown traditions" of the Washington bureaus will suggest at once the answer to the question the country has been asking—"Why did Wallace resign?"

Illustrated articles in the same number deal with the Sierra Leone railway, West Africa, and with the electrical equipment of the modern power house. Mr. E. C. Eckel, of the U. S. Geological Survey, has a most instructive review of the American mineral industry, showing their relative importance in quite a new light. There are two excellent papers on matters of importance to the power user, and a very valuable article for the machine-shop manager in Messrs. Becker and Brown's descriptive paper treating of the new high-speed-steel tools. The number carries the full review of the Engineering Magazine, New York.

VIGILANCE REWARDED

Toronto, Oct. 31.—W. H. Price, editor of the Conservator of Manitoulin, has been appointed first magistrate of Manitoulin Island at $1,000 per annum.

It will be remembered that it was Mr. Price's two sons who, it is alleged hid behind the piano in a Toronto factory and overheard the interview between Frank Sullivan and B. R. Gamey in regard to the Stratton case.

Duck Shooters Return.

Mr. Chris. Wood and his party of duck hunters have arrived home after their annual two weeks shoot at Rice Lake. Those in the party were C. Wood, R. L. O'Dette, J. Gourlie, C. Clarry, T. B. Maurice, Harry Nelli, E. Mitchell and W. McGregor. They camped this year in McNeil's cottage at Bain's Point, and report having the best time they ever had. The ducks were plentiful and the sport was good. They secured over 100 ducks.

CANADA MENACES AMERICAN TRADE

Dominion to Join Newfoundland in Reprisals on United States.

AMERICAN SENATE BLAMED

Refusal to Ratify Reciprocity Treaty May Lead to Loss to Uncle Sam.

Washington, D. C., October 31.—The character of the relations of the United States with Canada is causing the President and Secretary Hay considerable concern. Canada is preparing to revise its tariff, which undoubtedly will disturb, and perhaps injure American commerce, while Newfoundland has adopted a policy of retaliation which already is causing damage to the New England fishing industry.

It is evident to the authorities that some action will have to be taken immediately in order to conserve American interests in British North America. Representations will be made at once to the British Government and an effort be made to settle all questions pending with Canada and Newfoundland. Unfortunately for the United States, on the part of Canada and Newfoundland there has ceased to be shown that spirit of conciliation which at one time marked their attitude towards this country, and men who know the efforts the Canadian and Newfoundland representatives made to come to a general understanding with the United States do not blame them for changing their attitude. They for that they can expect nothing from American policy and that it will be necessary to employ coercive measures in order to obtain concessions from this government.

They are suspicious of Great Britain since the Alaskan boundary dispute was settled in favor of the United States by the arbitration commission which met in London, and of which Secretary Root was one of the American members. Therefore, the influence which the British Government will be able to exercise in bringing about a settlement of the questions between the United States and Canada is discounted in advance by officials here.

BLOCKED BY GLOUCESTER MEN.

The fisheries dispute is the direct result of the failure of the United States Senate to ratify the reciprocity treaty negotiated with Newfoundland. The treaty was opposed bitterly by the Gloucester fishermen, because it admitted codfish into the United States free of duty. Senators Lodge and Crane of Massachusetts espoused the cause of the men who go out from Gloucester, and so skillfully did they manoeuver in the senate that the pressure exerted by the President and Secretary Hay was fruitless.

Advices received here show that the Newfoundland authorities finally have come to the conclusion that it will be useless to look for relief from the American senate, and they now propose to put into effect a threat uttered by the Premier a year ago, not only publicly but directly to the government in London. The Newfoundland authorities claim to be acting within their rights in excluding American fishermen from the bays, harbors, and creeks of Newfoundland, because while the existing treaty grants them the liberty to take fish of every kind on the coast, it specifically gives them in connection with Labrador and other parts of British North America the right to fish on the coasts and in the bays, harbors and creeks. It is a fine point, whether the word coast includes bays, harbors and creeks, and Secretary Root will insist, of course, that it does.

CHANGES IN CANADA'S TARIFF.

Important as the fishing question is, however, of greater importance generally to the country is the question of changes which will be made in the Canadian tariff. Mr. Kasson pointed out tonight that at the time the high joint commission was engaged in negotiations the Canadian representatives evinced a gratifying willingness to make a reciprocity treaty which would have been highly advantageous to the United States. The United States Government, however, was unwilling to meet the Canadians half way, and the reciprocity negotiations fell through, as did those relating to the questions under discussion.

Had the United States reduced the duty on lumber one-half, as desired by Canada, Mr. Kasson pointed out, this country would have been benefited through the preservation of its forests, which would not have been denuded in order to obtain timber for building and other purposes. Nor would the United States have suffered as a result of the reduction of duty on Canadian dairy products and eggs.

Finding no prospect of an outlet in the United States, Canada has decided to develop her own industries and become independent of the United States. Mr. Kasson called attention to the fact that Canada is drawing American capital, American manufacturers, and American industries generally to her side of the line, which would have stayed at home and shipped their products to Canadian territory had a reciprocity treaty been concluded.

The Canadian tariff commission began its hearings at Winnipeg last month. The commission consists of the members of the Canadian Cabinet. The fact that the commission began its hearings at Winnipeg is regarded as significant, as that point is the distributing center for Canada's northwestern domain, which is being opened up to settlement. Through Manitoba passed imports valued during 1904 at $14,000,000. A large proportion of the entries is of goods from the United States, principally farm machinery and agricultural implements.

CANADIANS ARE IN EARNEST.

Special Agent Pepper, reporting to the department of commerce and labor in regard to the interest excited in the work of the commission said:

"Representatives of Canadian manufacturers are taking a lively interest in the approaching sessions of the commission. Generally, the commission is credited with seeking increased duties, though the degree to which there is a concerted movement to this end cannot be determined when the testimony is heard.

"The manufacturers who are said to want increased duties are credited with the purpose of securing the trade of the settlers who have come to the Canadian North-West from the United States during the last four years in large numbers. These settlers quite generally prefer the farm machinery to which they have been accustomed in the States. I have taken the opinions of a number of agents and others representing both the United States and Canadian firms, and while allowance is made for different points of view, there is substantially unanimity on many points. One of these points is that the preference of the settlers from the United States cannot be read-duties, though the degree to which facturers continue to supply machinery of superior quality.

Police Court

Yesterday's court developed the fact that as long as suckers will bite, there will be those who catch them. The man Roberts, who, when home, hangs his hat daily on the hat rack of a Minden residence, and who was arrested by P. C. McGinty the preceding evening on Simcoe street, was on trial, at the police court, on a charge of being D. & D. Roberts had a good, heart-rending tale of woe to relate, so the magistrate let him go.

On Monday evening, after his arrest, Roberts told the police he had that evening fallen among thieves. Not only he but the parental author of his being. Roberts said his father, in passing from one hotel to another, had been robbed of $5. He also claimed that he, himself, had been robbed of $5, by two men named respectively Stevenson and Shanahan. His story was that whilst in the American House, these two men tried to sell him a lottery ticket for 15 cents. The Grand Prize in the lottery purported to be a horse and buggy. Roberts claimed that he laid down a $5 bill and got the ticket. On asking for his change, he asserted, the men denied that he had given them a $5 bill and even demanded their ticket In consequence of the story related by Roberts, the two men were arrested yesterday morning at Shanahan's house. When the police went to arrest the two men they were both in bed fully dressed. They were tried on a charge of stealing the $5 bill from Roberts. Roberts went into the witness box and told substantially the same story he had related the evening before.

However, as Roberts had been drunk that night, there was the magistrate claimed, a reasonable chance for doubt, so dismissed the prisoners. They were then charged with vagrancy, and will be tried this morning. In the meantime, they were allowed to go on their own recognisances to appear for trial.

The police say that these men do not toil neither do they spin, yet they live and get their share of booze when wanted. Shanahan had a warrant out against him last spring. He skipped from town, however, before arrested, and by the time of his return to the city about a month ago, the witnesses for the prosecution could not be found, so this warrant was allowed to drop. Shanahan has been in the city of Toronto, until his return to Peterboro a month ago.

T. V. C. LOCK DAMAGED

Steamer Majestic Bats Into Gate of No. 2 Lock.

Yesterday workmen, by orders of Mr. McClelan, superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal, were busy repairing the damage wrought by an accidental collision between the steamer Majestic and a gate on lock No. 2, on the stretch between this city and Lakefield. The accident occurred on Monday evening about 5 o'clock, when the steamer towing a scow load of wood, to Peterboro, ran head of the lower gate on the lock, and dislocated it from its hangings.

The canal authorities here were at once notified of the incident, and Mr. McClelan at once despatched a gang of men and drivers to look No. 2 to repair the damage at once, although the official means of the canal is about over. Fortunately the Majestic was not much the worse for her collision, owing to the very reduced speed consequent upon entering the lock. The injury was about repaired at a late hour last night.

Peterboro's Industries.

The Campbellford Despatch says:—"Industry after industry is coming to Peterboro, while Campbellford gets nothing. The former town is destined to become a great city some day if we are to judge by the manner in which it is growing at present. Campbellford with all its superb natural facilities for manufacturing is the cinderella among Ontario towns. There seems to be little or no effort on the part of our business men to relieve its forlorn condition. Apathy and indifference are to a great extent responsible for this condition of affairs. If the business interests could only realize the commercial possibilities of our water power they would not be long in finding a way to develop them."

Russia Rejoices Over Their New Liberties

Capital Gaily Decorated with Flags and Bunting, and Thousands Celebrated the Change From Despotism to License.

THE SITUATION TO-DAY.

Yesterday Russia was ringing with the greatest gloom and hourly awaited an armed movement that would precipitate open rebellion, and bring with it all the horrors of a civil revolution. The Romanoff dynasty was tottering, the masses were oppressed and sullen, ready to take the most extreme measures in order to tighten their long pent-up feelings. The storm was ready to break in all its fury, but to-day the whole situation has changed, and from a position of seclusion and misery, the masses have emerged triumphant, elated with their political and civic rights with the freedom of press and speech and meeting—the Romanoff autocracy ended.

It is no wonder then that the people rejoiced to-day, or dared to hurl maledictions at the heads of the Cossacks as they were withdrawn from the streets by order of the authorities, who realized that in their great hour of triumph the masses must give vent to their long pent-up feelings. Demonstrations occurred in all the leading Russian cities, and in St. Petersburg a long procession was formed. Strikers and others carried red flags and sang revolutionary songs and they were not molested.

The news from the interior was more favorable, though at Odessa the Socialists attempted to prolong the strike in order to force further concessions. A public holiday, however, was proclaimed, and the people in many ways manifested their great joy.

The news, too, was received with great gratification at all the European capitals, where the manifesto was looked upon as being infinitely more liberal than had been expected.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 1.—The Russian capital blossomed out with flags and bunting today. All the troops were withdrawn from the streets, and the city presented almost its normal appearance. The nervousness of the people has suddenly disappeared. Work men by the thousands flocked back to the shops and factories without awaiting the permission of the strike committee. The authorities did all in their power to encourage the spirit of rejoicing over the newly granted liberties. It was by order of General Trepoff that the regulation decorations were hung out, the troops were withdrawn to their barracks, and the police were instructed to permit the people to vent their feelings.

PEOPLE WENT MAD.

Before noon the celebrations began and the city soon appeared to have gone mad. Such scenes had never been before witnessed in Russia. Unrestrained by word or deed, the crowds did and said what they liked. Despotism seemed suddenly to have been replaced by license. Red flags were everywhere in evidence. In the churches devout men and women on bended knees before the image of St. Nicholas, the miracle worker, rendered thanks for the blessings of liberty, while, at the corners of thronged streets orators harangued the populace. The people assembled principally on the Nevsky Prospect, around the Kazan Cathedral in the town and "points" the Place d'Europe, where was erected a huge platform from which were massed bands listening to numerous orations, were delivered impassioned speeches from the steps of the cathedral.

MASS OF CHEERING HUMANITY.

Red flags waved above the dense black mass of cheering humanity. The police kept in the background, not even trying to keep the street open. Passing patrols on their way to the barracks would have been mobbed had it not been for the appeals of the cool-headed who secured, to the accompaniment of cheers, that the troops were henceforth with the people.

The biggest demonstration was organized by students and workmen. A great procession was formed. Starting from the University 10,000 strong, it increased in numbers as the demonstrators marched across the river and up the Nevsky Prospect as far as the Kazan Cathedral singing the Marseillaise.

A dozen red banners, inscribed with the word "Svoboda" (liberty) were carried at the head of the parade which stopped at the places where the troops fired on the people on January 22. Here the paraders with bared heads chanted funeral dirges. The crowds in the streets uncovered their heads as the procession passed. At the Kazan Cathedral the procession countermarched to the university, where from the balconies students harangued the crowds with fiery speeches, urging the people not to cease the struggle until every right of man had been attained. In the midst of the oratory, intense enthusiasm was created by a student who scaled the roof of the university and attached a red flag to the cross over this entrance. The following is a sample of the inflammatory speeches:

"You must go to the prisons and liberate your comrades. Go armed with revolvers, dynamite and bombs. Trepoff is still in power. Our watchword must be that all the troops must be withdrawn from St. Petersburg and leave the capital in our possession. That bloody scoundrel Trepoff must be driven out of Russia. The doors of the Bastile and of the fortresses must be opened and a national guard must be created for the protection of our liberties. It would be fatal to stop now. The Emperor has yielded because he is not sure of the army which, brothers, is with us. Their swords are on our side. Hurrah for liberty. Hurrah for socialism!"

PRISONERS TO BE FREED.

London, Nov. 1.—A despatch to a news agency from St. Petersburg says Count Witte authorizes the announcement that the Ministry of Justice will free all political prisoners whose release at the present moment will not endanger public order. Details of the release will be arranged at ministerial conference during the next few days.

REJOICING AT WARSAW.

Warsaw, Nov. 1.—The imperial manifesto granting a constitution to Russia has made a deep impression on the people here, and there is universal rejoicing in which the army officers joined. All military patrols have been withdrawn.

MR. POTVIN BETTER

Father of the Well Known Confectioner of Brooks a Rib.

The Times ascertained that Mr. Potvin, 75 Lake street, was somewhat better after his accident of Saturday evening. It will be remembered that Mr. Potvin, father of the George street confectioner, on Saturday evening, whilst returning home, slipped on the east side, a result of stepping on some dead leaves lying on the sidewalk on Lake street. Owing to Mr. Potvin's heavy weight, as he unfortunately fell upon his tin dinner pail he was carrying, the fall resulted in breaking a rib in his right side. It is now hoped however that he will soon be about again.

FUNNY

People Will Drink Coffee When it "Does Such Things."

"I began to use Postum because the old kind of coffee had so poisoned my whole system that I was on the point of breaking down, and the doctor warned me that I must quit it.

My chief ailment was nervousness and heart trouble.

Any unexpected noise would cause me the most painful palpitation, make me faint and weak.

"I had heard of Postum and began to drink it when I left off the old coffee. It began to help me just as soon as the old effects of the other kind of coffee passed away. It did not stimulate me for a while, and then leave me weak and nervous as coffee used to do. Instead of that it built up my strength and supplied a constant vigor to my system which I can always rely on. It enables me to do the biggest kind of a day's work without getting tired. All the heart trouble, etc., has passed away.

"I give it freely to all my children, from the youngest to the oldest, and it keeps them all healthy and hearty." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

ATHLETIC WORLD

BY OUR SPORTING EDITOR

RUGBY.

Formal notice was sent yesterday by Secretary F. D. Woodworth of the O.R.F.U. to R. T. Shillington of Ottawa, secretary of the Canadian Union, notifying him that both the senior and intermediate champions of the Ontario Union would challenge for the Canadian championship in their respective series. Rough Riders of Ottawa, winners of the Quebec senior and intermediate championship, have signified their intention of playing for Canadian honors.

The locals had a good practice last night in the rink in preparation for Saturday's game with Brockville. The Brockville team, by their defeat of Kingston have shown that they have a very dangerous bunch, and the game here on Saturday should be a great exhibition of rugby. The locals will be in fine shape and should give a good account of themselves.

* * * *

If Peterboro wins the intermediate championship they will likely play the Rough Riders of Ottawa for the Canadian championship.

SCIENTISTS COMING TO CANADA

The British Association to Meet in Winnipeg Four Years Hence.

Winnipeg, Oct. 31.—Prof. George Bryce has received a letter from Professor MacLean, of Toronto, who writes from Mozambique, Africa, on Sept. 17th. He and Prof. Coleman, of Toronto, have the invitation of Winnipeg for 1907 very strongly on the General Committee, but the professor writes that the hands of the committee were securely tied by early given promises to British cities.

Prof. Macallum says: "Perhaps it is just as well, for all eyes will be turned to Canada in a couple of years, and compared as it will be, with any other British colonial possession as God's country, the success of the meeting may be enhanced by the postponement."

TETLEY WINS

W. R. Tetley's Suit Against Tenice Guerin Withdrawn.

By Mr. Tenice Guerin relinquishing all claims to the property on the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets some time since given him, under a mistaken impression by Mr. W. R. Tetley, the much talked of suit against the former has been withdrawn.

It seems that these two men, who had entered into partnership in a butchering business at the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets, after a few months in business together, by mutual consent, dissolved the partnership. Tetley claimed that a document which he had executed in favor of the defendant, affecting the butchers shop property, was intended to be a five-year lease. He afterwards discovered that the document was not a lease, but an absolute deed to the property to take effect after Tetley's death.

Tetley brought the actions to have the document declared void.

A DEATH IN CAVAN

Mr. Thos. Grandy, and Old Resident of the Township Passes Away.

Cavan has lost another old and respected citizen in the person of Mr. Thos. Grandy, who died on Monday at the age of 61 years. Death was due to paralysis.

The deceased was a son of the late John Granby, also of Cavan Township. Mrs. Grandy was a daughter of the late Charles Cathcart, of Cavan, and she, with a family of three daughters and two sons, survives him. Mr. Grandy's death occurred on Monday at his home in Millbrook, where for some years he had resided.

The late Mr. Grandy was some years ago president of the East Durham Conservative Association, and was a prominent member of that party.

THE TORMENTING COLD that made you wretched last winter will not come back if you take Allen's Lung Balsam when your throat is raw and sore. This admirable remedy is free from opium. Take it in time.

HIGH HONORS TO BRITISH TARS

Prince Louis' Squadron Visits Uncle Sam.

A MAGNIFICENT SPECTACLE

American Squadron Receives the British Fleet with Open Arms.

Annapolis, Md., November 1.—As the fleet of the American squadron boomed an Admiral's salute, every ship of Rear-Admiral Evans' squadron was gaily dressed and the fighting manned by Jackteas in their best duds, when the British cruiser squadron, under command of Prince Louis of Battenberg, steamed into the harbor today. It was a magnificent spectacle, which warmed the heart of every seadog and fanned the enthusiasm of the people of Annapolis to the highest pitch. First came the armored cruiser Drake, 14,100 tons, the Prince's flagship, followed in single line by the Bedford, the Cornwall, the Berwick, the Essex and the Cumberland, each of 9,800 tons. The rules of naval etiquette were closely adhered to in the greeting passed between the two squadrons, and the strictness with which every detail of the formalities was observed made the reception to the visitors highly impressive.

After the British squadron had reached Hawkchorage, the steam launch of the American flag ship, the Maine, took Rear-Admiral Evans and the officers of his staff to the Drake. On board the Drake the customary formalities demanded by naval etiquette were gone through. Rear-Admiral Evans was received by Prince Louis and the greeting of the two commanders was highly cordial, notwithstanding the official character of the meeting. Rear-Admiral Evans welcomed the Prince and the members of his staff and then the usual introductions followed. After the official welcoming ceremony was finished, the Prince invited Admiral Evans and his officers below, where refreshments were served and the ceremonious character of the meeting dropped. After a short time Admiral Evans and his staff returned to the Maine, where they will entertain Prince Louis and his officers at dinner tomorrow.

Later in the day Admiral Evans exchanged visits with the commanding officers of the other ships of the British squadron, and the steam launches of the battleships and cruisers were kept busy all day carrying officers in dress uniforms from one ship to the other. There seemed to be the happiest entente between the officers of the two fleets, and the men on the American ships are impatiently awaiting the time when they will be given an opportunity to fraternize freely with the British visitors and give them substantial proof of the friendly sentiments which they entertain for their Anglo-Saxon brothers. There will be no further entertainment of an official character today, excepting a formal return of the visit of Rear-Admiral Evans by the commander of the British squadron.

The staff of Prince Louis consists of Flag Captain Mark E. F. Kerr, member of the fourth and fifth classes of the Victorian Order; Flag Lieutenant Gerald Sowerby; Secretary Edward P. Shearne, and Engineer Commander William F. Pamphlett. The captains of the British ships are: Charles H. Robertson, the Cesarewitch; Clement M. Farquhar, the Essex; Richard P. Perrice, the Bedford; Charles H. Dare, the Berwick, and Herbert C. Kinghall, the Cumberland. The American squadron under command of Rear-Admiral Evans, which is now in this port, doing the honors of the occasion to the British visitors, consists of the flagship, the Maine, the Missouri, the Alabama, the Illinois, the Kearsarge, the Kentucky, the Iowa and the Massachusetts, belonging to the North Atlantic fleet, and the new armored cruiser squadron, including the West Virginia, the Colorado, the Pennsylvania and the Maryland.

The program for the entertainment of the visiting fleet is quite elaborate and includes many interesting social and spectacular functions. Tomorrow Rear-Admiral Evans will entertain Prince Louis and the British officers at dinner on board the Maine. On Friday Prince Louis and his officers will go to Washington for a short official visit. At three o'clock on Saturday afternoon President Roosevelt will give a reception at the White House in honor of the visitors, which will be followed by a state dinner in the evening. While the Prince and his staff are in Washington, the American officers in this city will do their utmost to entertain the British visitors. There will be a number of dinners, receptions and other entertainments, including a football game between cadet teams.

Prince Louis will return to Annapolis on the night of the fourth or on the following day, and on Monday he and his officers will be entertained by Rear-Admiral Sands, superintendent of the Naval Academy. On the afternoon of Monday the American squadron under the command of Rear-Admiral Evans will start for New York, to be there ready to receive the British squadron, upon its arrival on the 9th. A magnificent naval demonstration has been arranged in honor of the arrival of Prince Louis' squadron in New York.

May Be Out Tomorrow

Toronto, Oct. 31.—Hon. Senator Cox has not yet sufficiently recovered from his recent accident to be able to get about, but his doctor hopes he may be out to-morrow.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 270 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $200,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $30,000.00 to $50,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividends and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.00 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 50 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1901 produced $15,211.50 per hour, every hour, day and night, Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $20,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth as good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock so they would have something that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

TIREDNESS MEANS DANGER

Indicates Faulty Blood and Worn Out Nerves—Build Up or Total Collapse Will Surely Follow

When you're tired all day, bothered by trifles, exhausted with nervousness, be sure there is something wrong.

You need bracing up, need more nourishment in the blood, need a powerful medicine to vitalize the nerves and distribute force and staying power to all over-worked organs.

The most marvelous success is Ferrozone, a nourishing tonic so scientific as to be the admiration of every physician. Ferrozone performs wonders for people in poor health; acts directly on the blood, enriching it with strength and new life that is at once dispatched to all parts of the body. Ferrozone feeds the nerves and vital energies, supplies force, determination and joyous, buoyant spirits.

A case where there was lassitude and lack of strength is told by Mr. David Brown, of [illegible] Box No. 20, Barton, Ont. "About six years ago my health commenced to fail. My hands and feet seemed always cold. I felt worn-out and exhausted, weak as a little child. My face twitched. My limbs and arms commenced to lose their sense of feeling and finally my left side was perfectly numb. All my color left. My appetite ran down. Ferrozone was the first to give me any help. I improved with it very quickly. It toned up the blood and started circulation, so that the numbness gradually disappeared. My condition was perfectly cured by Ferrozone, and I have been well ever since. (Signed) "David Brown."

SPECIAL NOTICE.—To get satisfactory results be sure you get Ferrozone only. Fifty cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.

THE BYE-ELECTIONS

There are six vacancies in the House of Commons, as follows:

Antigonish, vacated by the appointment of Mr. C. F. McIsaac to the Railway Commission.

Assiniboia West, vacant by the resignation of Mr. Walter Scott to lead the Liberal forces in Saskatchewan.

Lambton West, vacant by the death of Dr. Johnston.

Saskatchewan, vacant by the resignation of Mr. J. H. Lamont to become a member of the Provincial Government of Saskatchewan.

In addition, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux was elected for both Nicolet and Gaspe, and when he elects which constituency he will represent there must be an election in the other.

It is not at present probable that the two Saskatchewan vacancies will be filled simultaneously with the others, but it is probable that elections for all the others will be held toward the end of November.

So far as bye-elections may be considered as indications of public opinion in Canada, the series offers opportunity for ascertaining the state of the popular mind in all parts of the country.

THE RUSSIAN CRISIS

The situation in Russia appears to grow steadily worse, and there can be little doubt that it is now more ominous than it has been at any former time, even than it was during the desperate outbreaks of January last. It is little short of a political debacle. Party lines are ignored. Traditional attitudes are forsaken. We do not, of course, expect to see Pobiedonuseff waving a red flag, or to hear Gorky preaching autocracy. But without going to those extremes the most extraordinary things conceivable are happening. Some of the very foundations of the empire seem to be crumbling away.

These amazing occurrences make forecasts futile. Nobody can tell what a day or an hour may bring forth. There have been rumors that the Emperor is meditating and has prepared for flight. We can scarcely believe them, and yet it would be rash to say they are entirely impossible. If there were danger of a repetition of the French terror, his Majesty might well flee, though flight would mean abdication and complete revolution. But, after all, it is not in the Emperor that attention now most turns. Count Witte looms largest of all Russians upon the stormy horizon. He is to this conflict what Mirabeau was to the opening scenes of the French revolution, and we must hope that he will prove to be much more. If he is to be the authoritative head of a potent and responsible ministry he may be able to calm tumultuous popular passions and to guide revolution back to loyalty.

To achieve that, however, it would be necessary for him to do much more than has yet been done, and perhaps more than he has hitherto been disposed to do, for the extension of popular power in the government. For the Russian appetite grows by what it feeds on. A year ago the proposed Douma would probably have been accepted with rejoicings as an entirely satisfactory grant. Now it is scornfully rejected by the thinking and aggressive part of the nation, for this whole sale outbreak is more than anything else a serving of notice upon the Emperor that the Douma and all the rest of the concessions are insufficient and unsatisfactory, and are a mere provocation to more extreme and violent demands. There is talk of Count Witte as dictator. If he were made dictator, with power to grant a popular constituent assembly and a liberal constitution, his dictatorship might be a great success. But if he can only promise a fulfilment of the existing plans, he can scarcely do more than to add fuel to the flames.

MURDER VICTIM IDENTIFIED

Said to be Miss Susan Geary, of Cambridge, Mass.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 31.—Miss Catherine Geary, of Cambridge, has identified the rings found on a hand of the Winthrop dress suit case victim as those of her daughter Susan.

Miss Geary was a chorus girl of "The Shepherd King" Company, and was known on the stage as Ethel Durrell. The young woman disappeared from Boston on September 11.

A second suit case has been found floating in the Charles river, containing arms and legs said to be those of a woman, and the police say there is no doubt that they are the missing members of the torso found at Winthrop. On one of the hands were three rings. The manner in which the limbs were severed from the body indicates that the work was done by a skilled physician.

NEURALGIA may not be dangerous but it hurts. It seems to tear the face with red-hot pincers. Stay indoors and use Perry Davis' Painkiller. The blessed freedom from pain which follows cannot be told.

Ask Your Own Doctor

If he tells you to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for your severe cough or bronchial trouble, then take it. If he has anything better, then take that. But we know his answer; for doctors have prescribed this medicine for over 60 years. We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

A trip around the world in 60 minutes at a mere trifle.

Scores upon scores of people are daily taking advantage of our very liberal and decidedly interesting offer.

Magnificently finished and exquisitely photo-color views in place of the oldtime and antiquated views of the past. A most pleasant and interesting hour to spend journeying around the globe viewing the places of greatest interest, most beautiful scenery, etc., at a mere trifle of cost through our liberal plan. These views illustrate some of the most noted places in the world—mountain scenery both in America and Europe—waterfalls and other famous natural phenomena, some of the world's most famous buildings, places of historical interest and places famous for beautiful architecture or beautiful natural scenery. This set is of the greatest educational value, presenting, as it does, such realistic likenesses of scenes and places that we all should know about. We want every household in this city to have one of these sets. Imagine yourself taken through the Orient, on a trip to California, through the world's Fair to see the splendid scenes as though you were right there on the spot. By a special process, a combination of lithographing and half-tone work, we are able to offer a collection of colored views from every part of the world in the most beautiful, natural and startling life-like color effects, which must be seen to be appreciated. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and beauty of these views. Come and see them. We want each and every household in this city to have a set of these.

It wasn't so very long ago that hundreds of thousands of people spent many pleasant hours with the stereoscope, but heretofore they were compelled to pay enormous prices for views, think of it, as high as 50c each for colored pictures. We sold thousands upon thousands of stereoscopic views, in colors, at 50c each in those days, but imagine each and every view had to be colored by hand. In the past few months we have had repeated demands for them, and being able to secure the latest and most beautiful colored views to furnish to the public at a ridiculously low price, we entered into the stereoscope plan on quite a large scale, and have taken immediate advantage of the International Art Association, who have spent an enormous amount of money to get out special color plates and have finally completed their end, namely: To place on the market thousands of magnificent stereoscopic views, the most beautiful, interesting and exciting scenes from every land, in the grandest and most exquisite natural colors.

Now we come to our great special offer. Read our plan carefully as it describes the stereoscope and tells how to secure the scope and views at almost no cost to you.

First the stereoscope. The Stereoscope is our world-famous "Aluminum Crystal Lens" Stereoscope. Genuine aluminum hood, bound with dark rich red velvet. Frame is of fine finished cherry wood with patent folding handle, folding underneath frame, and sliding bar. The lenses are extra fine quality, selected for clearness and brilliancy, 1¾ inches in diameter, ground from best quality glass and carefully adjusted. This Crystal Lens Aluminum "Scope" has won universal praise from lovers of the beautiful, and as a means of entertainment stands second to nothing.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7.50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 by 1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of lease leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output over $10,000.

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

"Me!" exclaimed Nora, who had listened in increasing amazement. "Are you sure you mean me?"

"Who else could I mean?"

"Mr. Winton," rising to her feet in the agony of that terrible moment, and white even to her lips, "I have promised to marry Clifford Marsden in February."

Winton also rose and stood before her, a grim, dark expression gathered in his face.

"I never anticipated this"—he broken off abruptly. "Then I have only to apologize, which I do most humbly, for having intruded myself and my feelings on you. I shall trouble you no more."

There was a moment's silence.

"I am grieved to grieve you," said Nora, in a voice so low and trembling that she scarce heard herself.

"I believe it, you have a kind true heart. I was presumptuous in hoping to win it. God grant Marsden may make you happy! None can wish you all possible prosperity more warmly than I do. Pray forget that I have momentarily distressed you." He paused, and looked at her intently. "Nora, are you faint? You tremble, you can hardly stand."

He made a movement as if to catch and support her.

"No, no!" she exclaimed. "You must go—you must leave me!"

"I must, indeed," returned Winton. He took and gently kissed her hand, said softly, "I will never intrude on you again. Good-bye, dear, good-bye!" seized his hat, and was gone. Then Nora sunk upon the sofa and buried her face in her hands, her heart filled with the blackest despair. If he had come but three weeks, even a fortnight ago! What was to become of her? Was there no escape? Could she bring him no comfort? The pain in his voice still vibrated on her ear. Even if she could break with Clifford—he, too, loved her well, and she would not willingly hurt him; but oh! how her heart ached for Mark Winton! There was no music in his voice, but what a ring of truth and sincerity! His words were few and simple compared to Clifford's eloquence; but what earnestness they expressed! How did she come to believe so implicitly in Winton's attachment to Helen? Surely Clifford Marsden, who knew both before Helen was married, he ought to know the real facts.

Could Mark Winton have forsaken Helen for her? No; that was impossible! And various important trifles, indicative of his interest in herself from the very beginning of their acquaintance, recurred to her painfully excited memory. Why—why did she allow herself to be so easily misled? How did Clifford come to be so deceived? Did he indeed believe what he asserted? Was she not base, to suspect her affianced husband of trickery because she was miserable herself? And if, as she believed only yesterday, Helen was attached to Winton, the round of wretchedness would be complete! Why had she been so precipitate? Turn which way she would, she was hemmed in by the misery she had caused others. How was she to bear her life? She must let Winton believe in her indifference to him, her love for Marsden. After all, her duty and consideration ought to be for the man she had promised to marry, when she thought another was preferred by the man she loved! Where could she turn for counsel or comfort? None could give it to her. Her wisest, justest course, would be strictest silence as to Winton's amazing avowal. Then there would be no disturbance. Helen would remain on the same friendly terms with Winton, perhaps he might learn to love her. At any rate, she had always heard that men never suffered long from such disappointments.

It was all too, too cruel! To think that through a mistake so slight, so easy to have avoided, she had missed the road that led to happiness—happiness full, complete, soul-satisfying—and made him she loved so well suffer as bitterly as she did herself!

It was an hour of intense, blackest despair, a night of anguish to which there would be no succeeding dawn. To the sorrows, as to the joys, of youth there are no to-morrows. In grief it indignantly rejects the idea of consolation, of being so heartless as to forget, while the suggestion of prudence in pleasure, lest dark days may come, is resisted with scornful certainty of permanent bliss. To Nora the only possible mood that could succeed her present suffering would be the numbness and indifference of mental death! In the bitterness of her remorse for her own hasty action, she wrung her hands, and the splendid engagement-ring, which Marsden had placed upon her hand in addition to the signet he still wished her to wear, fell to the ground unnoticed.

At length she tried to think what she had better do to hide herself from the kindly inquiring eyes of her step-mother. She could think of nothing more original than the inexhaustible excuse—headache; but it would not do to lie down in the safe solitude of her own room. No; she dared not so indulge herself. She would go out and shop. There was plenty to do in that way. She rang, and called for the ever-ready Watson, and explained that she thought the air would do her good, and sallied forth, leaving a message for Mrs. L'Estrange to the effect that Mr. Winton had called and could not come to tea.

It was dusk when she returned, feeling utterly worn out.

"My dear Nora," cried her step-mother, "here is a letter from Mr. Marsden. I wonder what he would say if he knew that you had let the beautiful ring he gave you drop and had not taken the trouble to pick it up?"

"Did I?" with a bewildered look.

"Yes! Bea trod on it as she came in. It is fortunate she is so light."

"Ah! my fraulein, it is not a good omen!" cried the little German governess.

"Oh! we must not talk of omens! How did Bea behave at the dentist's, Helen?"

"Like a little heroine!" cried Mrs. L'Estrange proudly, "and she has chosen a proportionate reward—a monstrous Noah's ark, with the most accurately correct animals ever made out of wool, and fur, and papier-mache. But, Norah, were you wise to go out?"

"Yes, quite. My head ached fearfully, now it is better."

"It may be; but you look wretched. I do not know what Mr. Marsden will say to me when he comes back. I wish you would read his letter. I am anxious to hear what Lady Dorrington says."

"Nothing very pleasant, I fear," said Nora, with a sigh.

"Why couldn't Mr. Winton come this afternoon?"

"Oh! he was obliged to go somewhere else. I imagine he is going away to see his uncle to-morrow."

Mr. Tetly Marries.

A quiet wedding took place on Monday when Mr. Wm. R. Tetley of this city was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Burns, daughter of Mr. Daniel Burns, Park street. Rev. Father McGill performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Tetley, will reside in the city.

An Otonabee Fowl Supper.

Last night there was quite a busy scene about the Post Office corner. A large party of young men and their accompanying ladies, assembled at that point, and entered the 17 conveyances furnished by Messrs. McCollum Bros., the Water street livery men. The destination of this party was the residence of Mr. Geo. Stuart of Otonabee. On arrival, after their six-mile drive, the party enjoyed a fowl supper at Mr. Stuart's. A very pleasant evening, made merry by music, songs, and speeches was enjoyed, the party returning during the wee sma' hours.

$5,000 Insurance on Burnt Tug.

The Times ascertained yesterday that Messrs. Gray and Morin, proprietors of the tug Lakefield burned and completely destroyed at Deer Bay on Sunday last, was insured for the sum of $5,000. Unless the boiler and engines, less injured than anticipated, and the damaged hull are recovered from the waters of Deer Bay, these two young men will be heavy losers. They had a most successful season, and had large contracts secured, that would have kept their tug busy all this fall, until the ice comes, and for a good part of this spring, as soon as navigation opens. It is said they had 28 pairs of good woolen blankets destroyed by the fire, and one of the partners, Mr. Morin had all his clothes burned.

LOCAL INCIDENTS

BY THE TIMES MAN ON THE STREET.

—Last night about seven o'clock the police were notified to place a scarlet fever card at 31 Patterson street.

—There was a rumor current yesterday that the G.T.P. may open shop in Peterboro. The report is not yet corroborated.

—After to-day, during the winter months, the police court sessions will begin at 10 a.m. instead of nine as during the past summer.

—A large double walled consumptive tent, containing doors and windows and two ventilators, has been shipped to a consumptive in Stratford by Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons.

—The Hallow E'en social at the Y.W.C.A. last night was well attended. A pleasant evening, with games, music and refreshments were enjoyed.

—Word was received yesterday from the Gold Lake Hunting party, saying that Messrs. W. Snowden, Harold Snowden and M. Tooley, who have been finding will be home on Saturday.

—Two boys, Ernest Toole and W. McMillin, sons of a woman living in a nearby township have been taken from a home where most debasing conditions existed, and placed in the Children's Aid Shelter.

—The Ladies' Aid Sewing Circle of St. Andrew's church will meeting on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 at the home of Mr. F. L. Robinson, Charlotte street. The regular business meeting will not be held until next week.

YES, IT IS HUMILIATING to have a skin covered with foul eruptions. It is painful, too, for the burning and itching give you no peace. Why not end the trouble and restore your skin to its natural fairness with Weaver's Cerate?

—Messrs. T. Barrie, & Company, the George street furriers, yesterday had a live mink on exhibition in a glass sided box. The mink was on exhibition at their Simcoe street establishment. Messrs. Barrie feed the animal on fresh fish.

—What might have resulted in a serious affair occurred yesterday. As J. E. A. Fitzgerald's coal wagon was passing the corner of Brock and George streets, the king pin dropped out. The immediate result frightened the team, which fled along Brock street. No damage was done.

—Last night's rain and inclement weather saved many a householder from finding his gates and other articles missing this morning. It is time Peterboro's dignity as a city should get up and "do" the absurd nuisance of boys to destroy property and inconvenience taxpayers.

—Park street Baptist church at their Sunday service, collected $70 towards the building fund. A month ago this church collected $325 towards the same fund. Rev. A. H. Brace, the pastor of this very much alive church does not let the moss grow on him, when looking after his church's good.

—The ladies of the city are cordially invited to meet Miss Adams the physical director of the Young Women's Christian Association, at the gymnasium this (Wednesday) morning at eleven o'clock instead of ten o'clock, as formerly announced, on account of services being held in commemoration of All Saints' Day.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

—Mr. Hugh Waddell went to Kinmount yesterday morning.

—Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., went to Toronto yesterday.

—Messrs. Geo. N. Graham and W. McGee intend to go deer hunting next week.

—Miss Mabel Gilleespie and Miss Nellie Hudson have returned from a visit in Toronto.

—Mr. Jack Comstock, who has been visiting friends on Toronto, has returned to the city.

—Miss Georgia Wainwright and Violet Davidson of Peterboro, are visiting friends in Campbellford.

—Miss Annie Long has returned home after spending a two weeks' visit at Inverkeith House, Halls' Bridge.

—Mrs. A. E. Micks, 178 Dalhousie street will receive today, Wednesday, November 1, from 3 to 6 o'clock.

—Mr. Charles Armitage will leave today on a trip to England. He will sail by the Allan liner Bavarian on November 3.

—Mr. Robt. Fair went to Millbrook yesterday morning to attend the funeral of his cousin, the late George Campbell, ex-M.P.P.

—Mrs. (Rev.) F. J. Scott will receive on Thursday, and after this week on the second and fourth Thursdays in the month at 548 Aylmer street.

—Mrs. Roland Tivey and Mrs. J. J. Howden have returned from Ottawa, where they were visiting the former's daughter, Mrs. Storey, for the past few weeks.

—Messrs. Bert. Wallace, W. Lyth, R. A. Dutton and R. J. Munro have returned after attending a Masonic Shrine meeting in the Temple Building, Toronto.

—Mrs. Edward L. McCallum and daughters, of Peterboro, will receive at 125 Delaware avenue on the first and second Fridays during the season.—Toronto News.

—Miss Minnie Graham, of Peterboro, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Lewis, William street.—Mr. H. W. Tremeer, Peterboro, agent Thanksgiving Day with Lindsay friends.

—R. G. Wright, Toronto; Dr. J. K. Barrett, Winnipeg; A. E. Oliver, Toronto; C. E. Swainland, London; D. P. Green, Fort Erie; Thos. Long, Toronto, are guests at the Snowden House.

—Mr. Fred Ray, brother of Mr. S. Ray, the Hunter street tobacconist, has returned from Glen Afton, Manitoba. He is in business now at the locality named, and is making a successful headway.

—The Lindsay Post says: Mr. R. M. Beasley proprietor of Parkers Dye Works Peterboro, was in town yesterday for a few hours.—He appointed Mr. Fred Martin, his Lindsay agent.—Messrs. J. Sullivan and C. Wylie, of Peterboro, called on town friends yesterday.—Misses. R. Lane and J. Fitzsimmons, of Peterboro, were in town yesterday looking up friends.

MILK IS NOW 8 CENTS

Local Dealers Decide That Existing Circumstances Demand a High Price.

To-day the housewives of Peterboro will be somewhat surprised, and disagreeably surprised, to learn that, beginning with to-day, milk will be six cents per quart.

A meeting of Peterboro's dairymen was held last night in Forester Hall. This meeting was attended by about 25 of the city milk dealers and it might be said that the meeting was strictly representative of Peterboro's milk industry.

The milkmen present were unanimous in deciding that, owing to the greatly increased price of feed for cattle, and the well-known high price of labor in this city and county, it was impossible to carry on the business, at a living profit on the old basis of five cents per quart.

It was held, that under ordinary conditions, by spring, the price will be reduced again to five cents per quart.

Now it is up to our local milk inspector to see that the milk sold in this city is strictly pure and of standard quality. The public, while not relishing the raise in price, will not do much kicking provided they get the pure and unadulterated article.

CLOTHES LINE THIEVES

Housewives would do well to leave the family bull dog loose in the yard on washdays, after dark, or bring in their washing.

As noted in yesterday's issue, the Cavanagh House clothes lines were stripped of the washing hanging out, and now two more cases are reported to The Times. This time the sufferers from this miserable style of petty theft, are Mesdames Thorndyke, 459 Stewart street, and Mrs. T. D. Mulholland, who reside in the same neighborhood. Yesterday morning Mrs. Thorndyke found that 15 articles had been stolen from the wash she left out on Monday night. The goods taken, consisted of children's clothes and towels.

Her neighbors, one on each side, Mrs. Sutcliffe and Mrs. Emmerson, although each left clothes hanging out all night in their respective yards, were fortunate enough to be passed by by the thieves.

Mrs. Mulholland had a serious loss as her clothes lines were completely stripped of the family wash.

As long as a town of 15,000 people is policed by four men, two by day, and two by night, it is not to be expected that robberies will not be common. Four men, no matter how keen or active cannot possibly police the many miles of a city the size of Peterboro. As these thieves seem to have a partiality for robbing clothes for infants, this clue should enable the police to make arrests.

ALL SAINTS' DAY

St. John's Church Will Celebrate the 23rd Anniversary of Re-opening.

To-day St. John's church will celebrate two events, All Saints' Day and the twenty-third anniversary of the re-opening of this grand old structure. At 10 o'clock there will be a celebration of Holy Communion in the church. In the evening at 8 o'clock there will be a special memorial service, preparatory for parochial communion, which will be held on Sunday next.

Rev. T. W. Powell, M.A., of Toronto, a powerful preacher, will officiate at both morning and evening services on Sunday next.

PREPARING FOR WINTER

Street Car Company Begin Work at the Open Air Rink To-day.

As noted in former issues of The Times, the Radial Railway Co. of Peterboro, intend this winter to have a fine open air rink at the entrance to Jackson Park. Judging by the unlimited success attending Mr. Larmouth's enterprise, and his adequate handling of all passengers by the cars, who saw the moving pictures there, it goes without saying that the coming rink will prove equally successful. The Street Car Company's experience gained whilst handling the vast crowds attending Jackson Park last summer, will ensure good accommodation for the skaters this winter.

Work will be begun this morning on the waiting room of the rink. This room will be seventy-five by twenty feet, and will have a glass front.

In addition to the waiting room a tool house will be built.

The toboggan slide will not be erected until after the waiting room has been completed.

Work on these will be rushed, so that as soon as the cold weather sets in the rink will be ready for use.

OLD DOCUMENTS

A Commission Signed by Gov. Gen. Sir E. W. Head and a Curious Note.

The Times was yesterday shown a commission that is curious in more ways than one. The document in question is a commission, bearing the great seal of the Province of Upper Canada, appointing Mr. R. W. Ecrett, local inspector of weights and measures, as a Crown notary. The commission bears the date 1859, and in size and general make up, far surpasses those granted in similar cases today. Commissions issued then grant far more powers and privileges of emolument, than notaries received in recent years. The signatures of Sir Edmund Walker Head, Governor-General of British North America, etc., etc., is in itself a curiosity in regard to writing. To one not posted as to its purport, the signature is absolutely indecipherable.

Another curious old document was shown The Times by Mr. J. P. Hurley. It is a promissory note drawn by the president and treasurer of the "Newcastle District Loan Company at Peterboro." The note is printed on one side only of a thin white blank note paper. It reads, in part, "The Newcastle District Loan Company at Peterboro," promises to pay to bearer, at their office in Peterboro, ACROSS COUNTRY.

The signs of the times point to an enormous increase of intelligent public interest in health; to a new generation with purer, stronger blood and therefore more active, braver brains and body. No physically robust, healthy person ever succumbed to grip, consumption, malaria or any other germ disease. But with a weakened system we all have to fight the germs of disease.

Our blood is often in a fertile condition for the growth of bacteria—the germs of disease—because our stomach is disordered or our liver is torpid—in either case our blood does not get the proper nourishment. A torpid liver means a stagnation of the blood and an accumulation of poisons which furnishes a weak spot for bacteria to enter.

To enrich the blood and increase the red blood corpuscles Dr. Pierce years ago found a vegetable compound, which he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, that would quickly cure the bad symptoms by increasing the red blood corpuscles and thereby feeding the nerves on rich blood. This "Medical Discovery" also acts upon the digestion and assimilation of food, so that the blood gets its proper elements from the products of digestion. Feed the lungs, stomach and heart on rich red blood and you have surely a healthy body which will throw off the germs of disease which lurk everywhere. Get as near nature's way as you can. A medicine made entirely from botanical extracts and which does not contain alcohol is the safest. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains neither alcohol nor narcotics.

Undesirable Local Dwellers.

Now that local option is sometimes not only talked of as a remote possibility for this city, but is actually in evidence within this county, it behooves both the people, the police and the hotelmen to weed out those who, having no ostensible means of support, yet always have money gained in ways known to themselves and suspected by others. There are too many men in this city without visible means of support, who are too too many men in this city without visible means of support, who are too lazy to work, but still hang round the cheaper hotels and always have money for beer. They are not desirable citizens from either the general publics point of view, nor from that of the hotelmen whose places they haunt. A George street hotelmen recently told a Times representative that he was a frequent loser by young men who hang round the places sponging for drinks or looking for "a sucker to skin." He has of late turned out several of these gentry and refuses them admission to the house. Should all hotelkeepers insist on keeping such men out of their places, there would be less talk of local option.

Mr. Burnham's Lecture.

Last night Mr. J. H. Burnham delivered his lecture, entitled "Indian Women," in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. The lecture was held under the auspices of the Women's Art Association of Peterboro, and was well attended, many of the city's society leaders, and best read people being present. Mr. Burnham handled his subject in masterly way, showing a deep acquaintance with Canadian history. Mr. Burnham, notwithstanding his great erudition used language that made his subject not only intelligible but vastly interesting to all present.

Patrols Re-Appear Cossacks at Work

Mobs Take Possession of Several Russian Cities and Force Authorities to Release Political Prisoners--Riot and Anarchy.

Vitebsk, Russia, Nov. 2. — Troops were employed to disperse red flag crowds here yesterday. Seven persons were killed during street rioting and [illegible] Jews, and many people were wounded.

Elizabetgrad, Russia, Nov. 2.—The crowds here yesterday turned on the Jews, and plundered their stores.

Bogorol, Russia, Nov. 2. — In the midst of the jubilation yesterday over the manifesto giving a constitution to Russia, the railroad men and telegraph operators joined in the strike.

Saratoff, Russia, Nov. 2.—This city has voted an address of thanks to the Emperor for granting a constitution to the people of Russia.

Ekaterenburg, Russia, Nov. 2.—On receipt of the news of the promulgation of the Imperial manifesto giving a constitution to Russia the railroad men decided to return to work.

Flock, Russia, Nov. 2.—The population of the city paraded the town all day in celebration of the proclamation of the constitution for Russia.

Kieff, Russia, Nov. 2.—The populace seized the town hall yesterday, and revolutionary speeches were being delivered to the crowd from the balcony when Cossacks appeared. Some of the people inside the building were armed, and a regular engagement followed, resulting in many being killed or wounded on both sides. The Cossacks finally routed the crowd and captured the building. After dark the Jewish quarter was sacked.

Helsingfors, Finland, Nov. 1. —The strike continues, but no disturbances have occurred to-day. There are no troops or police in the streets, which are patrolled by the citizen militia, mounted and on foot.

Hargaranda, Sweden, Nov. 2. — WeLattended meetings at Kemi and Torneo, Finland, to-day adopted resolutions demanding that the gendarmes be disarmed and leave [illegible] and threatening that if the government refuses the people would decline to answer for the consequences.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 2.—A light fall of snow covered the city with a white mantle during the night, but yesterday a dreadful pall seemed to hang over the city on the order of the crowds already exhausted by the jubilation of yesterday. General Trepoff's warning to the manifestants to prevent disorders, coupled with the re-appearance of patrols of loyal and loot soldiers, also exerted a restraining influence, and the agitators experienced difficulty in again arousing the proletariat. Many strikers among the railroad men are ready to return to work, and there is in favor of continuing the struggle have difficulty in holding the majority. The students and Social Democratic leaders who continue to declare that nothing but a Democratic Republic will suffice are using every means in their power to keep up the enthusiasm and drive the people into armed collisions with the troops. A score of big meetings are announced for to-day. An official thanksgiving service is announced.

POPULACE IS DIVIDED.

The news from the provinces show that the whole empire must have plunged into great excitement yesterday. Everywhere the announcement of the issuing of the manifesto granting Russia a constitution aroused the people to a high pitch of enthusiasm, but everywhere the populace was divided into two camps, as in St. Petersburg, those who accepted the boon of freedom with intense joy, and who are now denominated loyalists, and the extreme radicals, under the leadership of the students, Social Democrats and revolutionary organizations, who used the opportunity to preach the complete overthrow of the Government. Gladness and sanguinary conflicts occurred at many places.

In some towns the mobs obtained control, and the authorities were forced to obey their demands for the release of the political prisoners. This was the case at Rybelostok. Cossacks were turned loose and beat the crowds at Kazan, Kishineff, Kief and other places.

COSSACKS CHARGED MOB.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 2.—The first encounter to-day occurred with the university in the Vasili Ostrov district, where the students early today resumed the delivering of inflammatory speeches to the gathering crowds. Toward noon, when the quay was a solid mass of workmen and demonstrators a squadron of Cossacks charged, and, using their whips and the flats of their sabres drove the crowd along the river [illegible] were injured by being trampled upon and were taken to an adjoining hospital.

THE DEADLY GLANCING BALL

Gold Lake Farmer Discusses Deer Shooting.

TOO MANY HUNTERS OUT

Relates His Own Mother's Narrow Escape From Death

A farmer living in the vicinity of Gold Lake was yesterday afternoon heard by a Times representative in [illegible] the principal witness in the William [illegible] case. This witness was [illegible] fatally ran from bullets of local deer-stalkers. This man was heard to say:

"Last year I was watching my hound Dick playing with a rabbit skin while the breakfast was stewing, when on a sudden he seemed to be thrown over on his side, gave a yelp and before I could get to him he was dead, with the tip of his heart shot away.

"That was done by a fellow who stood on a hill a mile away and fired at a small pond to see how his new rifle carried. Of course, he never thought of the ball glancing, or where it would go before it stopped.

"You remember Jim Regan's cow?' another farmer interposed. "Jim was driving her out of the underbrush where she had hidden her young calf, and all at once she let out a bellow, and went down on her knees, struggled and died. One of those silver coated bullets about four inches long had gone through her lungs and heart, and yet Jim never heard a sound, and the clearing was only a few acres across.

"You can never tell how far those bullets will travel through the woods.

"About two years ago, some young fellows from Peterboro went over my land and through a long piece of brush to the next clearing, very nearly twomiles. They had a scrap with a bear, fired a good many shots at it, and go: him at last with the skin ruined. It was that full of holes.

"Next morning I noticed a crack in the door, and on the other side of the room was a bullet lying crosswise in the log, just imbedded in the wood. What most bothered me was the height of the hole.

"One of the young sports had aimed downward and low at the bear, and as you'll see in my kitchen the ball was sailing along over five feet up when it reached our place. I expect that it was the knocking about among the trees that altered its elevation.

"But I often thought that if the shooter had been an hour earlier, he would have caught mother at the kitchen table, and that would have been the last of her."

"Is there any need for these long range rifles in the woods?" the men were asked.

"Not a bit of it," was the reply. "It never happens that you get a chance at a deer at a range longer than half a mile. The greater number are killed at less than the really distance.

"Across lakes or swamps you sometimes get long shots, but never in the woods. In fact, the best shooting I see done nowadays is with such rifles as we used twenty years ago, with a .44 bullet. You know you can get lots of fun after the deer with a good shotgun, and many a good hunter uses nothing else now that the woods are so full of men in the fall.

"But the trouble is that when a young fellow has fooled himself into paying a big price for a small bore, he hates to give it up, or to come down of one of the old style guns."

"Don't you think it would be a good plan for hunters and guides to wear hats of red or some other prominent color?"

"Oh, pshaw, no!" was the contemptuous reply. "You would hardly ever get venison with the average city man along, and there would be no protection in that way.

"The chances are about two to one in favor of the deer when the still hunter is dressed right. They would be increased a deal if hunters took to wearing colors.

"No one ever mistook a man for a deer if he could see him. The trouble with the murdering greenhorn is that he fires point blank into the woods when he sees the boughs move, because his excitement will not let him keep still and wait.

"Most of the gun accidents in the woods are caused by men who never saw what they are really aiming at at all. Of course, no real sportsman ever fires until he sees the spot upon the deer he ought to hit.

"Oh, yes, I know the Indians used to wear gaudy colors sometimes. But that was not, as some say, because the deer doesn't mind bright colors. It was a bit of bravado and meant to show how good a hunter the man was when he could so hide himself from the deer in spite of the red or particolored shirt or scarf as to get near enough to kill them. It was the young bucks, never the old hunters, who wore colors.

"The pure fact of the matter is that there are too many people going to the woods nowadays. Men who really know nothing about firearms, who only handle guns for maybe three weeks every year, cannot know anything about the right way to use them in the woods.

"By and by the fad will pass away, and only real hunters will hunt. The others will find some other amusement and hunting will be safe for the hunters once more."

WITNESS WAS INTOXICATED

Severely Reprimanded by Judge MacMahon in Assize Court.

Toronto, Nov. 1.—Judge MacMahon found it necessary to severely reprimand the principal witness in the William [illegible] case this morning. The witness was in a state of partial intoxication, and mixed up his evidence garnishing in introducing irrelevant remarks.

"Witness," said his Honor, finally, in a stern tone. "Witness, if you do not keep quiet and pay attention to the questions asked, I'll have to send you down. You are intoxicated." This somewhat quieted the witness, and the case was proceeded with.

When the evidence was concluded, Judge MacMahon addressed the jury, and stated that there was not sufficient evidence to convict a man of so serious an offence. The prisoner was given a warning and discharged.

Settlers for Canada.

London, November 1.—Rev. W. H. Fitchett, of Melbourne, author of many popular books, writing of his latest voyage to England, speaks of the large number of farmers leaving Australia and New Zealand to settle in Canada. They were all men with capital and experience, he said.

ATHLETIC WORLD

BY OUR SPORTING EDITOR

RUGBY.

The lig skin pushers had a practice last night in the rink, and Capt. Burtubise, put the boys through their facings, in a way that promises well for Saturday's game.

* * * *

There should be a big crowd at Saturday's game. The locals have always themselves worthy of support, the sport will be fast and furious from kick of until time is called, and rugby is one game into which no suspicion creeps. There should be at least eight hundred people next Saturday with sand enough, and local pride in a good home team to attend the game.

Buffalo Hotel Man Is Under Suspicion

Police Suspect Him of Murder of Young Woman Near Hamilton--Arrest Will Follow If Witnesses Identify Him as the Man.

Hamilton, Nov. 2.—The authorities at work on the Barton mystery have a clue to Buffalo—the best yet. The Buffalo authorities have been working quietly on this case for the past few days, and [illegible] with the Provincial and Hamilton police. So nicely did the story containing this clue, fit in every detail with the circumstances of the murder that [illegible] suspect, a Bohemian, has been under surveillance for the last few days.

Some time this week, probably tomorrow, Provincial Detective Greer will take witnesses to Buffalo who may they can positively identify the man if he is the right one. The suspect answers almost perfectly to the description, with the exception that he is slightly shorter than some people describe the murderer as being.

The police believe a mistake could easily be made in the height. The fit given the police was that the hotel man left with a woman answering the description of the woman for this Falls on Oct. 7, and returned alone Tuesday, Oct. 10th. The murder took known on Oct. 9th. The woman has not been seen since, and no one knows where she is. The time the suspect was away from Buffalo fits nicely with the coming of the mysterious "W. Wilson and wife, Cleveland," to Hamilton.

Greer will also take china, photographs and other effects of the victim with him. He spent yesterday following up a clue east of Hamilton. It is understood that another Buffalo man is under suspicion. If witnesses identify either of these, an arrest will follow shortly.

STRIKERS HEARD FROM

Leatherworker Writes Giving The Men's Side of the Gunsolus Trouble

In Monday's issue of The Times, we noted that there is a strike on at Mr. Gunsolus harness shop. As this journal is always ready to give fair treatment to all, we insert below, a letter received last night from a correspondent whose nome de plume is Leather Worker. The writer tells the story of the present trouble from the men's standpoint, and reads as follows:

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—In your issue of the 31st we notice that you have some information on the Leatherworkers' strike at C. E. Gunsolus' harness shop, Hunter street. Now it is true that the men are out, but only three out of the four men employed, as the employer's son who was a union man went back to work. The highest wages paid to any of the four employes was $1.50 a day. Are these fair wages for a mechanic who has served three years to learn his trade?

It is not the intention of the men to use the daily papers for argument but they would like the public to understand this matter fairly, and judge for themselves, whether $1.50 a day is living wages for any one now that every article purchased is so dear.

Mr. Gunsolus' employes have nothing personal against him, all they ask for is a settlement fair to men as to the employer.

Yours truly,
LEATHERWORKER.

NEW OPERA HOUSE

Will Open Nov. 13th with "The Yankee Consul."

Mr. Rupert Bradburn, the enterprising manager of the new Opera House, has been pushing work along as far as compatible with possibility. This new home of the drama, the Grand Opera House, will, two weeks from yesterday open its doors to the public with the first attraction, that of the big musical success, "The Yankee Consul," one of the best comic operas that has ever been seen in Canada.

Mr. Bradburn was in Toronto yesterday completing arrangements for this great attraction.

"The Yankee Consul" was one of the best attractions given in Toronto during the last theatrical season, and Mr. Bradburn is fortunate in securing it for his opening bill here.

THE REVOLT IN GERMAN AFRICA

For Two Years, Hereros and Hottentots have been Fighting Kaiser's Soldiers.

OVER TWENTY YEARS' WORK

Rebellious Tribesmen on Good War Footing and Still Hold Greater Part of Colony.

London, November 1.—Fighting still goes on in German South-West Africa. Here is the news of the latest German mishap, sent from Cape Town under date of October 4:

It is officially announced that a Hottentot force, under the chiefs Morenga and Morris, on or about Saturday captured ten transport wagons which were on their way to Warmbad. Two Cape Boers were killed. The Germans have also had fifteen soldiers killed at certain signaling stations.

For almost two years the Germans have been engaged in combating rebellion in their South-West Africa protectorate, nor is there any prospect of the speedy restoration of peace. The trouble began in November of 1903, when the Bondelswart tribe of Hottentots attacked the German station of Warmbad, in the south-east part of the country, not far from the Orange River.

RISING OF THE HERREROS.

Colonel Leutwein, the governor of the colony, with the small force at his disposal, had not succeeded in overcoming the Bondelswarts when, in January, 1904, the Hereros, the dominant tribe in the central and north of the protectorate, rose in revolt and besieged Windhoek, the capital. Numerous, well armed, fleet of foot and born fighters, the Hereros were formidable foes. For a time the Germans were obliged to act entirely on the defensive. Reinforcements, which have up to the present time reached about twenty thousand men, were sent out, and in June, 1904, General Von Trotha assumed command of the troops. In November of that year he superseded Colonel Leutwein in the governorship of the colony.

Meanwhile, in August, 1904, the Germans had inflicted a severe defeat on the Hereros in their mountain fast-nesses of the Waterberg. Their chief, Maharero, however, continued a guerilla campaign and small bodies of Germans were constantly defeated.

The troubles of the Germans were greatly increased by a general rising in October and November, 1904, of the Hottentots under Hendrik Witbui, a christian who had restored the establishment of German rule in 1893, but had been won over by Colonel Leutwein.

GOVERNOR BECOMES DESPERATE.

In April, 1905, Von Trotha announced the suppression of the Herero revolt. This was untrue, for the Hereros continued in possession of most of the colony. In May last Von Trotha put a price on the head of Witbui and other chiefs, and this was followed up by a proclamation that every male Herero found in the colony would be shot—clear evidence of the failure of his campaign. Prince Von Bulow intervened and ordered the repeal of Von Trotha's proclamation. Von Trotha has since been succeeded by Herr Von Lindequist, who has instituted more pacific measures.

The damage done to the colony is incalculable. Nearly all the results of twenty years' colonization have been lost. Both Hottentots and Hereros have suffered severely, but they retain their military organization intact.

The causes of the rising are obscure but hostilities were precipitated by an attempt of the Germans to register rifles in the possession of the Bondelswarts, while the Hereros were incensed by the malpractice of German traders.

Police Court

At yesterday's police court Dan Shanahan was tried for vagrancy. P. C. Stewart testified to the prisoner's having no visible means of support, said he had his pants on when arrested in bed at his mother's house. Had 35 cents in his pockets when arrested, Cross-examined by Mr. McWilliams, Shanahan's counsel, said prisoner had been he thought, in Toronto, until about a month ago. Mr. McWilliams asked P. C Stewart if he had anything to do with laying the information against prisoner. His worship, however, said the policeman need not answer this question.

P. Brady, the next witness, knows the prisoner, who has no employment at present. Prisoner worked for him perhaps a year altogether, some time ago. To Mr. McWilliams, said prisoner had driven team for the Electric Works for a while.

Mr. Bates, next witness, knows prisoner. Did not know whether prisoner works or not. Witness did not know of any complaint having been made about Mrs. Shanahan's house. Thinks she works every day.

Mr. Cavanagh has known prisoner since he was a child. Does not know whether prisoner has worked or not. Does not know whether prisoner has any fixed place of abode or not. Shanahan and his friend Stevenson were in his house yesterday and he did not order him out. Shanahan asked him for a job in the shanties on Monday.

Martin Connors said Shanahan has no work at present, but does not know where he lives. Stevenson and Shanahan met him a few days ago tried to sell him a ticket for a raffle, in which the prize was a buggy, but he was not wanting a buggy just then. Shanahan has been out of town lately so did not know whether he has worked or not.

P. C Adams has known Shanahan since boyhood. As far as he knows, Shanahan does nothing. Sees him on the streets and around hotels.

The Chief of Police then described five convictions against the prisoner.

Mr. Geo. Graham said he wanted the court to understand that he did not want the prisoner argued his matter at all, if he did come he would get out quickly.

Shanahan, examined by Mr. McWilliams testified to having worked on a railroad, 12 miles out of Toronto, for several months, and then in Buffalo for several months. During the past three weeks he has applied for work to the Dickson Co. He also said he had applied to Mr. Cavanagh for work.

The chief then withdrew the charge of vagrancy against Stevenson, after several other witnesses in the Shanahan case had given evidence corroborating former witnesses.

Mr. McWilliams made a strong appeal for his client, saying that he had only come home for a holiday on his mother's invitation. He was only as many more did, taking his annual three weeks' holidays. His worship reserved judgment.

The chief then swore out information against Shanahan and Stevenson for selling tickets to dispose of a horse and buggy by lot. This comes under the lottery act. The prisoners pleaded guilty to selling the lottery tickets, and claimed they did not know it was against the law. Mr. McWilliams claimed that even churches sold lottery tickets. His worship remarked that the prisoners did not sell the tickets in the name of God. Shanahan he allowed to go on suspended sentence on the vagrancy charge provided he leaves town at once, his worship making some uncomplimentary remarks as to his desirability as a citizen of Peterboro.

On the lottery charge, his worship imposed a fine of $50 on both Shanahan and Stevenson, said fine to be paid forthwith. Mr. McWilliams made a strong appeal for greater leniency. He compared the fine of $50 imposed on his clients with that of $00 imposed, some them past, on Gagnon and Harkness, who were fined $00 each for carrying on an illegal game on the fair grounds. Mr. McWilliams said that these two men were carrying on a wholesale business in swindling the public, whilst his clients Shanahan and Stevenson, were only doing a little petty business, involving 15 cents a ticket, in a game where there was no attempt at fraud.

The magistrate intimated if much more talk was made he would impose the full penalty of $2,000 in each case. In default of immediate payment, or until such time as the $50 fine imposed on each prisoner is paid, it will be 60 days in jail. The magistrate said he was determined to stop the selling of such tickets to drunken men.

ROYAL ARCANUM TO FACE COURT

Legality of New Rates Will be Fought Out Next Month.

New York, Nov. 1.—Justice Maddox, in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn yesterday, dissolved the injunction restraining the Supreme Council of the Royal Arcanum from suspending James Mack for refusing to pay the assessments according to the new rate, but the Justice expressly stated that he did so only on the promise of counsel for both sides that they would bring the case to trial on November 20. Mack obtained a temporary injunction some ten days ago. In denying the motion to make the injunction permanent, and in dissolving it, Justice Maddox said he was actuated by a desire to protect the interests of the widows and orphans of the dead members, as a permanent injunction would have the effect of tying up the funds of the order.

The Post Office Nuisance.

The many hundreds of citizens who daily, on business bent, visit our local post office, have often noticed the crowd of young girls and children who at certain times of the day, congregate on and in the building. There are scores of young people who seem neither to get, nor expect letters or other mail, but who yet make the post office's already limited accommodation for public utility a rendezvous for gossip and, in some cases, the sought-for mate. Yesterday afternoon, owing possibly to the inclement weather, several groups of young girls made such a racket in the post office, that Mr. Irwin, the caretaker, in desperation, ordered them to either get out, or cease making this public office a bedlam. The noise before, the caretaker interfered reminded one of a cage of parrots in a state of partial intoxication.

Borden Banquet.

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 1. —Mr. R. L. Borden has retired from the practice of law in Nova Scotia, having separated from the law firm which bears his name as the senior partner six months ago. His retirement from practice in Nova Scotia was marked by a banquet at the Halifax Club last night, given in Mr. Borden's honor by the Nova Scotia Barristers' Society. Mr. W. B. A. Ritchie, president of the society, was in the chair, and proposed the health of Mr. Borden.

Chinese Murder Five Missionaries.

Hong Kong, Nov. 2.—Five American missionaries it is believed, have been murdered at Liuchow. Details of the affair have not yet been received.

Dr. Eleanor Chestnut, Mrs. F. C. Mackie and child, and Mr. and Mrs. Peake are victims of the disturbance at the Liuchow mission.

Another New Line.

Montreal, November 1.—It has been reported from Western Ontario that the Canadian Pacific Railway has been trying to get into the Niagara district, and that steps had been taken recently towards this end. The report grew out of the fact that the Buffalo, Niagara and Toronto Railway is now seeking incorporation to build a line in the Niagara district, touching St. Catharines, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Fort Erie, and Port Colborne. As the Canadian Pacific has been making considerable extensions in Ontario of late and it has been naturally a source of surprise that the great Canadian line has not yet connected with this rich territory, the rumor took shape that the new company had the Canadian Pacific behind it, and that it was really the larger road that was trying to enter the Niagara country.

"The Canadian Pacific Railway is not behind the scheme in any way." This was the authoritative statement made today by those who guide the destinies of that line. When asked as to the truth of the report, the President of the Canadian Pacific gave an emphatic denial. Little is known in the West about the Buffalo, Niagara and Toronto Railway, as the names of those interested in it have never been divulged.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 270 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 16,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $300,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $30,000.00 to $50,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividend and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 60 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.50 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 60 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is for the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionaires get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1904 produced $15,511.50 per hour, every hour, day and night. Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $30,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on D. C. stock as they would have something that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

HEALTH FOR WOMEN

Mrs. Emma Daigle of Moncton N B., Sends an open Letter to All Sufferers.

Most women are tired when they wake up. Housework drags along with great difficulty. Nervousness is always present, headaches seldom depart, tears are ever ready to flow.

But there is a cure, a true specific for women's ills that restored a prominent lady in Moncton, Mrs. Daigle, who tells the following experiences:

"About a year ago I had a serious sickness, sort of a general breakdown. My digestion failed entirely and I was able to eat but very little. I took violent stomach pains and suffered terribly from headaches. My doctor said it was "nerve exhaustion" and I might never be well. My troubles increased, for as I grew weaker I became subject to neuralgia and rheumatism. Sleep finally forsook me and I almost lost heart. Different medicines, didn't help. Doctors couldn't do me any good. I was desperate when I heard of Ferrozone. The first box convinced me it was just what I needed. It toned up my stomach, gave me a splendid appetite and then my recovery seemed easier. Ferrozone increased my weight several pounds, has restored my nerves, given me a good color and strength such as I never had before. For the weak and sickly I can truthfully recommend Ferrozone." (Signed) Emma Daigle.

REMEMBER: No mere stimulant or alcoholic concoction can take the place of the nerve and blood nourishment contained in Ferrozone. This true tonic always does what is claimed for it. Sold everywhere in 50c. boxes or six for $2.50. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

THE NEW CHINA.

The new Chinese Minister in France, Liu Shie-Shun, has been talking freely about the future policy of China to a French journalist. Doubtless, he said, the Chinese are about to Europeanize themselves. The Empress is resolved to facilitate European enterprises in China, and the Emperor is not likely to oppose them when he reigns alone. As to the so-called "yellow peril" and the million soldiers whom China could arm, he remarked that many are apt to forget the pacific character of the Chinese. In a few years China will have an army and navy reorganized on European lines, but for purely defensive purposes. As to the rumors that Japan is resolved to militarize China, and has filled that country with instructors and even agitators, he characterized them as newspaper inventions and exaggerations. Japan and China, he pointed out, are different countries. The Chinese will Europeanize themselves independently of Japanese influence. They are sending students to Europe, who, when, matured by experience, will become the advisers of the Crown. There are 50 in France, 150 in Germany, 100 in Belgium, 70 in London, and 10 in Austria. Mr. Liu Shie-Shun is convinced that in the near future all China will be opened up to foreigners, but the latter, he says, will have to be amenable to the laws of the country, which will be remodeled upon the European pattern. In the new China foreigners would have to abandon the privilege of ex-territorially, which they have enjoyed for so long.

China is waking up, and when she is fully awake she will be worth attention and quite likely will demand it.

A PEAT EXPERIMENT.

Peat briquettes are now used on the Boston and Maine railroad. The utility of the fuel is being here demonstrated, with the possibility that millions of tons of peat and the creation of a rival to coal and water power may result from it. Watching the operation of the engines that use the peat is the inventor of the apparatus for preparing peat, who believes that he is about to revolutionize the conditions of manufacturing in districts far from coal fields. It has been found that the peat briquettes make an exceptionally hot fire and that the cost is less than that of coal, while little smoke comes from the smokestack. The only disadvantage that has appeared is one that will disappear if the use of the briquette becomes universal. Peat fuel cannot be used with coal in the same locomotive. One kind of fuel must be employed or the other. The peat briquettes have not been tried yet for long railroad runs, for the reason that depots of supply would have to be established along the [illegible] all through [illegible] and [illegible] supply.

THE S. A. IMMIGRANTS

The public a few days ago announced that a large number of emigrants were sent forward to Canada under the auspices of the Salvation Army. Though the report of Mr. Rider Haggard has not yet received Government sanction, the Army is going on with the work outlined therein with its accustomed energy. At a meeting in Toronto the other day, six officials were appointed with headquarters at central points throughout the Dominion, whose duty it will be to keep in touch with the farmers and other employers of labor with a view to being able to place immigrants immediately on their arrival.

The Salvation Army has long been engaged in immigration work, and these new officials are doubtless appointed to provide for the further extension of those activities. The new agencies will, however, further prepare the Army's machinery in case the British Government calls upon them to carry up a larger task.

THIEVES ROBBED THE DEAD.

Woman Claimed Sailor's Body to Secure His Money.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 1.—When Captain McDonald was last month with the steamer, she foundered on Lake Superior, he had fifteen hundred dollars in his possession. No money was found on his body. Since then three Bayfield, Wis., men have been arrested with wet and mutilated bills in their pockets. Among the saloon was John McLachlin, of Watford, Ontario, upon whose body one hundred and fifty dollars was found. A woman, who claimed to be relative, claimed and cared for the body. His mother now writes from Watford that she knows of no one who had any right to claim the body. The Bayfield authorities are looking into the matter.

Canada's Future.

London, Nov. 1.—John A. Hobson, the well-known economist, writing to the Daily Chronicle from Canada, says the greatest source of Canadian power is the broadcast, boundless and even reckless confidence in her power of achievement, following in this respect the United States. This faith is certain to have important political bearings when Canada has leisure to think out her political course.

Lord Curzon is Ill.

Lahore, British India, Nov. 1.—The retiring Viceroy, Lord Curzon of Kedleston, who has been making a farewell tour of India, is prostrated here with fever, brought on by exposure to the sun. His departure from Lahore has been indefinitely postponed.

A trip around the world in 60 minutes at a mere trifle.

Scores upon scores of people are daily taking advantage of our very liberal and decidedly interesting offer.

Magnificently finished and exquisitely photo-color views in place of the oldtime and antiquated views of the past. A most pleasant and interesting hour to spend journeying around the globe viewing the places of greatest interest, most beautiful scenery, etc., at a mere trifle of cost through our liberal plan. These views illustrate some of the most noted places in the world—mountain scenery both in America and Europe—waterfalls and other famous natural phenomena, some of the world's most famous buildings, places of historical interest and places famous for beautiful architecture or beautiful natural scenery. This set is of the greatest educational value, presenting, as it does, such realistic likenesses of scenes and places that we all should know about. We want every household in this city to have one of these sets. Imagine yourself taken through the Orient, on a trip to California, through the world's Fair to see the splendid scenes as though you were right there on the spot. By a special process, a combination of lithographing and half-tone work, we are able to offer a collection of colored views from every part of the world in the most beautiful, natural and startling life-like color effects, which must be seen to be appreciated. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and beauty of these views. Come and see them. We want each and every household in this city to have a set of these.

Yellow Stone Park, U. S. A.; The Swiss Alps; On board a Russian Man-of-War; Scene from a Klondyke Camp; The Famous Ferry Depot, San Francisco; Cathedral from the Grand Canal, Rotterdam; Moulin Rouge, Paris; Street Scene, Mexico City; Emperor Wm. II Inspecting a Regiment; Chickamauga Park; Cotton Plantation Scene; On the Pike at the World's Fair, St. Louis; Holiday Street Scene Parade in Havana, Cuba; Scene Showing a Public Well, Pekin, China; Lookout Mountain; Steamboat Scene on the Mississippi; Garden of Gethsemane, Palestine; Scene Showing the Famous Southern Trestle; Hauling Trains Through Mountains in the South; The National Capitol at Washington, D. C.; The Pantheon at Rome; Victory Monument; Leipsic; Luna Island at Niagara Falls; David's Judgment Seat, Jerusalem; Interior View of President Diaz' Palace, Mexico; Ostrich Farm, Egypt; Royal Gardens, Dresden, Germany; (very beautiful), Palm Garden, Frankfort, Germany; Morro Castle, Havana; Plaza, World's Fair, St. Louis; Bird's Eye View of St. Louis Exposition; The Tomb of Gen. Grant. N. Y., Street Scene of Cairo, Egypt; Street Scene in Venice, Italy; Japanese Royal Garden Scene; Zoological Garden at Berlin, Germany; Ice Cave at Niagara Falls, N. Y., etc., etc., besides dozens of comic, sentimental and interesting views of every nature. These pictures are the genuine Oleo Stereoscopic Views, made especially for this purpose and are executed in a most artistic manner, being a combination process of lithographing and half-tone work enabling a magnificent depth of detail and splendid color reproduction true to life. You cannot enjoy an hour more delightfully than by viewing a set of these beautiful and decidedly interesting pictures.

It wasn't so very long ago that hundreds of thousands of people spent many pleasant hours with the stereoscope, but heretofore they were compelled to pay enormous prices for views, think of it, as high as 50c each for colored pictures. We sold thousands upon thousands of stereoscopic views, in colors, at 50c each in those days, but imagine each and every view had to be colored by hand. In the past few months we have had repeated demands for them, and being able to secure the latest and most beautiful colored views to furnish to the public at a ridiculously low price, we entered into the stereoscope plan on quite a large scale, and have taken immediate advantage of the International Art Association, who have spent an enormous amount of money to get out special color plates and have finally completed their end, namely: To place on the market thousands of magnificent stereoscopic views, the most beautiful, interesting and exciting scenes from every land, in the grandest and most exquisite natural colors.

Now we come to our great special offer. Read our plan carefully as it describes the stereoscope and tells how to secure the scope and views at almost no cost to you.

First the stereoscope. The Stereoscope is our world-famous "Aluminum Crystal Lens" Stereoscope. Genuine aluminum hood, bound with dark rich red velvet. Frame is of fine finished cherry wood with patent folding handle, folding underneath frame, and sliding bar. The lenses are extra fine quality, selected for clearness and brilliancy, 1¾ inches in diameter, ground from best quality glass and carefully adjusted. This Crystal Lens Aluminum "Scope" has won universal praise from lovers of the beautiful, and as a means of entertainment stands second to nothing.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7 50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim of 1500 feet by 1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS.

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in early youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me, guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were clumsy, eyes watered, had sharp pains across the kidneys, Sunbeams in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicine and little relief. Despondency, weak memory, aversion to society, bashfulness, were an alarming part of my symptoms. After three months, went to Mt. Clemens for treatment. Arriving at Mt. Clemens I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kergan. I soon lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through my nerves. I was cured mentally, physically and sexually. I have sent them many patients and will continue to do so."

CURES GUARANTEED OR NO PAY.

Texas Lands

Very Cheap

The Houston & Texas Central Ry. Co. has decided to sell its land grant in Northwest Texas, adjoining Oklahoma. To effect a quick sale and avoid the expense of maintaining sales agencies, the lands have been listed at very low prices.

They are adjacent to the Rock Island main line running diagonally across Oklahoma and Texas. Portions of the tract are well watered and nearly all is susceptible of cultivation. Transportation facilities excellent—big markets within easy reach.

Sale will be made in parcels of 160 acres up to four sections or 2,560 acres to each purchaser. The prices are on a fixed scale—no fluctuation. Taxes are low, terms liberal and warranty deeds given in all cases.

If interested, send quick for descriptive leaflet with full information.

The first person to be informed was Lady Dorrington. That done, there was nothing more to fear.

He did not reach Chedworth till just in time to dress for dinner. There were two country neighbors to share that repast, and the conversation Lady Dorrington wished to have with her brother was postponed till the next morning.

Marsden observed that his sister looked very grave and portentous; but that in no way damped his spirits or lessened his efforts to amuse and interest his sister's guests, which were peculiarly successful. He listened with lively attention to the details Lady Dorrington poured forth respecting Mrs. Ruthven's sufferings and tedious recovery. She feared that the poor invalid would scarcely be able to see him. Marsden begged she might not be asked to do anything not quite agreeable to her.

"It is no question of what is agreeable," said Lady Dorrington severely. "It is of what will be safest for Mrs. Ruthven. You cannot imagine the weakness to which she is reduced. Any relapse now would be fatal. She is anxious to go away to the south of France, or the Riviera, but I trust she will not go alone."

"No; she had much better get some pleasant companion. You will find her one, I dare say. You always have such a supply of admirable persons on hand fitted to fill every possible position."

Lady Dorrington darted an angry, warning glance at her brother, and addressed him no more that evening.

When breakfast was over next morning, as the frost was too hard for hunting, Marsden sauntered into the billiard-room, and was knocking the billiard-balls about by himself, when the inevitable message reached him.

"My lady would be glad to see you, sir, in the boudoir."

"I have been waiting for you this half hour, Clifford."

"So sorry; I did not like to intrude on you till you sent for me," he returned, coming up to the fireplace, and leaning easily against the mantelpiece. "Do you know you are looking wonderfully well, in spite of your nursing worries."

"My looks are of small consequence," said Lady Dorrington, sternly. "I want some serious conversation with you, Clifford; your conduct is very unaccountable and unfeeling. What, may I ask, is your motive for staying in town all this time?"

"Oh, because—because I like it."

"There is something more than that—or rather there is some strong attraction—which I do not understand, to keep you in London! Pray, has it anything to do with Mrs. L'Estrange and Nora?"

"They are very agreeable relatives, and I see a good deal of them," returned Marsden, in a lazy, indifferent way, most irritating to his sister.

"Why, Clifford, you surely would not be so unprincipled as to delude Nora, your own cousin, with the notion that you are in love with her, and you could not be so insane as to think of marrying her? I shall certainly warn Mrs. L'Estrange against you; you are too regardless of everything except your own amusement."

"In this case, I have thought more of my own happiness."

"What do you mean?" in a tone of alarm. "Do you mean to say you have taken one of your wild fancies to poor, dear Nora?"

"I do; and what is more, I have persuaded 'poor, dear Nora' to take me for better or worse."

"Good God!" cried Lady Dorrington. She sat a moment staring at him in silence, as if dazed. Marsden was quite unmoved. "Clifford," gasped Lady Dorrington at last, "your conduct is most dishonorable toward Mrs. Ruthven!"

"How do you make that out?"

"When she was at Eversleigh, everyone thought, judging from your manner—your attentions—that you were engaged."

"Then every one was mistaken."

"I, myself, believed that you were determined to marry Mrs. Ruthven."

"Why? Because I flirted with her? Don't you understand that she is the sort of a woman to whom the end and aim of existence is to flirt? She would not thank you for friendship, however true; for service, however kindly, if you did not offer her the homage of overt flirtation. I never intended to marry Mrs. Ruthven."

"Then you have behaved abominably, and just think of your own interests. Nora L'Estrange has nothing, or next to nothing."

"She has all I want."

"She has nothing you really want; she is a mere distant relative, a nobody; before six months are over, you will be sick of her, and wonder what madness induced you to tie yourself to her."

"I think the madness will last a couple of years," put in Marsden in a low tone, but his sister did not heed him.

"Do be advised by me, Clifford! Break off with Nora L'Estrange, she can not care much about you in so short a time; she is reasonable and unselfish; she would not like to condemn you and herself to the horrible fate of becoming pauper gentry. I protest you drive me to my wit's end; you will disgrace yourself whatever you do. I assure you you have contrived to impress Mrs. Ruthven with a conviction that you intended to marry her."

"I cannot help her being highly imaginative, can I?" asked Clifford quite unmoved. "I never said and certainly never wrote, anything approaching a proposal. Now I have asked Nora to be my wife, and, after some prudent hesitation, she has consented. I was not back out of that."

"Hesitation! Good heavens!" ejaculated Lady Dorrington.

"As to poverty, well, we shall not starve. I have almost come to an arrangement to let Eversleigh, with the shooting, etc., for six hundred per annum; that will help to keep the wolf from the door, eh! sister mine? Then, after a few years' wandering in pleasant places, I shall return a free man, and hold high revels in the hall of my fathers."

"Let Eversleigh!" said Lady Dorrington, aghast, as if this was the lowest depth.

"Yes! Nora quite approves," continued Marsden serenely. "She is prudent, and very resolute for so youthful and charming a wood nymph. She will reform me, and my estate, depend upon it."

"And what—what am I to say to Mrs. Ruthven?" cried Lady Dorrington, pressing her large white hands together.

"Whatever occurs to you," said Marsden politely. "Only that you require no hints from me. I would suggest your telling the simple fact as a matter of ordinary gossip."

"How can you be so unfeeling, so shameless?" exclaimed his sister, her eyes sparkling with indignation. "I would not answer for the consequences."

Exhaustion All Gone!

To-day She is Buoyant With Health and Vital Energy Given by A Medicine Suited to the Female Sex.

There is no medicine for health and strength that accomplishes so much as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. For womanly troubles they have no equal.

Miss Ketie E. Emerson, one of Brockton's popular young ladies, in the following letter voices the conviction of hosts of her friends:

"Two months ago I was completely used up. I was weak and miserable. My strength was gone, and I had no appetite or energy left. What I needed was a blood purifier and systematic tonic which I found in Dr. Hamilton's Pills. To-day I am brimming over with spirits and vigor, good health that came from using Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

No one can over-estimate the true worth of Dr. Hamilton's Pills Their enormous curative power makes one marvel. You soon have richer blood, better appetite, clearer complexion, freedom from weakness and ill-health. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are sold everywhere 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1. By mail from N. C. Customs Collection.

By courtesy of the local custom house officials, we give a comparative statement of the collections made here during October past, with those made during the same month last year. The small decrease is partly explained by the fact that Thanksgiving Day this year, came during October, thus making one business day less than October of last year. The figures are;

Oct., 1905	$30,961.14

Unwelcome Camp Fire.

The Trent Valley Canal surveying party had an unpleasant experience last Sunday night. It seems that all members of the party, except Mr. Archie Rogers had gone to church. Mr. Rogers retired to bed and in the night, after smoking a small pipe at its entrance. After being asleep for a short time he was awakened by flames and smoke that almost stifled him. The clothing that was piled near the tent door had caught fire. He at once carried the burning articles to the water and immersed them. Quite a quantity of the clothing, belonging to members of the party, were destroyed. It is supposed a sudden gust of wind carried the flames of Mr. Rogers's camp fire to the dry clothing. Fortunately the tent was saved.

A SUCCESSFUL EVENING

The Nicholls' Hospital Nurses Hold Enjoyable Masquerade.

That the important and valuable work done or those engaged in the highly commendable profession of nursing the sick, does not involve a thing for amusement fun or the part of those belonging to it is required profession, was proved at Nicholls' Hospital on Hallow E'en.

It has become an annual custom at this hospital for the nurses to hold a masquerade at this season of the year. The nurses on Tuesday night invited some 40 or 50 of their friends to assist in engaging and making the masquerade a success.

Mrs. Richard Hall and Mrs. H. R. Hall were present and thoroughly enjoyed the festivities.

The early part of the evening was devoted to the masquerade, in which 16 of the nurses garbed in pretty and quaint costumes participated.

Among the costumes worn were noted that of the lady superintendent, Miss Coleman, which represented a thankful lady. Other costumes represented an Italian peasant, Fisher lass, Scotch lass, witch, an ghosts, Britannia, Canada, and Orphan.

After supper, which was served at tables tastefully embellished with flowers, fruit and other decorations was over, games and dancing passed the fleeting hours only too quickly away.

LOCAL INCIDENTS

BY THE TIMES MAN ON THE STREET.

—Deer shooting began yesterday.

—Clothes line thieves are operating in town.

—A window smashing case will be ventilated in this morning's police court.

—Yesterday was All Saints Day, so the bell of St. John's was heard summoning the congregation of that church.

—The next sitting of the Division Court will be held before His Honor Judge Weller, on Friday, November 10th.

—A meeting of the Finance Committee, and also of the Council in Committee of the Whole will be held this evening.

—Chief Rosel has a bunch of keys for which he wants an owner. The keys were picked up yesterday on George street.

—On and after to-day, during the winter, the police court sessions will begin at 10 a.m. instead of 9 a.m., as during the summer.

—Mr. G. H. Williamson, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A. took charge of the regular weekly prayer service in St. Andrew's church last night.

—The Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M.C.A. will meet this afternoon at 3.30. Business of great importance is before the auxiliary and every member is requested to be present.

—During the next few weeks, storms will be rife by returning deer stalkers, that would cause Amelia to blush, and break the 10 Commandment, when he felt his own ineffectiveness.

—Mr. J. P. Bryson has joined the staff of Messrs. Lang & Maher, clothiers, and will assist them during the big fall rush. The firm is constantly adding to its number of efficient salesmen.

—The Y.M.C.A. Debating Club held a regular meeting yesterday evening. The subject, "Better Fire Protection for the City," was debated. The strongest arguments were for adequate fire protection.

—The attendance at Jerome K. Jerome's lecture last night, was not as large as the brilliant speaker would deserve. This was owing greatly to the heavy snow fall. All present greatly appreciated the lecture.

—The street cars last night, owing to the unfortunate sudden and heavy fall of snow were materially delayed. There was quite a blockade at the corner of George and Charlotte Sts., where the stranded cars, tied up the whole lines for a long time.

—At the regular meeting of the Victoria County Cheese Board in Lindsay Tuesday, over 2,000 boxes were sold at 11 1-4 cents. All of the October cheese was offered, and the three buyers, Flavelle, Fitzgerald and Brown, got 1,105, 925 and 395 boxes respectively.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

—Mr. John Curtis, of Port Hope, was in the city yesterday on business.

—Mr. Rothwell, superintendent of the Metropolitan Life, left yesterday morning for Midland.

—Mr. Arthur Ostrom, of Vancouver, B.C., who has been in Belleville attending the funeral of his mother, was in the city yesterday on his return to the west.

—Mr. H. Merrick, of Kingston, post office inspector, was in the city yesterday on business. He is well pleased with the way the improvements at the post office have been carried out.

—We are pleased to say that Mrs. A. Whitelaw (nee Miss Carrie Bowman) who has been ill for some time is greatly improved, and is now able to sit up. Her many friends will be glad to hear of her recovery.

—H. Merrick, Kingston; J. O. McCarthy, Toronto; H. D. Jamison, S. Dymont Barrie; G. W. Prescott, Toronto; W. Robbins, Toronto; John Curtis, Port Hope; C. A. McBurney, Montreal; J. H. Orend, Montreal, are guests at the Oriental Hotel.

Raise In The Price of Milk.

As noted in yesterday's issue, the milk dealers yesterday raised their prices from five to six cents per quarts. There was very little public comment on this action, as people knew that the milk dealers are up against a pretty hard job during the winter months. How many of us would like getting out at four a.m. to milk the cows, and then cart the old oaken bucket, frozen fast in the 30-foot well, and then, after completing this first essential, drive through a blizzard several miles to sell some woman a half pint of milk, and "Please be sure to let me know it is three" before going to the next customer.

HALLOW E'EN

The Small Boy Was Less Destructive Than Usual This Year.

Owing possibly to a notice issued by the local police, the ubiquitous small boy was less practically in notice Tuesday night, Hallow E'en than in former years. Many a family seated round the grate, coal stove or register Tuesday night, engaged in their family evening amusement or treat, were startled by a furious fusillade of peas, from a pea shooter, with the small boys "behind the gun." This comparatively harmless methods of blowing off their excess hilarity and youthful ebullition of spirits does not get the small boy, or his elder brother, so badly disliked as when, in years gone by, he used to decorate front doors with ripe egg and fruit that has passed its early youth.

Very few citizens yesterday morning had to start out with divining rod and compass to search for gates and signs that had mysteriously wandered from their proper locations.

It was amusing to walk in the shadowy side of streets on Tuesday night and watch the small boys at work. Those who were detailed to watch the front of [illegible] on George street, were watched for fully an hour by an interested resident of this city in search of amusement. He posted himself in the shadow of a large tree and for about 20 minutes awaited developments. Presently the high falsetto voices of several boys were heard approaching. Then came youthful degrade walked along the pavements, evidently sent out as a scout. His whistle, which the usual manner clear, soon attracted five other lads. A hasty consultation ensued, in the friendly shadow of a fence. Another scout was sent out to the corner, and one to the nearest western turn of the street. The forces again concentrated. With a one-point movement all the party made direct to a set of steps, adding to a small stag.

"Hist! Sshh! Look out fellers," was clearly heard by the concealed enemy. The steps were attacked by two lads at each end and one in the center. A long pull, a strong pull, but the steps were obdurate. One boy was despatched for a crowbar or some such tool.

A gentleman and lady on their way home were heard approaching. The four remaining lads at once had business elsewhere, and vanished. After the danger had passed by, the whole five, this time augmented by a scantling some eight or ten feet long, gathered about the fated steps. After about fifteen minutes hard work by all the conspirators, including the scantling, the steps began to give.

Another interruption then occurred as three different pedestrians passed by. These interruptions meant still more scatterings of the attacking party. Lusty pulling and hauling at last loosened the steps. With a brisk triumphant grin the five picked up the steps and staggered along towards George street, with their capture. Again foot steps were heard, and the five fled in as many directions. Once more the quintette of valiant workers, assembled round their deserted capture. The steps were carried to a nearby yard gate. "Say fellers let's fling them into old ——'s yard, and we'll have a good joke on ——," from whom they had taken their spoils. By actual count, the five lads worked for fifteen minutes getting the steps over the gate. The curtain on this tragedy tell amidst joyous yells and shouts of delight and triumph.

While this gave the boys a good deal of fun, more work, and still no very great harm was done. Hang it all we have all been kids or kidies ourselves once!

SLEIGH BELLS AGAIN

Several Cutters Last Night Scraped Through the Fresh Fallen Snow.

Last night the merry jingle of bells was heard several times along George street. By seven o'clock two cutters, with their accompanying peals of bells passed The Times office. Fully two inches of snow had fallen before eight o'clock. All roofs, pavements and trees in the city had a thoroughly Canadian aspect, as per all pictures of Canada, contained in the London Graphic or Illustrated News. This will calm cold comfort for the users of local huntsmen, who this morning will be seated, rifle in hand, eyes well peeled down over cars, and mouths uttering uncomplimentary remarks about the Clerk of the Weather, on distant runways. We venture a prediction that more than one ardent sportsman, this morning, will encourage his thanking machine, to work overtime on his home comforts and cosy grate fire, as his inside his cabin not daring to move and get his blood circulating, or build a badly wanted fire.

Hyomei Cures Catarrh by Breathing Aromatic Healing Air.

You cannot afford to risk permanent loss of health by taking strong drugs into the stomach in the vain hope of curing catarrh of the nose and throat. The only true way of curing catarrhal troubles is by the use of Hyomei, which is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit.

Hyomei is not a secret remedy, and its formula is given to all reputable physicians. Its base is the famous eucalyptus oil. This is combined with other healing, aromatic gums and balsams, so that when using Hyomei, the air you breathe is filled with germ-killing, health-giving, curative powers. It kills all catarrhal germs and restores the mucous membranes of the nose, throat and lungs to a perfectly healthy condition.

The complete Hyomei outfit, consisting of a neat pocket inhaler, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei, costs but $1.00, and extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents, making it the most economical method of curing catarrh, as well as the most reliable.

If you cannot obtain Hyomei of your dealer, it will be forwarded by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price. Write today for consultation blank that will enable you to get advice of our medical department without charge. The R. T. Booth Company, Hyomei Building, Ithaca, N. Y.

The crown of womanhood is motherhood. But uneasy lies the head that wears the crown or anticipates this condition, when there is a lack of womanly strength to bear the burdens of maternal dignity and duty. The reason why so many women sink under the strain of motherhood is because they are unprepared.

"I unhesitatingly advise expectant mothers to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. J. W. G. Stephens, of Mills, Northumberland Co., Va. "The reason for this advice is that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best preparative for the maternal function. No matter how healthy and strong a woman may be, she cannot use "Favorite Prescription" as a preparative for maternity without gain of health and comfort. But it is the women who are not strong, sickly, [illegible] to whom the benefits received from the use of "Favorite Prescription" for one thing its use makes the baby's advent practically painless. It has in many cases reduced days of suffering to a few brief hours. It has changed the period of anxiety and struggle into a time of ease and comfort.

The proprietors and makers of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb, which they cannot cure. All the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, of Buffalo, N. Y., ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

JUSTICE AWAKES

Gow's Companions, at Time of Shooting, to be Tried on Friday

Yesterday, William and Stewart Murphy, George Gallagher and Edward Dewart, Charles Gow's companions, the evening of the Dunmore fatality were served with summonses to appear before County Police Magistrate Edmison, at the court house, on Friday morning next, at eleven o'clock.

The charge against the young men, in that of having created a disturbance upon a public highway. The information was laid by High County Constable Cochrane, who left this morning for Dunmore township, to serve the summons.

The men charged, it will be remembered, were in company with Gow, and it is alleged, created the disturbance while passing the Hill homestead on the night of the tragedy by shouting and otherwise misbehaving themselves.

It is more than possible the outcome of this trial will bear fruit in production of new light on the subject.

A GROCER KICKS

Exception Taken to Aldermen Getting Public Money.

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—I notice in your paper of Tuesday a list of people who sold goods to the Charity Board of the town. In this list appears the name of one of our aldermen, who is in the grocery business. By the list you print it seems that the largest order for groceries for charity is placed with a firm owned, or mostly owned, by an alderman. Is it fair to other taxpayers in the grocery business to have an alderman use his influence to get nearly $60 worth of orders for his firm, whilst other grocers paying their taxes do not get but a very little slice of the town's orders? Does the law allow aldermen to control the trade of the town's expenditure. If aldermen can get the cream of the orders given by the town, what change do other tax-payers have?

Yours truly.

We fancy our correspondent refers to an account of some $18 rendered by, and paid to, Messrs. F. F. Massie & Co. We might say that Mr. Massie is only one member of a firm embracing several partners, and there is nothing to show that Mr. Massie used his influence as an alderman to get this or these orders.—Ed. Times.

Central Milling Co's Assessment $12,000

This Was Fixed by the Committee of the Whole Council Last Night---Town Must Provide Isolation Hospital---More Snow Plowing Districts.

The City Fathers met in Committee of the Whole last night, when there were present His Worship, Mayor Hall, Bank and Aldermen Hicks, Crowe, Hicks, Totey, Hall, Adams, Scott, Begley, Johnston, and McGregor.

The Engineer was given permission to use a portion of the present fire engine approach to the river on George street, south of Lake street, for the construction of a wharf a few feet north, said wharf to be used by the fire engine when needed.

Mr. Laglante is to maintain the new approach in a good condition.

CENTRAL MILLING COMPANY'S ASSESSMENT.

Messrs. Mulharn, Stothard and Matelartt appeared before the Council in the matter of the Central Milling Company's assessment, which they wanted fixed at $10,000 for 10 years. The mill was assessed last year at $14,500, and this year at $21,400.

The Council were at sixes and sevens for over an hour on this matter, being at a deadlock between a resolution for an assessment at $13,000 and an amendment for $10,000. His Worship finally cast his vote in favor of a motion initiated by Ald. Johnston that the company's assessment be fixed at $12,000. This broke a fourth deadlock when it looked as though the company's assessment would remain as taxed by the assessors at $21,400.

Mr. Mulharn argued that the Central Milling Company should be treated the same as the American flour mills, even though the former's capacity be somewhat greater than that of the latter, whose is a new concern incorporated years after the Central Milling Company had been established. Mr. Mulharn stated that his mill employed 14 hands the year round, had to compete with the Peterboro Cereal Company, and was as much entitled to encouragement by the city, in the way of fixed assessment, as its competitors.

His Worship explained that Mr. Mulrum would not have applied for a fixed assessment on his four milling plant had not a new company offered such co-operation as led to the inauguration of a large company for the manufacture of cereals. In consideration of which the city fixed the assessment of the larger concern, known as the "Peterboro Cereal Company," at $10,000.

Ald. Hall pointed out that in consideration of a fixed assessment of $10,000 the Peterboro Cereal Company were under agreement to erect and have running within eighteen months a flour and cereal mill, grain elevator and warehouse, and employ at least 30 hands. This is a new industry, and as such had under the city's policy, to be encouraged. They employ to-day between 30 and 40 hands.

The argument was here raised by some aldermen that the Peterboro Cereal Company's fixed assessment only applied to their cereal plant, which entered a new industry for Peterboro, but an examination of the by-law showed no such distinction.

Ald. Hall then pointed out that the Peterboro Cereal Company have only a 100-barrel flour mill, with no room for further expansion, while the Central milling plant, has a capacity, according to their prospectus, of 300 barrels.

Mr. Mulharn replied that his mill's capacity is not an average of 150 barrels, working night and day.

His Worship pointed out that had not the new cereal company come forward and amalgamated with Mr. Mulrum, he would not have got a fixed assessment on his flour mill.

Ald. Adams said the Council were not opposed to giving the Central Milling Company a fixed assessment. The question was the amount to be fixed commensurate with their output in comparison with any other similar industry.

Ald. Hicks stated that the report to him from the two companies concerned, over the telephone, gave the capacity of the Peterboro Cereal Company at 150 barrels, and that of the Central Milling Company at 200 barrels. The assessment was fixed for the former concern on their milling plant, and he thought the latter company's assessment should be also based on the capacity they gave him over the phone—200 barrels—at the same rate as the assessment of the Cereal Co.

The point here arose that there is nothing to prevent either company from increasing their capacity, but Mr. Mateleit argued that while that might apply to the cereal company's mills—at present in an unfinished condition, the same could not be said of the Central Milling Company whose plant will not allow of extension.

Ald. Hicks moved, seconded by Ald. Adams, that the fixed assessment of the Central Milling Company, on Block [illegible] be [illegible] to those of the Peterboro Cereal Co., as far as applicable.

Ald. Johnston moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Totey, that the fixed assessment of the Central Milling Co., be $10,000 for [illegible] years.

Ald. Crowe strongly opposed both motions. Both mills he said should pay their full taxes, the same as other citizens. J. J. Turner & Sons employ a good many hands, yet they were refused a fixed assessment. The Central Milling Company are established here, and the city is entitled to taxes on the assessment fixed by the assessors, in the interest of the whole community.

Both the resolution and amendment proved a tie on a showing of hands, Ald. Crowe voting against both.

Ald. Hall then moved, seconded by Ald. Hicks, that the assessment be $13,000, and on an unanimous vote, which he argued would be agreeable to all concerned, even the ratepayers.

This was turned down again by a vote of 4 to 6.

Ald. Johnston moved, seconded by Ald. Begley, that the assessment be $12,000, which would be a compromise.

Ald. Hall moved in amendment, seconded by Ald. Hicks, that the assessment be $13,000.

The voting again resulted in a tie, and His Worship decided the question in favor of the motion of Ald. Johnston for a fixed assessment of $12,000.

BY-LAW LAID OVER.

The matter of the ice and fruit by-law was left over on account of Ald. Mason not being present.

SNOW PLOWING.

It was agreed that in the past the contractors for removing snow have had too much territory to cover to execute their work thoroughly.

Ald. Johnston suggested that the chairman of the Board of Works, the Mayor and the City Engineer apportion out the districts for this season, allowing for two or more additional divisions. He thought the men should turn out in the middle of the night if necessary to keep the walks clear of snow.

The question of inspecting the work here arose, and the Council was divided as to whether it would be necessary to retain the services of Mr. Alex. Fitzgerald for the coming winter.

Two more snow plows are now required for old districts, and additional ones for the proposed new districts.

The committee named by Ald. Johnston will report on these matters on Monday night.

Ald. Begley raised the question of whether the present snow by-law is faulty or not.

The city solicitor pointed out that the police magistrate had prosecuted under it, and had replied to his question as to where it was defective, "he did not know."

This matter will be looked into thoroughly, as several aldermen are under the impression that a flaw exists in this by-law somewhere.

CRIMINAL ACCOUNTS.

The treasurer was instructed by resolution to pay the expenses of police constables in criminal cases, pending the receipt of such disbursements by the county from the Government. This applies to such cases where the police have to go out of town after criminals. A by-law will be prepared by the solicitor to cover this matter.

Town Clerk S. R. Armstrong was appointed auditor to audit with the county auditors, criminal justice accounts.

ISOLATED HOSPITAL.

The Mayor pointed out that, according to Inspector Smith, unless the city provides an isolation hospital, the Government will cut off its grant to the several hospitals. In such an event, Mr. Richard Hall asserts that $2,000 a year will be demanded from the city in support of the Nicholls Hospital. The inspector had also asserted that it is against the law to treat cases of contagious diseases in the general hospital, and he was going to see that the law is enforced. This means that the town will need to move in this matter without delay.

On motion of Ald. Johnston, the clerk was instructed to write towns maintaining isolated hospitals for information as to the management and cost of such institutions.

ROAD TO LIFT LOCK.

The Armour Bros. will arrive in the city to-day to consult with the authorities re conveying sufficient land to the city for a highway to the lift lock, continuing from Hunter street east.

MUCH NEEDED WORK.

The grading and water-tabling on Victoria avenue, and the erection of a temporary bridge over the ditch was brought up by Ald. Johnston and Begley. The latter stated that one resident had proposed to dig the ditch deeper and erect a temporary bridge for $50. The Council will acquiesce in this proposition if the work is done according to the engineer's plans. The Board of Works will report on Monday night.

The Council then adjourned.

Ald. Begley will give notice of motion on Monday that he is going to introduce a by-law restricting the running at large of dogs during the summer months.

THE BREAD COMBINE

A Correspondent Objects to the Prices Charged in Peterboro.

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly let me use a small portion of your valuable space to call attention to the price of bread in this city. Some months ago, our local bakers, giving as their reason, the raised price of flour, put up the price of our most general, used article of food. Now in Lindsay and other nearby places, the regular standard weight loaf of bread is sold at ten cents per large loaf, the matter of flour cannot make any difference in this town. We have large mills that daily turn out more flour than all our Ontario bakers could use. The money there is the price of freight. If the bakers in Toronto, where rent is higher, living is more expensive, and skilled labor is [illegible] can afford to sell at ten cents, and if Lindsay and smaller places, involving a greater expense in delivery of the bread, can also sell cheaper than Peterboro, what is the reason of our local high prices?

It just amounts to this. The bakers of Peterboro, whose names, as a class never appear in any gift to charity, sports, or any other object, who are too greedy for money to even advertize their goods in the local newspapers, who pay the smallest wages possible to their employes, and who do not run union shops, seem willingly to be joined in a combine to squeeze the last of Peterboro out of a few extra dollars, for an indigestible article of life. It is time our citizens got together, and demanded that they be given the same prices as outer towns. If they cannot get this twice, it is time for them to make arrangements to get their bread from Toronto or Lindsay. The bakers, in other places, if the conditions existing here were known, would gladly pay freight on bread, if ordered in large quantities. It is time this local bloodsucking combine was busted.

Yours truly.

WORKMAN.

QUARTERLY MEETING

City Mission Band Will Have Eloquent Speakers on Friday and Saturday

(To the Editor of The Times.)

The City Mission Band hold their second quarterly meeting services, Rev. Mr. Burnham, of Uxbridge, will be with the band. The services will be held Friday and Saturday nights, commencing at 8 o'clock p.m., and on Sunday love feast service at 10 a.m., preaching at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., open air service at 6.30 p.m. The board of management have been successful in securing the services of Mr H. B. Tuck, who acts in the capacity of pastor and mission worker. The band is encouraged and inspired by the manifestations of God's presence in their midst. Pastor Tuck leads a meeting devoted to the subject of holiness, every Friday night in the hall, at 8 o'clock. Those who are seeking a deeper Christian experience are cordially invited to attend those meetings. On Tuesday night, at the same hour, a meeting is held for prayer, praise and testimony. These meetings are of a high interest, especially to those who are spiritually hungry and are seeking for the "old paths." The following is the financial statement in connection with the work of the band, from August 16th to November 6th, 1905;

Receipts:

Balance carried forward	$14.65
Free will offerings in hall	73.80
Donation	.25
	$88.20

Expenses:

Rent and lighting of hall	$66.30
Pastoral work	10.00
Sundries	.20
Balance on hand	8.70
	$88.20

ATHLETIC WORLD

BY OUR SPORTING EDITOR

RUGBY.

Mr. Chris. Graham, the well known local athlete and all round sportsman, yesterday assured a Times representative that the Brockville team will assuredly be here for Saturday's game. This game is in the semi-finals for the championship. All lovers of good, fast, clean sport should turn out Saturday and demonstrate by their presence in large numbers, that the good game, resulting on hard work, now put up by the locals, is appreciated. This game is sure to be a swift one from kick off till time is called.

• • • •

Stratford and Trinitys of Toronto are the leading scoring teams in the junior series, and Dundas has a splendid record among the intermediates.

• • • •

The locals had a good work-out in the rink last night in preparation for the game with Brockville. Among those out were Crowley, Shaw, Dillon, Meagher, Sisson, Gilbert, Gillespie, Fitzpatrick, Hall, Crough and Lattimer.

HOCKEY.

The best proof that Bruce Ridpath, the star forward of the champion Marlboros, wishes to remain an amateur, is the fact that he has turned down many good offers to play in the International League this winter.

• • • •

"Reddy" McMillan will play in the International Hockey League this winter with the Michigan Soo. "Reddy" is one of the best wing men that has ever left Canada.

• • • •

Saturday is the last day for receiving nominations for office in the O.H.A.; up to the present time only a few have been received.

• • • •

With a good junior O.H.A. bunch and four or five town league teams Lindsay should make a good showing this year, and give opponents a hard tussle.—Lindsay Post.

Canadian Pacific Railway is Extending Sphere

Has Leased Local Ontario Lines in the West.

"The Tilsonburg, Lake Erie and Pacific Railway, having been leased to the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will, after midnight November 1st, be operated as part of district No. 2 of the Ontario division. All employes then in the Tilsonburg, Lake Erie and Pacific Railway Company's service will become employes of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and will take their instructions from, and report to its officers accordingly."

The Tilsonburg, Lake Erie and Pacific Railway, which runs from Port Burwell to Tilsonburg and Ingersoll, is thirty-five miles in length. An extension to it is at the present time under construction.

The Canadian Pacific has for a year controlled this line by lease. It will now be operated as a part of the Canadian Pacific system proper. It is understood that the present lease is for so long a term of years as to make the leasing of the road equivalent to its permanent taking over.

Through the Tilsonburg, Lake Erie and Pacific Railway the Canadian Pacific has its only access to the Lake Erie ports at Port Burwell. The country through which the line passes is one of unusual fertility, and is renowned for its wealth of agricultural and dairy products.

SHOVEL YOUR SNOW

Yesterday morning, P. C. Stewart, was on the war path after delinquents in the matter of keeping their pavements clean.

Wednesday's night's snow had given Messrs. Householders some good bouts for reflection and action. In many cases property owner or lessee holders, complied with the by-law and shovelled off their snow, as required by law. Many vacant lots, and a majority of the few vacant houses in town, however, had a nice wet, slushy, slipping stretch of snow covered pavement left in front of them, until the sun and wind, partly made such pavements passable.

The chief of police wishes to remind the property owners and tenants in the city that the snow by-law is still in force. Its operation starts with the flat fall of snow, and he intends to see that it is enforced. He advises everyone to get their snow shovels out and be prepared to get a good swift move on, and thus save the unpleasant alternative of an invitation to attend a nearby police court session.

The fine bracing morning air, coupled with vigorous hustling at the business end of a robust shovel-ful, is, in the matter of recreation and health, only second to turning out by candle light, to sit for seven hours on a run way and then come in to congratulate (and incidentally wish he was dead and buried) some fellow who shot the deer, two miles away.

KIDD VS. KIDD

First Gun Fired in the New Famous Case for $10,000

There has been considerable talk about town, during the past few months over the suit for $10,000 damages, entered by Mr. R. J. Kidd against the local member for Carleton.

An Ottawa despatch says; Mr. G. N. Kidd, M.P.P., for the county of Carleton, was examined before Mr. W. L. Scott, Master in Chancery, in connection with the action of damages against him by Robert J. Kidd, which will be tried at London. Robt. J. Kidd of Peterboro, a former clerk in the Department of the Provincial Secretary has taken action against Mr. G. N. Kidd for opening one of the former's letters, which resulted in disclosing facts that led to R. J. Kiddbeing dismissed from the employ of the Government.

Mr. G. N. Kidd swore that the letter in question was brought to his desk in the Legislative Assembly one day last April. He read the body of the letter until he had made sure it was not for him. He then put it in the envelope, and as near as he could remember, sent it back to the office. Later it was returned to him. He then handed the letter to Mr. Hanna, Provincial Secretary, since the letter was addressed to that gentleman a department. Mr. Hanna wrote on the envelope a note, informing the owner that it was in Mr. G. N. Kidd's letter box and opened by mistake, which the member for Carleton signed. Mr. Hanna is Mr. G. N. Kidd's desk-mate.

INSTRUCTIVE LECTURES

Local Collegiate Institute Might Follow Lead Set By Lindsay.

It is acknowledged by all unprejudiced judges that our local Collegiate Institute is under good management. The institute, however, as managed at present, is simply a school for higher education in the more advanced branches of learning. There is no feature of its modus operandi calculated to imbue the students with a deep seated respect for learning or culture, beyond the actual subjects set forth in its curriculum.

IT IS WORTHY OF NOTE that for some years the Lindsay Collegiate Institute has provided an annual lecture course for that town. There are many instances, of course, of collegiates throughout the larger towns providing one or two good lectures or concerts during the season. But in Lindsay the enterprise of that institution has for eight years procured for Lindsay five or six well-known and talented lecturers, such, for example, as Mr. Ernest Thompson-Seton and Dr. Drummond, the author of the habitant poems. This season, the course provided includes both of these well-known men and Dr. Fletcher, Dominion Entomologist; Dr. Roche, M.P., of Minnedosa, Man., and Dr. Boland, M.P., of Beauce, Quebec. The enterprise of the principal and staff of the Lindsay school is to be commended. They are doing something to add to the sum of culture and knowledge, something which is both entertaining and instructive. We are glad to know that the citizens of Lindsay patronize these lecture courses. Perhaps the lectures are doing more than is suspected in making the pupils of the school familiar with some of our foremost Canadians and teaching them that gradually the country is producing men whose achievements and writings of whom we have no reason to be ashamed.

Whilst Lindsay does not exhibit the same marked spell of progress that Peterboro is noted for in mercantile and industrial affairs, their system of encouraging a love for learning and mental improvement in their growing lads and girls is well worth consideration and emulation.

A FIGHT RESULTED

Philanthropic Grocery Driver Brings a Dog from the East Side.

Yesterday evening just as the city clocks were striking five a well known citizen whose breadth fully makes up for his lack of height, and whose geniality would make up for any lack of either, did they exist, drove up, in his delivery wagon to a Charlotte street office, not a thousand miles from the Machine Telegraph Company's headquarters.

In the wagon, midst a miscellaneous collection of ash cans, Quaker oat boxes and tobar receptacles for delivering groceries, stood a sharp looking bull dog.

The driver, with a conscious air, induced by the knowledge of having performed a philanthropic act, drove to the door of this certain office. The official in charge of the office was called out. "Here," said the driver; "is your bull dog, "Trouble;" I found him away over in Ashburnham, and thought I had better bring him over to you."

The office man stepped to the wagon's side, with a puzzled air, saying "Why my dog "Trouble" is in the office. That dog looks like mine, but he's not "Trouble." On hearing this the driver, catching the bull dog in his rig, by the leather collar round his neck, threw him out onto the mud, saying, "There you, get to the ——— out of this."

Just as the dog struck the mud, a door of this Charlotte street office, quietly opened and a bull dog, the face smile, of that driven there, stepped out to see what was doing. "Hello," remarked the office man. "There's 'Trouble' now." And Trouble it was. Inside of two seconds the two bulls were makin con-centric circles in the mud and slush, each trying for a neck grip on the other. After the two canines had enjoyed the fight for about five minutes the office man lifted "Trouble" by the collar and carried him inside, whilst a by-stander had the other bull by the tail, carrying him away from the scene of combat. The grocery drive declares that after this, he will want a dog's whole pedigree before bringing him to a supposed owner.

CAPT. BENNETT'S LOSS

Popular Citizen Sustains Heavy Loss By Fire.

At a late hour on Wednesday night, a red glare in the direction of North Monaghan attracted much attention. Many guesses were made as to what resident of the township would prove to be a victim. Much regret was heard throughout the city yesterday morning when it was reported that Capt. G. W. Bennett, of North Monaghan, was a heavy loser by the fire seen the preceding evening.

Capt. Bennett's residence is three miles from the city. It is not yet known how the fire originated. It was first discovered at about 11.15 o'clock by Mr. Samuel Bennett, who resides upon an adjacent farm. The neighbors arrived at the burning house about the same time. The only occupants of the building were Mr. Joseph Bennett, the aged father of Captain Bennett, and Mrs. Axelsson, housekeeper.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in rescuing Mr. Bennett, who is eighty-five years of age, from the burning house, as he was sleeping in an upper room.

At the time of the arrival of the neighbors, the sheds at the rear of the house had been entirely consumed, and the main portion of the building was wrapped in flames, which spread too rapidly to allow much of the household goods to be saved.

Captain Bennett is at present at Ketchebeum Lake with a hunting party.

The loss will be a heavy one. The house was a red brick structure, and was one of the prettiest in the township. All the sheds and contents including 110 bags of potatoes to the order were destroyed. The furniture is practically a total loss, as well as many valuable papers and township records kept by Mr. Bennett in his capacity as clerk of the township. The barns and outbuildings were fortunately saved.

The dwelling was insured for $800 with Mr. W. H. Hill. The total loss will, it is estimated, approximate fully $2,000.

CRIMES INCREASING

Manitoba Has Epidemic of Wrong-Doing

Judge Says the Matter is One for the Gravest Consideration.

Winnipeg, November 1.—The alarming increase in serious crimes in the eastern judicial district of Manitoba was made the subject of Judge Perdue's address at the opening of the assizes here yesterday. It was pointed out to the grand jury that there were thirty cases of criminal significance on the calendar. The judge stated that the increase of crime in the province since the last sessions was a matter for the gravest consideration, and that while the city of Winnipeg and province might be suffering the penalty of rapid strides made in population and wealth, crime was out of all proportion to the increase, and it behooved the officers of the law to exercise the utmost diligence in the ferreting out of crime and the bringing of offenders to justice.

One of the peculiar cases to be considered is that of a self-styled bishop of one of the Russian sects who granted divorce and is now charged with encouraging bigamy. There is also a charge of murder preferred against a young woman who is alleged to have killed a child by leaving it in an out house.

POLICE COURT NEWS

Only one case occupied the attention of His Worship yesterday morning at the police court. It was that of a boy charged with having smashed a window at No. 100 Park street. The boy's father was present, and not only pleaded guilty for the boy, but paid $3.50. This represents the cost of replacing the shattered light which measures 40 by 50 inches of glass. His Worship reserved sentence on the boy, who will appear at this morning's court, to find out what penalty, if any, will be imposed.

Vancouver Nail Factory Burned

Vancouver, B. C., November 2.—The Vancouver nail factory was destroyed by fire Tuesday. The loss is estimated at $60,000. The building and plant was partly insured.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 170 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $300,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $20,000.00 to $50,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividends and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co.-(with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 60 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.50 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 10 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1901 produced $15,511.50 per hour, every hour, day and night. Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $20,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 25 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth as good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock as they would have something that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

All Thin, Pale Women

Can Learn the Cause of Their Nervous, Used-up Condition

With women, ill-health is usually traceable to nerve exhaustion. Feeling run-down and tired most of the time is nature's warning that more nerve-force is required.

You must build up, nourish the body, vitalize the nerves, get more flesh and blood.

It's the abundant nutriment and building material in Ferrozone that enables it to cure so many sick women. It increases the appetite, adds weight and strength, restores lost color and develops a surplus of energy and nerve force that defies sickness of any kind. There is living proof in Mrs. Daniel Ferguson, Jr., of Prescott, Ont. Read her statement:

"A year ago my health failed. I grew thin and exceedingly pale. At night it was difficult to obtain restful sleep. My appetite was variable and indigestion bothered me considerably. I became nervous and suffered from heart palpitation. You could scarcely believe the benefit I derived in one week from Ferrozone. Color came back to my cheeks. My vitality and appetite increased, re- [illegible] its cause also. Ferrozone did a world of good and made me well.

Remember this: No alcoholic stimulant can nourish and build up like Ferrozone. Fifty cents per box or six boxes for $2.50. At all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.

DON'T LIKE THE BOERS NOW

A British paper twits the Germans with their loss of love for the Boers. It says: "At the time when Ladysmith, Kimberley, and Mafeking were besieged, and when the British arms were under a cloud, how the Germans did crow and how affectionately they patted Brother Boer on the back, and told him in so many words to 'go on and prosper.' Now the mere name of Boer stinks in the nostrils of the Kaiser's subjects. They will have none of him, and they are alleging that a nephew of the slippery and elusive Mr. Wet [illegible] the head of a plot to raid their Colony in German South-West Africa. The German press, in referring to the alleged plot, strongly denounce the Boers. One paper says: 'The Boers have, as Germans learnt to their cost, only two attributes—naked avarice and an unconquerable penchant to conspiracy.' . . . When it suited the Kaiser he could not praise the Boers too warmly, but when their resources began to dry up the Afrikanders did not attract the Emperor or his subjects so much. The lemon had been squeezed and was cast aside."

This is another one of those days when it would be unwise to make any bets as to what will happen in Russia over night.

MANY JUMPED FOR THEIR LIVES.

Wingham, Ont., Nov. 2.—The Button block was destroyed by fire this morning at five o'clock. What is left is not worth $50. The total loss is $12,000, with $6,400 insurance.

Five families lived in the block. They had narrow escapes and saved nothing, getting out in their night clothes. Chas. Swanson had to drop his wife out of the window to the ground. Several jumped for their lives.

Those in the block were Mr. and Mrs. Alex and daughter, Chas. Swanson and wife, Mr. Hibbs and wife, S. Poole, wife, and two children, and Mrs. McLean.

Fire had broken out in the block on Monday afternoon, but had been put out. It is thought that it smouldered between the partitions and was overlooked till it got such headway at 5 a.m. that it could not be checked.

Senator Gowan's Wife Dead.

Barrie, Nov. 2.—Mrs. J. R. Gowan, wife of Hon. Senator Gowan, died suddenly at her resident here last night. She was around as usual during the day, and expired very unexpectedly.

The marriage of Miss Minnie Rodgers, daughter of Jos. D. Rodgers, to Lieut. J. Kerfoot, of Hughes's Militia, took place this afternoon, at the residence of the bride's parents, John street. She was attended by her sister, Miss M[illegible] the groom being supported by Dr. Victor Sloan.

WESTERN MEN IN CAROUSAL OF DEATH

Charles Innes and Peter Hill Die of Alcohol Poisoning.

Winnipeg, Nov. 2.—As a result of drinking what was supposedly wood alcohol, Chas. Innes and Peter Hill are dead, and a man named Lafrance is dangerously ill. On Sunday afternoon Innes and four half-breeds, Peter Hill, Lafrance, Joe Cross-the-River, and Peter McGamble, procured from a Main street drug store three large bottles, labeled, whiskey, brandy and alcohol, and spruce. These drinks were mixed with small quantities of water and the party sat down to their carousal of death.

One of the five appeared to be drunk Sunday afternoon, but on Monday morning Innes and Hill went home from their work ill, and both died last evening from the effects of alcohol poisoning. Lafrance is in a critical condition, and his recovery is doubtful. The other two did not indulge to any extent, and so escaped the poison. Innes comes from Saratoga Springs and Hill and Lafrance from Montreal.

WITNESS WAS INTOXICATED

Severely Reprimanded by Judge MacMahon in Assize Court.

Toronto, Nov. 1.—Judge MacMahon found it necessary to severely reprimand the principal witness in the William Hance case this morning.

The witness was in a state of partial intoxication, and mixed up her evidence paralating in introducing irrelvant remarks.

"Witness," said his Honor, "finally, in a stern tone. "Witness, if you do not keep quiet and pay attention to the questions asked, I'll have to send you down. You are intoxicated." This somewhat quieted the witness, and the case was proceeded with.

When the evidence was concluded, Judge MacMahon addressed the jury, and stated that there was not sufficient evidence to convict a man of so serious an offence. The prisoner was given a warning and discharged.

Mrs. Kast Imitated Husband.

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 2.—Mrs. Kate Kast, proprietor of the St. Charles Hotel on Whitney avenue, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid yesterday. Mrs. Kast's husband killed himself in a similar manner about a year ago. Mrs. Kast was about 30 years of age.

Port Dalhousie Harbor Blocked.

St. Catharines, Nov. 2.—Owing to the storm on the Lake, the Lakeside which had such a stirring time of it during the gale of a couple of weeks ago, did not venture out yesterday morning. The harbor at Port Dalhousie is full of shipping, waiting for the storm to blow over. Several of the larger vessels went out, but were compelled to return.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the North-west Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, this requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7.50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 or 1500 feet. The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land as $1 an acre.

Development provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The leases shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

PATENTS PROMPTLY SECURED

A trip around the world in 60 minutes at a mere trifle.

Scores upon scores of people are daily taking advantage of our very liberal and decidedly interesting offer.

Magnificently finished and exquisitely photo-color views in place of the oldtime and antiquated views of the past. A most pleasant and interesting hour to spend journeying around the globe viewing the places of greatest interest, most beautiful scenery, etc., at a mere trifle of cost through our liberal plan. These views illustrate some of the most noted places in the world—mountain scenery both in America and Europe—waterfalls and other famous natural phenomena, some of the world's most famous buildings, places of historical interest and places famous for beautiful architecture or beautiful natural scenery. This set is of the greatest educational value, presenting, as it does, such realistic likenesses of scenes and places that we all should know about. We want every household in this city to have one of these sets. Imagine yourself taken through the Orient, on a trip to California, through the world's Fair to see the splendid scenes as though you were right there on the spot. By a special process, a combination of lithographing and half-tone work, we are able to offer a collection of colored views from every part of the world in the most beautiful, natural and startling life-like color effects, which must be seen to be appreciated. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and beauty of these views. Come and see them. We want each and every household in this city to have a set of these.

It wasn't so very long ago that hundreds of thousands of people spent many pleasant hours with the stereoscope, but heretofore they were compelled to pay enormous prices for views, think of it, as high as 50c each for colored pictures. We sold thousands upon thousands of stereoscopic views, in colors, at 50c each in those days, but imagine each and every view had to be colored by hand. In the past few months we have had repeated demands for them, and being able to secure the latest and most beautiful colored views to furnish to the public at a ridiculously low price, we entered into the stereoscope plan on quite a large scale, and have taken immediate advantage of the International Art Association, who have spent an enormous amount of money to get out special color plates and have finally completed their end, namely: To place on the market thousands of magnificent stereoscopic views, the most beautiful, interesting and exciting scenes from every land, in the grandest and most exquisite natural colors.

Now we come to our great special offer. Read our plan carefully as it describes the stereoscope and tells how to secure the scope and views at almost no cost to you.

First the stereoscope. The Stereoscope is our world-famous "Aluminum Crystal Lens" Stereoscope. Genuine aluminum hood, bound with dark rich red velvet. Frame is of fine finished cherry wood with patent folding handle, folding understand frame, and sliding bar. The lenses are extra fine quality, selected for clearness and brilliancy, 1¼ inches in diameter, ground from best quality glass and carefully adjusted. This Crystal Lens Aluminum "Scope" has won universal praise from lovers of the beautiful, and as a means of entertainment stands second to nothing.

Colorado

At Her Best

In late summer Colorado is at her best. The green of the verdure on mountain and meadow is slowly turning to crimson and gold. Afar looms a peak whose snow-capped summit is enshrouded in autumnal haze. The air is laden with the spice of mountain pines and fir trees.

quences, were she told too suddenly of your treachery. I dare not face her with the knowledge of your base desertion in my heart. Do you know that she is worth two hundred thousand pounds, if not more?"

"Two hundred thousand!" repeated Marsden, slowly. "What a delightful rhythm there is in those words. Yes, my dear sister, no one knows better than myself her financial position. She is not quite so rich as that, but I confess, I wish her fortune were Nora's; still I dare say we shall manage an immense amount of enjoyment without it."

"Clifford!" exclaimed Lady Dorrington, rising in her wrath, "you have not the ordinary gentleman's sense of honor, you have not the faintest regard for duty or justice, you are a slave to the grossest selfishness, regardless of everything except your own pleasure and self-indulgence; you are weak beyond what I should have expected, for you must have yielded your better judgment to Nora's wiles, for I never will believe that she did not try to attract you."

Marsden laughed.

"You can take what view you like of the matter," he said, watching her with quiet eyes.

"Dorrington will be disgusted with you, and I quite give you up. As to Nora and Mrs. L'Estrange, I never wish to see them again. I did believe they were well-bred gentlewomen."

"Do well-bred gentlewomen never scheme?" asked Marsden innocently.

"If you had any honorable instincts, I would hope to move you," continued Lady Dorrington. "As it is, I give you up, and I beg you will leave my house, where you will never again be a welcome guest."

"Very well," looking at his watch. "There is a train at three-thirty, which will suit me. I will have luncheon and bid you very heartily farewell."

Lady Dorrington took up some letters that lay on the table before her, darted an angry, scornful look at her brother, and left the room without further speech.

Marsden's face grew graver and softer when he was alone.

"A man can't help his nature, I suppose?" he muttered to himself. "I can not look on the cant and shibboleths of society as constraining truths, and I am certainly a better man than most of my fellows. How I hate unpleasant faces! The worst of this storm in a tea-cup is, that Isabel will not do the civil to Nora, and Nora will worry herself about it. At any rate I have her promise, and I feel I can trust her."

He rose, drew the writing materials to him, and quickly traced these words:

"Dear Mrs. Ruthven, May I hope to see you for a few moments, as I am obliged to return to town immediately. I should like to see with my own eyes how you are, and shall be most discreet."

To this, a verbal answer was returned.

"Mrs. Ruthven's compliments. She was sorry she did not feel equal to see any one but would write when able."

"Is luncheon ready?" asked Marsden, when the footman had delivered this message.

"Not yet, sir. It will not be ready for quite half an hour."

"Then you must give me something to eat first, and tell them to bring round a trap. I want to catch the three-thirty up-train at Rockingham. Send my man to me."

Lady Dorrington was in Mrs. Ruthven's room, and Lord Dorrington had gone down to the Home Farm, when Marsden set forth. So he left without leave-taking, save from the stately butler and his satellite footmen, with whom the easy-going, open-handed, affable squire was a prime favorite.

"Tant mieux," said Marsden to himself, as he gathered up the reins and drove off sharply. "I wonder if Mrs. Ruthven scents the battle from afar? Her message sounded warlike."

CHAPTER XIII.

It was more than an hour before Lady Dorrington felt sufficiently recovered from the excitement of her interview with her brother to present herself in the invalid's chamber. Lord Dorrington, whom she had sought as the only possible recipient of her indignant complaints, was out, and his whereabouts uncertain. She felt dreadfully uncertain how to act. She was afraid to break the news of his engagement to the deserted widow, lest it might produce a fatal effect, yet she felt it incumbent on her to enlighten Mrs. Ruthven as to the true state of affairs.

When, at last, Lady Dorrington entered the sitting-room into which Mrs. Ruthven had been moved for a few hours daily since her strength could bear it, she found that lady writing on a movable desk attached to the arm of her easy-chair. She was very white, and looked already weary; a lace cap, with pale pink ribbons, covered her hair, which had been cut short, and a white cashmere wrapper, trimmed with cream lace over pink, hung loosely on her attenuated figure.

"My dear," exclaimed Lady Dorrington, "you are not surely trying to write?"

"I really am," a smile parting her pale lips. "Only a few lines, for I am certainly stronger. Do not fear any imprudence; I am too anxious to get well. I should like to see Sir Harley Portman again; he will tell me when I can move. I begin to be very anxious to deliver you from the long-endured incubus of a sick guest."

"Believe me, we only care to see you well. There is not the slightest need to hurry away."

"I know you are all goodness, but there are matters to be attended to that no one can do for me. I have been scribbling a few lines to my lawyer. Will you write for me to Sir Harley?"

"Certainly. But you know when he was here last he said——"

"Yes, yes, that I could not move for three weeks. But one has passed, and if he sees what progress I have made I am sure he will let me go on Wednesday or Thursday next. Wherever I go ultimately, I must take London on the way."

"All I beg, dear Mrs. Ruthven, is that you will not hasten your departure on our account. You know we are to spend Christmas with Aunt Illuminator, so there will be no party here! I am sure you are not equal to write, you look so weary."

Mrs. Ruthven lay back in her chair, and let her maid unfasten and remove the desk. When they were alone she said, as she lay back, her eyes closed, her figure very still

"I had a message from Mr. Marsden just now."

GALE AT BUFFALO.

Buffalo, Nov. 2.—A blustering gale from the lakes, accompanied by rain and snow, struck Buffalo early today. The wind reached a velocity of 60 miles an hour, as measured by the local branch of the Weather Bureau. The schooner Geo. G. Blaine ran ashore near the end of the Government pier, but was pulled off without serious damage.

Saratoff, Russia, Nov. 2.—This city has voted an address of thanks to the Emperor for granting a constitution to the people of Russia.

GALCASIEU PARISH

LOUISIANA, U. S. A.

The richest oil region in the world. Quality the finest ever discovered in the South or West. An opportunity for the investing public to get in on the ground floor of a proposition that will bear the strictest investigation.

Calcasieu parish and more especially lands north-west of Lake Charles, Louisiana, U.S.A., are considered by Oil Experts and Geologists to be the seat of primary deposits of the GREATEST OIL BEARING LANDS IN THE WORLD.

Derricks are springing up as if by magic, and drills are working day and night are sinking deeper and deeper into the oil beds buried in MOTHER EARTH.

There are wells in this parish that are producing from 2,000 to 50,000 barrels a day, and the price is now 61 cents a barrel.

Capital Stock and Holdings

The Union Oil and Sulphur Company, of Sioux Falls, S. D., U. S. A., was organized on the 18th of June, 1903, with a capital stock of $750,000.00, represented by an equal nnumber of shares of the par value each of $1.00; it owns in fee simple 240 acres, and has 467 acres leased, making it one of the strongest companies in the United States.

Location of Property

It lies along side the Kansas City Southern Railroad, is only one mile from the Houstan River, and is within three miles of the GREAT SULPHUR MINE.

No Quorum of Board of Trade

Yesterday evening there was to have been held, at the City Clerk's office, a meeting of the Board of Health. However, only three members, Messrs. Ayres, Neil, and Parker, were present. This disqualified those present from transacting business, as they did not constitute a quorum. The next meeting will be duly announced in these columns.

The many friends in this city of Mrs. H. C. Rogers, will be pleased to learn that she has returned home after an extended stay in Vancouver with her daughter, Mrs. H. B. Robertson. Mrs. Robertson, with her child, accompanied Mrs. Rogers home and are guests at the National Hotel. Mrs. Robertson will likely remain in the city for a couple of months.

Pay the Rest of Your Taxes

Mr. W. J. Green, the popular descendant of the Cæsars, and who yearly sits at the receipt of taxes, announces that, those who have not paid their taxes in full, would do well to read an extract from the by-law bearing thereon, printed at the foot of the local tax bills. This says: Wednesday, the 15th of November, is the last day for same [illegible]. After that date 5 per cent. will be added to all taxes unpaid. Govern yourself accordingly and come early and avoid the rush.

The Leather-Workers' Strike

(To the Editor of The Times).

Sir,—Your correspondent in yesterday's issue speaks of the conditions of the leather-workers' trade, and complains of the low wages prevailing.

I always understood that the law of supply and demand would govern this, as it does the prices of harness or anything that Mr. Gunsolus has to sell. If the men employed by Mr. Gunsolus are not getting high enough wages, why don't they quit like men and go where better conditions prevail, instead of whining over their condition? The fact is, Mr. Gunsolus pays above the average of what is being paid, and could not pay more and have anything left for himself.

There is too much of this "hold-up" business being practised by labor unions, and the sooner it is put an end to the better.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am, yours truly, FAIR PLAY.

LOCAL INCIDENTS

BY THE TIMES MAN ON THE STREET.

—The tariff commission will sit in Toronto on Tuesday next.

—Mr. R. M. Roy has placed his steam yacht, the "Rob Roy," in winter quarters.

—St. Andrew's Guards held their regular monthly meeting last night at 28 Cedar street.

—The next time he comes, the Hon. Jerome K. Jerome might ring a bell and tell the audience when to laugh.

—Mr. Carl C. Forsyth, the newly appointed choir master of St. Andrew's church, has arrived and met the choir last night.

—The crossings on George street yesterday, were in a disgraceful state. They should be cleaned again in the day after each storm.

—This is the time of year when the friend who always carefully closed the door when it was 20 in the shade, makes it a point to leave it wide open.

—Mrs. J. M. Greene music dealer, Water street, has leased the north store and all of the second floor at the front of the new Opera House.

—The mystery will probably be solved by the official announcement that Jerome K. Jerome extracted his jokes from London Punch, April 1, 1744.

—A handsome new office is being fitted up in St. Peter's T.A.S. rooms in connection with the savings bank department, which is in charge of Mr. Daniel Holland.

—Owing to the formal opening of the new opera house on Wednesday, Nov. 15th, St. Peter's T.A.S. smoker has been postponed for one week. It will be held on Wednesday, November 22d.

—Game Warden Fitzgerald, of Peterboro, disposed of a couple of moose permits to Haliburton county hunters. Evidently they had heard of the big fellow seen by Mr. Irwin, of Camray recently.—Lindsay Post.

—Quite a number of prominent Whitby gentlemen were in the city yesterday. It is understood their mission was not altogether disconnected with an attempt to secure a sugar factory for that sleepy little burg.

—A social evening was held by St. Paul's Christian Endeavor Society yesterday evening. Miss Elseth MacDonald, of Toronto, elocutionist, and Miss Alice Rogers, pianiste, contributed most enjoyably to the program.

—The Mothers' Guild of St. Luke's church intend holding an oyster supper and sale of work this evening. Rev. E. A. Langfeldt will give at this social a lecture on "A Trip on the Rhine" illustrated by 50 lime-light views.

—On Sunday morning next the quarterly services will be held in Mark street church. At ten o'clock the Love Feast will be celebrated, and Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the regular morning service.

—Mr. James S. Potter, father of Rev. J. G. Potter, and the well known missionary among the sailors on the inland waters, will be in the city on Sunday next. He will give an address in the morning on his work at the Murray street Baptist church.

—On Wednesday evening a number of friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Chatten, 208 Smith street, the occasion being the birthday of their son, Raymond. A very enjoyable Hallowe'en evening was spent, and all joined in wishing Mr. Chatten a long and happy life.

PAYS 5 PER CENT DIVIDEND

Peterboro Cordage Co. Shows Intelligent and Able Management

The Cordage Company, on Wednesday held their annual shareholders meeting. Among those present were; Messrs. C. P. Mason, R. Smyth, R. A. Dixon, W. H. Jackson, R. L. Morden, N. Nash, Wm. Fair, J. N. Hortop, J. Waddell, Geo. Syer, J. Lang, ex-M.P., Henry Crane, T. G. Hendly, Thos Gibson, S. Winch, J. Thompson, H. W. Wilcox, W. Oke, R. R. Hall, M.P., A. Henry, E. G. Wolverton, W. H. Meldrum, N. Dymont, S. Dyment, J. Buckham and others.

The report of the directors upon the operations of the company during the past year was presented and adopted by the shareholders. A dividend of five per cent. upon the capital stock of the company was approved by the shareholders, and the directors were congratulated upon their very efficient management during long years which have been the most trying period in the experience of the cordage business in the country. The turnover last year was upwards of $1,000,000, and it is expected that this year it will reach upwards of $1,500,000.

The directors for the coming year will be; Messrs. Adam Hall, W. H. Meldrum, J. Lang, ex-M.P., J. A. Bennet, and J. S. Latimer.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors, Mr. Adam Hall was re-elected president and general manager; W. H. Meldrum and J. Lang vice-presidents; G. L. Hay, auditor, and E. B. Fowler, secretary.

It was decided to issue $225,000 worth of stock, to enable the company to purchase on better terms and generally advance the interests of the industry. For this company, on the face of such unfair opposition, to pay a dividend of 5 per cent. so shortly after inception, speaks volumes for the intelligent and strenuous policy pursued by the president and directorate.

NOT A SUCCESS

Marshal Field Not Favorably Impressed by Municipal Ownership Abroad

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Marshall Field, the Chicago merchant prince, on his return from Europe the other day, expressed himself as much dissatisfied with the results of municipal ownership as he saw it abroad. Neither New York nor Chicago, he declares, would tolerate for a day such inefficient telephone service as exists in Paris, where the municipality owns the telephones. He laughs at the absurdity of the assumption that municipal ownership would tend to do away with graft, and expresses his own opinion that it would multiply corruption.

Mr. Field ends by comparing municipal ownership to the silver craze, and predicts that Americans will have grown tired of talking about it in five years from the present time.

MR. W. PHELAN GONE

A Life Long Resident of Ennismore Passes Away.

Yesterday afternoon, about one o'clock there passed away, in St. Joseph's Hospital, in the person of Mr. William Phelan, a gentleman, who for over the time of two generations [illegible] Township of Ennismore.

The late Wm. Phelan, who was 65 years of age was born in Ennismore and had lived there all his life. He lived on lot 16, concession eight. Deceased had been ill for about two weeks with pneumonia.

Deepening Local Navigable Water

Yesterday the Government dredge Trent commenced work in deepening the shallow part of the Otonabee River, opposite the Peterboro Canal Company's mill. This is the first work in the general scheme for the deepening of the river, in the interests of navigation. When the work has been completed the whole of the river front between the Hunter street bridge and the C.P.R. will have been converted into a series of docks and as soon as the river is navigable the C.P.R. will have to place a swing in their bridge to allow the boats to pass beyond it.

Mrs. J. Cooney's Death

On Wednesday night, Mrs. Johnston Cooney, passed away at her residence, 67 Harvey street. Her first husband was Mr. Edward Cooney, and, after his death, she became the wife of Mr. Johnston Cooney, who survives her. She leaves two children, Mrs. (Dr.) McKinley, of Cleveland, and George Cooney, of Winnipeg. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, from the family residence, 67 Harvey street, to Little Lake cemetery, where interment will take place. The service will be conducted by Rev. Dr. Scott, of the George street Methodist church, of which the deceased was a member.

STOMACH CURE

An Easy Way from Standpoint of Convenience.

The so-called cures for indigestion are almost as numerous as the victims themselves, and scarcely a day passes without the hopes of thousands of sufferers being raised by the discovery of some novel method of cure for this prevalent disease.

Until a combination of unusual remedies, heretofore but little known in this country, was made in Mi-o-na tablets, no certain cure for indigestion had been found, and it is therefore hardly to be wondered at that our leading druggist, who has the Peterboro agency, is selling large quantities of Mi-o-na.

Mi-o-na is a guaranteed cure for all diseases of the stomach excepting cancer. If you have pains or distress after eating, headache, belching of gases, sour taste in the mouth, dizziness, heartburn, specks before the eyes, furred tongue, sleeplessness, backache, debility or weakness, it shows that the stomach needs to be strengthened with Mi-o-na.

Just one little tablet out of a 50 cent box before meals for a few days, and you will soon regain perfect health and strength.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The E. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

BLOOD WILL TELL.

It takes lots of vitality, nervous force and strength to win a race. Blood must be pure and good.

Without good red blood a man has a weak heart and poor nerves. Thinness of the blood, or anæmia, is common in men and young women, and all those who work indoors, who do not get enough good oxygen in their lungs, consequently have too many white blood corpuscles.

Keep the nerves nourished, the heart strong, the head cool, the stomach vigorous, the nerve centres active, and the blood free from the dust of mines and from a wide contamination, such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

Tonics consisting of large portions of alcohol, iron or cod liver oil, do not bring the desired changes in the blood because they do not enter the system and are not absorbed into the blood, with the exception of the alcohol, which shrivels up the red blood corpuscles when it does come in contact with them. Therefore do not allow the dealer to insult your intelligence by telling you he has something better than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

The cost of mailing only. "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," 1008 large pages, is sent free on receipt of thirty-one one-cent stamps, for the paper-covered book, or fifty stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Castle Nesbitt Inspected.

Dr. Bruce Smith, Provincial Inspector of Prisons, Toronto, was in the city yesterday. He reported very favorably on conditions existing in Castle Nesbitt and our local institutions. Dr. Smith has recently returned from an inspection of the Cobourg jail. Here he found a most distressful state of affairs. The prisoners were huddled together somewhat like hogs in a pen. The accommodations were altogether inadequate for this number confined, and other non-commendable features [illegible]

Pittsburg Millionaire Here.

Mr. Donnelly, the Pittsburg millionaire, who is now a frequent visitor to the city, and whose fine mansion in Cobourg, is about completed, arrived in town yesterday, by his splendid private yacht Strathmore. Mr. Donnelly's party left Gore's Landing after a quick drive from Cobourg, early in the morning, and arrived here in quick time. The party left for Gore's Landing yesterday afternoon, by the yacht. To show how Peterboro's products are appreciated, it might be added that Mr. Donnelly placed a large order for butter and other goods with Mr. A. Rountree, the grocer. Mr. Donnelly was heard to remark that Peterboro seems to be one of the soundest towns on the continent."

The Funny False Fire Alarm Fool

Yesterday the local fire laddies had hard work not to use some cuss words, that in print would have to be expressed by ——— ——— ———. Two alarms of fire were sent in on Wednesday night, shortly after 11 o'clock. The first notice said there was a fire in the south end of the city. The Brigade, in quick time, went as far as Charlotte street, en route south, but as no fire was visible they returned. Then a telephone message said there was a fire at the Canadian General Electric Company's works. Once more these faithful and meagerly paid public guardians, hauled out their apparatus, only after a run, to find some one with a peculiar idea of wit had fooled them.

If there is one thing, more than another, that justice should light on with both hands, not to mention her No. 11 brogans, it is on the lunatic who thinks it funny to call out a lot of hard working men, who devote their leisure, as well as working hours, to the public good for... very little recompense, as a false alarm.

Lord Strathcona to Retire

His Lordship Will Relinquish Presidency Of The Bank of Montreal.

Montreal, Nov. 4.—In banking circles in this city it is very generally believed that at the annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal, which takes place early part of next month the retirement of Lord Strathcona as president of Canada's premier monetary institution will be announced, and that Sir George Drummond will be elected in his lordship's stead.

At the present time Sir George Drummond is virtually the chief executive officer, for while he has been holding the office of vice-president, Lord Strathcona's continued absence in London has thrown upon Sir George's shoulders all the work and responsibility.

Indeed, it is now many years since Lord Strathcona has presided at one of the annual meetings. In fact, not since he was raised to the peerage has his lordship been in Canada at that particular period of the year.

TO BE HONORARY PRESIDENT.

The special legislation, quite recently passed, will allow of the appointment of an honorary president, which, of course, will be Lord Strathcona, while the elevation of Sir George Drummond to the presidency of the bank will make a vacancy. Therefore it is very generally believed in well informed financial circles that the vice-presidency will fall to Mr. E. S. Clouston, who for years has been the general manager, and in turn Mr. Vincent Meredith, now assistant general manager, will eventually become the general manager.

For some time past Mr. Clouston's health has not been of the best, and he has been compelled to leave the work of the bank for weeks at a time in order to seek changes of climate. [illegible] would gladly [illegible] a position where he could supply the work of the institution and lend his valuable advice, and at the same time not be tied down as he is at present.

PRESIDENT SINCE 1887.

Lord Strathcona has for years figured as one of the Bank of Montreal's largest stockholders. In 1882, while he was still plain Donald Smith, a Hudson's Bay factor, he was elected vice-president of the bank, and became president in 1887.

Sir George A. Drummond's connection with the bank dates back to 1882, when he became a director.

Mr. Clouston joined the Bank of Montreal in 1865. He became assistant general manager in 1887, and general manager in 1890.

Mr. H. Vincent Meredith entered the services of the Bank of Montreal in 1879, and since that time has been promoted steadily through the various grades to that of the assistant general managership.

OUR REPORT VERIFIED

Small Pox, as Noted in Former Issue Rampant in Chandos.

Our readers will remember that a short time ago, The Times gave particulars of a dreadful state of affairs in Chandos. We noted that there were many cases of smallpox. We noted that a cheese factory was infected with this dread disease. The conditions, it appears, have not been exaggerated to any great extent in our report regarding it.

Dr. Bell, who is noted in another column, was in our sanctum yesterday, states that the total number of cases of which he is cognizant is 28, though there may be more in outlying districts.

A serious feature of the outbreak which has developed recently is the fact that a number of cheese in a Chandos township factory have been exposed to infectious conditions, and it is possible that at least thirty-six will be destroyed at once.

A state of disquiet prevails in the whole surrounding district. Practically the whole section in which the disease has developed has been placed in quarantine, but through the foolhardy action of a number of those isolated in breaking the restrictions imposed, it has been found necessary by those quarantine officials upon every road by which escape is possible.

Though about two-thirds of the cases now under treatment are adults the spread of the disease has been to a large extent through the schools. In two schools visited by Dr. Bell, a case has developed in every family represented. Children were discovered in attendance at the schools with the rash plainly apparent, and even with pustules fully developed upon their arms. The cases were almost wholly confined to Chandos and Faraday townships, each family in which the disease has developed caring for its own cases.

Most carelessness and ignorance have been in evidence and a number of cases of well-developed small-pox as noted in our first report, which was the earliest intimation of the matter had in Peterboro, were diagnosed as chicken pox, and even as [illegible]

Twenty-six Men of the Two Crews Were Drowned.

London, November 3.—The Swedish steamer Johan, of 1,200 tons, and the Russian barque Antares, of 340 tons, both foundered recently in the North Sea, after a collision. Twenty-six men of the two crews were drowned. The captain and carpenter of the Johan were landed at Helsingborg by a German steamer, while the captain and cook of the Antares were landed at Stromness by a steam trawler which picked them up soon after the collision.

When told that he would die, the minister said: "I would rather take this journey than the one I had anticipated to Chicago." He sang and prayed while the surgeons were operating on him at the hospital. He died two hours afterward.

THE STRIKE OVER

Mr. Gunsolus Has a Full Staff of Men Working in Place of Those Who Left

A Times representative yesterday called upon Mr. Gunsolus, the Hunter street harness maker, to ascertain how the strike, fully described in recent issues, was progressing.

Mr. Gunsolus said so far as he was concerned there was no strike on at his place. He said the whole affairs, simply amounted to several men, whom he has kept on, through good and bad business, for years, in the case of one employee, for seven years, leaving of their own accord last Saturday night. Mr. Gunsolus assured The Times man that one or two of the men, employed until last Saturday night by him, some months ago left for a time to try their fortunes in the large harness shops of Detroit. He added that these men did not get higher wages than he paid, when they went to Detroit, but that, as soon as work slackened the men were at once "fired."

Mr. Gunsolus told The Times that, without inserting an advertisement for men, he has already filled the places of all those who left him Saturday. As The Times has given the opinion, and statements of both Mr. Gunsolus and those of his former employes, we have acted in a fair way to both sides, and must consider the matter as a closed incident.

THE SHORTAGE OF CARS

Canadian Shippers Said to be Much Better Served Than American

Montreal, November 4.—A local railway official, speaking in reference to the matter of shortage of cars, which it is alleged exists at the present time, and complaints in regard to which have reached the Board of Railway Commissioners, said that there never was a time when cars were so plentiful, nor had there ever been so many locomotives available for hauling freight to the head of navigation as well as from the ports on the Great Lakes to eastern points. Canadian shippers, especially the farmers, he claimed, were far better off as regards car supply than were their American cousins. People who had been through the American North-West lately brought back reports of country elevators being crowded with grain, wheat being piled on the ground in North Dakota, and stored in sheds and every available place. Farmers had it in their houses, and those who had been fortunate enough to erect new abodes had been forced to use them as storehouses instead of residences. Cars were very scarce, and even when loaded with grain it was not an easy thing to get them moved. Shipping points had to wait ten days to two weeks for a car or two to load grain, and shippers were fortunate if they got them in that time. Shippers everywhere wanted cars and wanted them badly.

In Canada, if a car was not furnished within twenty-four of thirty-six hours, a howl went up; but what would shippers say if they had to wait from ten to fourteen days, as many shippers did in the United States? he queried.

CAPITAL CROSSING THE LINE

Interesting Story That Hints at Coming of Big Packing Concerns

Winnipeg, November 3.—American capital is coming into Western Canada rapidly. The latest investment of note by American men of money is the purchase of what is said to be a controlling interest in the J. T. Griffin Company, pork-packers, the biggest establishment of the kind in Western Canada. It is rumored that the Swift Co., of Chicago, is the investor. If this is true, then the Armour and Cudahy Companies can be counted upon to follow suit, as they are not in the habit of permitting their rivals to get a start on them.

The reorganized Griffin Company will do business under the same name, with the extensions here and at Calgary and Fort William that will total about $250,000.

GOW'S ASSOCIATES

These Who Were With Chas. Gow The Fatal Night Pay $43 Costs.

As public sentiment has been so aroused against the sentence imposed on Charles Gow, who by an act of folly killed the Hill boy and wounded his sister, the local officials of the provincial government's legal department, a few days ago, decided to prosecute those who were with Gow on the night of the fatality.

This last scene in the fife tragedy was enacted yesterday morning, when Edward Dewart, Stewart Murphy, William Murphy and George Gallagher was charged before County Magistrate Edmison in the county court with operating a disturbance on the night of Thursday, August 24th. Gallagher was not [illegible] until Friday A.M. The Murphys and Dewarts pleaded guilty.

Magistrate Edmison in imposing sentence said that a the disturbance had not been followed by the shooting of the Hill boy there would probably not have been any notice taken of it. The cheering on the highway was a common one and was generally allowed to go unnoticed. He thought that if he allowed the defendants to go on suspended sentence on paying the costs it would be sufficient punishment.

Mr. R. E. Wood, county crown attorney, asked that the defendants should be bound over to keep the peace on sureties of $100 each. Mr. Wood, very wisely said that this lawlessness in Dummer must be stamped out. He went on to describe how almost every dweller in the township is in possession of fire arms as though Dummer were located in the wildest districts of Kentucky.

In asking that the men be bound over to keep the peace, Mr. Wood said that the example set would act beneficially on the rising generation.

His Worship considered that justice would be done, and a good lesson taught, if he allowed the prisoners to go on suspended sentence, to appear one year after date.

He warned them that they would have to be very cautious in the future as they might at any time be arrested on the charge for which a conviction had been registered against them.

The prisoners had to pay the costs of the court which amounted to $15.-00 for Dewart and $27.70 altogether for the two Murphys.

A Party of Local Sportsmen Leave This Evening for Scott's Depot

Messrs. R. Glidden, Herb. Snowden, Frank White, Gibbs who plays the "Swinette" or any old instrument, with equal facility, and accomplishment. Dave Hall and Ald. Hicks, will leave to-night for Scotts Depot after deer. A rule was adopted last night that any member of the party forgetting a corkscrew, will incur a fine of $11.90, for every case where a corkscrew is demanded and not produced. We understand that several musical instruments will be taken by the party, to encourage a taste for the muse among the settlers round Gold Lake. Danny Simons, Peterboro's celebrated comedian, who is now drawing large audiences in leading American cities, had been invited to accompany the party, but a letter of regret was received yesterday.

Ald. Hicks will join the Ketchewamp Lake party, so the deer in that neighborhood had better take to the woods.

SIMPLE JOY

It Feels Mighty Good to Be Clear of Coffee Ills.

A Massachusetts woman had been a life-long coffee drinker and was slow to suspect that it was this habit that was making her life miserable.

"I can now see," she writes, "that the use of the old kind of coffee was the cause of my poor health, and before going any further, I want to say that Postum Food Coffee has done more for me than all the different medicines I took in the years I was ailing, for it has made me a well woman, while the medicines always failed. I have been drinking Postum for 2 years now, and shall never give it up willingly.

"The first intimation of breaking health that I had was when my stomach gave out; my digestion was so impaired that I had no appetite for breakfast and but little for any other meal. Then I became the victim of sleeplessness, and arose in the morning tired and languid and utterly unfit for the duties of the day before me. I grew so nervous that I could not hold my pen, my head felt achy and I became painfully thin.

"I must acknowledge the help the doctors gave me in finding out what was really the matter with me, for after vainly prescribing medicines, he suggested that I give up coffee, I did so, but with very little hope that it would do any good. I had to take something in the way of a hot, table beverage and fortunately, hit upon Postum.

"Quite a little time elapsed before the coffee poison was worked out of my system, but this was at last accomplished, and from that moment my health improved in every way. To-day I am as healthy a woman as can be found. My strength has returned, I sleep beautifully, my digestion has been completely restored, and I enjoy a good, hearty breakfast with no distress to follow it. My nervousness has disappeared, and I have taken on flesh so rapidly that my friends tell me I am 'getting fat.' I weigh more than I ever did before." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

HAVELOCK CAPITAL

Invested in Oil Wells, in Essex, with Capital of $100,000.

The Havelock Standard says:

The Alexandra Oil & Development Co., capitalized at $100,000, 1000 shares at $100 each, is the name of the company in which Havelock capitalists are heavily interested. Mr. Jas. A. McDonnell, of Marmora, a heavy shareholder, has lately visited the oil well on the company's property in Essex, and speaks in glowing terms of the prospects. It is the finest ever found in the district, for where others have only six feet of oil sand, this one has nineteen. Perhaps it has more, for drilling was discontinued when nineteen feet had been gone through. Several more wells will be sunk to give supply for a pipe line which will have to be laid over two miles to Wheatly, the nearest railway station.

Messrs. Thomas Bennett and R. P. Nolan showed us a bottle of the crude oil last week, and it is said to be of better quality than any found heretofore in this country.

POLICE COURT NEWS

Last night a grey haired resident of Blackstock, who gives his name as D. Milne, passed the weary vigils of the night, reclining curled up on a hard plank in the bridal chamber of the Hotel des Cops. Milne only found out too late, that city whiskey has a larger percentage of alcoholic stimulant, than that dispensed by country hotels. He will explain matters at 10 a.m. to-day.

At yesterday morning's police court a man employed by the P.P. & C. Co., was charged with having been d. & d. on Thursday night. The trouble, according to the evidence of Mr. W. Hulder of the Peterboro Fuel and Cartage Company, was that the prisoner, who until that night, was working for the company, raised a disturbance in front of their office. It seems that he had gone to move some stuff for a customer, but had partaken too freely of the cheering bowl. The fine and costs amounted to $5.85, which was paid.

The small boy Gibson, who broke a pane of glass at 160 Park street, and whose father paid on Thursday, the price of the glass, was up yesterday for sentence. His worship gave the boy a talking to, and let him go on payment of the costs, which amounted to $3.40 This brings the cost of throwing one stone up to $6.90.

There should be a big crowd at to-day's game which promises to be one of the most desperately fought battles ever seen on a Peterboro field. A Brockville despatch says; Brockville will not default the remainder of its games in the O.R.F.U. intermediate series, but will go to Peterboro on Saturday, to play the team of that town.

While the situation the first of the week looked blue, the president of the local club has responded to the occasion, and will guarantee the expenses of the team for Saturday's trip, and the boys will leave here on the early train Saturday morning.

An effort was made by the local manager to have a sudden death game in Toronto on the 11th inst. but to this the Peterboro team would not give their consent.

The Brockvilles had a good work out yesterday and to-day. Gray and Duran have been unable to take part, owing to injuries received at Kingston, but both will be in shape for Peterboro. The same team as defeated the Limestones will take the field.

NEW GAME WARDENS

Game Warden Fitzgerald Appoints Two Temporary Inspectors.

That Mr. G. W. Fitzgerald is attending well and faithfully to his recently appointed duties as game warden, is fully in evidence. Whilst in the Mudoc district on Thursday, Mr. Fitzgerald appointed two temporary inspectors to look after the game interests in that section. Mr. Fitzgerald says that the hunters are flocking in there every day. So far no report of any deer being shot has been received, but Mr. Fitzgerald says he is going out himself the first of the week. He is on the inside track, and if there are any deer to be had on the game grounds, should know where and how to get them.

A Jerome K. Jerome Joke

Here is a sample of humor by Jerome K. Jerome, which he worked off at the opera house here on Wednesday evening:

"There were two bus drivers in London. One held up a bit of string as the other passed, and the simple action sent the latter into paroxysms of rage. The conductor, when asked the meaning of it all, replied, 'Can't you see the joke? Why, the other bloke's father was hanged this morning.'"

In telling the story, Mr. Jerome should request the audience to kindly not laugh for more than five minutes.

IN THE SPRING and in the Fall a good flesh building tonic is required whenever weakness or loss of weight is apparent. "The D & L" Emulsion will be found admirable for this purpose.

ATTACKED MOTHER

Boy Now In Sherbrooke Goal on Serious Charge.

Sherbrooke, Que., November 3.—Rufus Kenison, 16 years of age, is in gaol to await trial on the charge of attacking his mother at Lennoxville and inflicting injuries from which she may not recover. He claims that she attacked him first with a poker and that he acted in self-defence. The neighbors were attracted to the Kenison house by cries for help. When they arrived they found the woman seriously injured and the boy had disappeared. He was afterwards arrested. The family came from Coaticook some weeks ago.

GREAT SURGEON STRICKEN

Dr. J. W. Oswald of Chicago Is Paralized.

Chicago, November 3.—While performing a serious operation yesterday in a local hospital, Dr. J. W. Oswald, one of the leading surgeons on the leading surgeons on the north side, was stricken with paralysis. The operating knife fell suddenly from his hands. It was picked up by an assistant and given back to him, but it dropped again from his nerveless fingers, and then the attendants understood. They carried him from the room and another surgeon completed the operation. It is not expected that he will recover or even temporarily regain consciousness. Dr. Oswald is 62 years of age.

HINTS FLIGHT OF EMPRESS

Berlin, November 3. — The German cruiser Luebeck and ten torpedo boats put to sea today from Kiel for an unknown destination, giving rise to a rumor that they are bound for St. Petersburg, to bring the Russian Empress and her children to be the guest of Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia. No official confirmation of the report is obtainable.

German mails are being sent to Russia by steamers from Stockholm. Intermittent telegraphic communication with St. Petersburg is kept up.

Dual System of Telephones

Most of our merchants, professional men and citizens in general, for the past few months have been living in a deceitful mirage of hope that the unqualified nuisance of a dual system of telephones, in this city, was a dead letter. However, it seems that there is still some fear that in the dim and distant future this hold-up upon business men may substantiate.

The eloquent arguments that were offered about two years ago, when some far-sighted patriots succeeded in getting a valuable franchise from the taxpayers upon the assurance that the opposition telephone company, [illegible] to protect the "oppressed citizen from a soulless corporation, don't seem quite so convincing now. The prospect of another telephone system being installed, granted on the highest altruistic grounds, is disturbing the [illegible] the professional men, and the entire business interests of the city.

But the confusion and annoyance of two phones are not more alluring now than on the day the council was captivated by the opposition plan in its fresh young beauty and splendid promise.

And now the situation of two years ago remains substantially unchanged. The prospect of two distinct and competing telephone systems presents the same objections of confusion, annoyance and expense. The business interests of this city still confront the nuisance of a telephone war.

A telephone service is a natural monopoly. It is one of the very few public services in which competition cannot benefit the community. Efficiency and public convenience demand that there shall be a single telephone system. However, the situation down at the bottom is not one to be fussed and fumed over. It is very simple. The business men of Peterboro have the situation in their own hands. The value of the opposition franchise, whatever coterie of capitalists gets it, is determined precisely by the number of phones that they are able to install. If they can install no phones the foreign capitalists will disappear very quickly. Nobody need be bullied into taking two phones. No one need be beguiled into it.

The opposition telephone company is no longer masquerading in the garb of altruism. It is out in the open now for the money. All that the merchants, the professional men and the business men of Peterboro need do to escape this threatened annoyance, is to refuse to subscribe for a second superfluous telephone service. That will be the end.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 320 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $300,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $50,000.00 to $60,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividend and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.00 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 50 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate shareholders.

You can go to see the mines, read any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1904 produced $18,511.80 per hour, every hour, day and night. Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $38,500.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock as they would have something that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

When Run-down "Draggy," Used-up

You Lack the Vigor, Courage and Staying Power that "Ferrozone" Can Supply

Night comes and it's hard to sleep. Morning dawns and the anxious, tired feeling is still there. Don't neglect this gradual decline; it can't cure itself. But by forming rich, pure blood, Ferrozone will quickly supply the nutriment and building material your system craves.

Instantly you are aware that some powerful force is building up your depleted energies. Day by day you feel braced, toned, strengthened. Search the world over and you won't find anything to tone up a weak system like Ferrozone. Physicians claim it is the most strengthening, uplifting medicine ever discovered.

No more spells of tiredness, but bounding, joyful health when you take Ferrozone, of which Mrs. H. S. Gold, of Bowsman, Man., speaks in the following words of praise:

"I state my case because I think it may assist other women to health. A year ago I was almost a wreck. I was pale and emaciated, suffering from nervousness, and hysteria. Little things going wrong in the house bothered me. The doctor advised different treatments but they didn't help. He said my low condition was due to weakness that might never be cured. Ferrozone had a peculiar grateful effect and built me up quickly. The ills I suffered from are cured. I am now strong and vigorous and was made so by Ferrozone."

Why not cast aside the claims of sickness and enter the bright, happy life of robust health. Let Ferrozone help you—let it cure you once and forever. Price 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

UNION LABEL

PETERBORO, NOVEMBER 4 1905

PICKETING ILLEGAL IN U. S.

Last week the Chicago Typothetae, whose membership is made up of the leading employing printers of Chicago, obtained an injunction against the local union of the Typographical Union. The local union promptly made application to have it set aside. It was argued in its behalf that the union had a right to order a strike and in carrying out that strike it had the right to send out pickets, and these pickets had the right to endeavor to entice non-union employees of printing houses from their work. In so doing it was asserted that the pickets were simply engaged in lawful competition with the employers. Judge Holdom refused to entertain this view, because, as he pointed out, the union was not engaged in the printing business. The decision went still further, however. Judge Holdom declared the attempt made by the union to force employers to sign a contract for an eight hour day and a closed shop was unlawful. As far as the eight hour day is concerned, he declared the attempt to force it upon employers is unlawful, because of the recent decision given by the United States Supreme Court in which it held that the law forcing an eight hour day for men employed in bakeries was unconstitutional. "What the sovereign power of a state cannot do cannot be done by any other power, and the union of labor, like all others, whether natural or artificial persons, must yield to its principles whenever they conflict with the law of the land." This appears conclusive. As for the closed shop Judge Holdom cited the award of the anthracite coal commission "The right to remain at work where others have ceased to work or to engage anew in work which others have abandoned is part of the personal liberty of a citizen that can never be surrendered and every infringement thereof merits and should receive the stern denouncement of the law." Judge Holdom held, on these grounds that the action of the union were unlawful, amounting, in fact, to conspiracy. He, therefore, maintained the injunction.

The sad part is that Jerome K. Jerome will now write a book on Canada and announce that Canadians wouldn't know a joke, even if it came up and introduced itself.

Canadian Excellence in Print.

How old-time customs still linger in the face of modern life is indicated in a symposium on "Quaint Habits of Dress in Canada," in Canadian Good Housekeeping for November. Another article of suggestive interest is "A Canadian Pure Milk Farm," describing an enterprise near Ottawa of which Earl Grey is a patron. "His Clothes—As Seen by Her," is bright and to the point, as is also an article on Boy-training by Edwin Markham. There are a number of other articles and stories, and the regular departments, always invaluable to homemakers, are seasonably practical. The number is freely illustrated, Canadian Good Housekeeping is justifying its claim as "The Useful Magazine."

DRYING UP OF FALLS

Ottawa, November 2.—Dr. Ami, of the Geological Survey, has returned from Quebec, where he went to report as to the reasons why the Montmorency Falls dry up during the summer season. The work of the Canadian beaver is one of the chief causes of the lack of water. They have built a number of dams at the source of the river which cause the water to spill out when it is high, but hold back the supply when it is low. By building a dam near the falls out of which the water could be let gradually, a sufficient amount of water could be retained to prevent the falls drying up during the summer season.

EARNING $9 A DAY

That's About What the Toronto Brokers Pull Out.

Toronto, November 2.—It is figured that local brokers are making about $10 a day these dull times, some of them more, some of them less. Taking last week's business of 4,000 shares, and excluding bonds, the average among the 40 brokers was $25 apiece, or $9 a day, good union wages. But then, the plumber or the bricklayer has this advantage, that he doesn't have to pay $16,000 or so before he can go to work. It is hardly as bad as indicated, however, for the unlisted stock business helps out. It may be added that the brokers themselves, who are the ones chiefly interested, do not appear to be doing any worrying.

Many Deer Killed By Wolves.

Ottawa, November 2.—Hunters who have returned from the Pontiac district report that wolves have been playing havoc with the deer in the woods. "One buck was right in our midst," said a returned hunter. "He had been pursued for miles by wolves, and his hind legs were bleeding freely as the result of bites. Hunters' dogs are also being killed by wolves. Three shantymen report that they were chased by wolves, and had to take to trees for safety.

Gold Bug Stock

Has been withdrawn from the market by the Company. There is none of it for sale except a small block on which I have an option. This stock I am placing at 25 cents per share. 100 shares will cost you $25.00. In my judgment it will sell for 60 cents per share on the open market inside of 90 days. The papers of Oregon say that the rich find of ore in the Gold Bug mine is the greatest sensation known in the State in many months. Hon. George A. Newman, Assistant adjutant General of Iowa, has just been to Sumpter, visited the Gold Bug, bought heavily of the stock, and on his return tells me it has the finest ore and is the best looking property he saw any place in the West.

I give Bank references, the very best. I sell every share of this stock on honor. If you want 100 shares send $25.00 to the Mechanics' Savings Bank, Des Moines, telling them to turn the money over to me when I deliver the stock, to be sent to you. If you want 1,000 shares send $250. Everything about the Gold Bug is legitimate. It is now one of the richest mines of the North-West. We think that the first dividends will be paid in January or February, 1906, and you will see this stock selling at $1.00 per share on the open market in less than one year. Five strong veins, much of the ore literally sprinkled with free gold. Let me tell you about it more in detail. Address,

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quarts.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7.50 per annum for an individual, and from $35 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 0x1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

A trip around the world in 60 minutes at a mere trifle.

Scores upon scores of people are daily taking advantage of our very liberal and decidedly interesting offer.

Magnificently finished and exquisitely photo-color views in place of the oldtime and antiquated views of the past. A most pleasant and interesting hour to spend journeying around the globe viewing the places of greatest interest, most beautiful scenery, etc., at a mere trifle of cost through our liberal plan. These views illustrate some of the most noted places in the world—mountain scenery both in America and Europe—waterfalls and other famous natural phenomena, some of the world's most famous buildings, places of historical interest and places famous for beautiful architecture or beautiful natural scenery. This set is of the greatest educational value, presenting, as it does, such realistic likenesses of scenes and places that we all should know about. We want every household in this city to have one of these sets. Imagine yourself taken through the Orient, on a trip to California, through the world's Fair to see the splendid scenes as though you were right there on the spot. By a special process, a combination of lithographing and half-tone work, we are able to offer a collection of colored views from every part of the world in the most beautiful, natural and startling life-like color effects, which must be seen to be appreciated. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and beauty of these views. Come and see them. We want each and every household in this city to have a set of these.

It wasn't so very long ago that hundreds of thousands of people spent many pleasant hours with the stereoscope, but heretofore they were compelled to pay enormous prices for views, think of it, as high as 50c each for colored pictures. We sold thousands upon thousands of stereoscopic views, in colors, at 50c each in those days, but imagine each and every view had to be colored by hand. In the past few months we have had repeated demands for them, and being able to secure the latest and most beautiful colored views to furnish to the public at a ridiculously low price, we entered into the stereoscope plan on quite a large scale, and have taken immediate advantage of the International Art Association, who have spent an enormous amount of money to get out special color plates and have finally completed their end, namely: To place on the market thousands of magnificent stereoscopic views, the most beautiful, interesting and exciting scenes from every land, in the grandest and most exquisite natural colors.

Now we come to our great special offer. Read our plan carefully as it describes the stereoscope and tells how to secure the scope and views at almost no cost to you.

First the stereoscope. The Stereoscope is our world-famous "Aluminum Crystal Lens" Stereoscope. Genuine aluminum hood, bound with dark rich red velvet. Frame is of fine finished [illegible] with patent folding handle, folding underneath frame, and sliding bar. The lenses are extra fine quality, selected for clearness and brilliancy, 1¾ inches in diameter, ground from best quality glass and carefully adjusted. This Crystal Lens Aluminum "Scope" has won universal praise from lovers of the beautiful, and as a means of entertainment stands second to nothing.

We have made so thorough a study of all the diseases of men—of Varicocele, Stricture, Blood Poisons, Hydrocele, Nervous Debility, Paralysis, Bladder, Urinary and Kidney Diseases, General Weakness, Loss of Vitality, and have cured so many thousands of cases that if there is a cure for YOUR disease you will find it here. When we undertake a case there is no such thing as failure. We charge nothing for consultation and our knowledge, skill and experience are at your service. We will explain to you How and Why We Can Cure You; why the diseases of men require the knowledge and skill of Master Specialists. We do not require to see you, but with your case as we know from experience it fully warrants of cures exactly what to prescribe for your symptoms. Don't be discouraged if you have treated without success with Quacks, Fakirs, Electric Belts, Free Trials, etc. You must get cured—and Doctors [illegible] for [illegible] years—why not [illegible] Should your case prove incurable you need not pay us a dollar. We refer you to any bank in this city as to our financial standing. If you cannot call write for a Question Blank for Home Treatment. Consultation Free. Booklets sent Free.

A Tangled Web

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

Author of "Beaton's Bargain," "His Perfect Trust," "By Another Name," "Her Heart's Idol," "Half a Truth," "His Rival."

"Indeed!" cried Lady Dorrington, feeling exceedingly uncomfortable. "He had no business to disturb you."

"He did not disturb me. I would not be disturbed. He asked to see me." There was a silence of nearly two minutes, while Lady Dorrington thought in vain for some wise and cautious words with which to reply before she found them. Mrs. Ruthven, [illegible] very handsomely, [illegible] opening her eyes and settling on her hostess: "I suppose he wished to announce his engagement to Miss L'Estrange, if it is true. Is it true, Lady Dorrington?"

What a question! What would she not have given to be able to deny the fact with scorn and indignation? As it was, ought she not to be thankful the ice was broken?

"Why, my dear Mrs. Ruthven, who in the world told you?"

"Some one mentioned it in one of the letters I have been reading."

"Shirley," thought Lady Dorrington. "Viper."

"But is it true?" persisted Mrs. Ruthven.

"Oh! I don't know what to think! I am afraid there is something in it. Indeed, I have been infinitely annoyed." Lady Dorrington paused abruptly, feeling inexpressibly awkward.

"You are not inclined for this marriage then?" said Mrs. Ruthven, a peculiar and not very amiable smile passing over her face.

"Inclined for it! Why it is the bitterest disappointment to me! You must know that, my dear Mrs. Ruthven!"

"Ah! Miss L'Estrange has but a small fortune, and it will take more than an ordinary one to put your brother's affairs in order."

"Besides that," cried Mrs. Dorrington, "there are other considerations! Nora L'Estrange is quite unfit to be Clifford's wife. He will tire of her in six months."

"That is very probable. He is not wise."

"And he actually talks of letting Evesleigh on a lease for years, and sinking into a Continentalized dilettant Englishman."

Mrs. Ruthven compressed her lips, and her pale cheeks flushed as she answered in a low, clear tone:

"Your brother is changeable and impulsive. After all, it is quite probable the marriage may never take place."

"He appears to have committed himself fully," said Lady Dorrington, who, now that the ice was broken, found it a relief to talk on this vexatious subject. Mrs. Ruthven was silent, leaning her elbows on the arms of her chair, and pressing her finger tips together, while her face, which had grown deadly white again, expressed cold, implacable displeasure.

"I am no sensitive young girl, Lady Dorrington," she said at length, with a kind of slow bitterness, "to shrink from expressing my feelings, and I think you will admit that your brother has deceived me, basely, treacherously. He no doubt found it convenient to lead his creditors to believe that he was on the point of marriage with a rich widow, and so gain time for the settlement of his affairs. For this, he did not hesitate to make me an object of remark to all the company at his house when I was his guest."

"I am not surprised at anything you say," cried Lady Dorrington, greatly distressed and even alarmed at the suppressed concentrated fury which she perceived under Mrs. Ruthven's carefully preserved self-control. "I am infinitely ashamed of Clifford; but, indeed, he is in every way incapable of making the use you suggest of his position with you. He is the merest slave of his whims and fancy. He was, I know, greatly taken with you; and then all that horrid business of the robbery kept you apart; and he fell in with Nora—and—oh! it is all beyond my comprehension! It makes me perfectly ill when I think of Clifford's unutterable folly. I had, indeed, hoped to call you my sister."

"I think you are honest, and alive to the advantages that marriage with me offers. I shall always consider you my friend. As to your brother, I have made up my mind how to act. He will find I am not to be trifled with; but I must gather a little more strength before I can deal with the matter."

"Surely, my dear Mrs. Ruthven, no legal redress could possibly atone for the wrong done?" said Lady Dorrington, in uncertain accents, very different from her usual decided tone, so appalled was she by the prospect of the commonplace vulgarity of an action in court.

"Are you afraid of a breach of promise trial," was her guest's counter-question, accompanied by a mocking contemptuous laugh. "That would be a very weak and inefficient payment of the debt I owe Mr. Marsden—but I will not allow myself to speak more on the subject. It must be most painful to you; it is too much for me. I can write no more to-day. May I trust to your kindness to send for Sir Harley Portman? And will you be so good as to ask Virginie to bring me my medicine? I must rest and be quiet now."

Lady Dorrington felt herself dismissed.

If she had gone to Mrs. Ruthven in an anxious, angry frame of mind, she left her with a sense of danger and trouble intensified tenfold. The change in Mrs. Ruthven's manner from its ordinary caressing softness to the abrupt decision of one who knew her power and would use it, seemed to take the ground of superior position and higher breeding from under the elder woman's feet. Mrs. Ruthven was, indeed, not to be trifled with. The vagueness of her threats made Lady Dorrington still more uneasy. Did she know of any crooked corners in Clifford's conduct which would brand him with dishonour [illegible] and blemish [illegible] abroad? If so, how merciless she would be. "I wish I never had anything to do with her," thought Lady Dorrington, as she sat down in the refuge of her own morning-room. "It is useless to try and help Clifford. He is hopeless. But I think I must send him a line of warning. I am really afraid of that woman. I shall never care to be with her again. She was naturally angry, and I do not wonder [illegible] look in her eyes. I do believe she has a large share of Eastern blood! How unprincipled it was of Mrs. L'Estrange and Nora to attract Clifford! They are quite aware that I am most anxious he should marry Mrs. Ruthven quite; yet they set themselves against me; and I have been so fond of Nora, and so kind to her too."

Here her reflections became chaotic: Though of the strong-minded order of woman, Lady Dorrington had both family pride and family affection in abundance. The idea of open scandal or disgrace attacking her brother was intolerable, and her anxiety to shield him was not one whit lessened by her indignation and wrath with his inconsiderate folly!

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS.

Dr. Bell Calls on The Times.

Dr. R. W. Bell, who formerly had a large practice in Peterboro, but who now very ably fills the position of Inspector of the Provincial Board of Health, Toronto, was in the city yesterday, and gave our sanctum a friendly call. Time is dealing kindly with the doctor who does not look a day older than when he wielded the stethoscope and saw in Peterboro.

The Lift Closed Yesterday

The lift lock was closed for the season yesterday, and the guard gates were placed across the canal. The construction of the coffer dam at Norwood Road bridge will be proceeded with at once and the canal drained from that point to the lift lock. The season has been a most satisfactory one, and no mishaps were recorded, the lock working perfectly.

Blacksmith Business for Sale or Rent

Want to sell or rent, a blacksmith business, frame house and stable, and one acre of land, with a number of fruit trees and good spring well in a village five miles from C.P.R. and G.T.R. stations. Daily mail and a good thriving part of country. Good business done the year round, and no opposition. Only reason for selling is ill-health at present. For full particular write to M. C., in care of this paper.

After Stray Dogs.

Ald. Begley, at the regular meeting of the Council on Monday night, will introduce a by-law which will prohibit dogs running at large at certain periods of the year. This alderman will introduce this as a matter of motion in the first instance, and if the members of the Council approve of his plan the by-law will be passed.

His opinion is that dogs during the hot summer days should not be allowed to run the streets.

Peterboro Firm Recommended

Messrs. Thurn & Co., the Simcoe street plumbers, yesterday received a very large order for heating apparatus. The gentleman leaving the order, when in their establishment, produced a letter from a friend in Toronto, who had had his house heated by the Toronto branch of Messrs. Thurn & Co. To quote an extract from this letter, the Toronto gentleman said, "I have had great difficulty with plumbers here, but I must say you Peterboro people are lucky in getting Thurn & Co., there, as they have given me the first real satisfactory job I ever had. They know their business down to the ground." This is high praise from a Hogtown builder.

STRENGTHENING FOREBAY

C. G. E. Co. Had Large Gang of Men Working at Nassau Last Night.

This forebay is an important factor in the source of power for the company, being the reservoir for the [illegible] pit. The cracks [illegible] a leakage, that in time might become formidable.

Last night the company had a gang of some 50 men at work, placing concrete, to a depth of eight inches on the floor of the forebay to strengthen it.

The water in the forebay was shut out and the machinery in the power house will not be in operation until Monday morning, when it is expected operations will be completed. In the meantime there will be no interruption to the work at the C.G.E. Company, power being supplied by the Peterboro Light and Power Company. There are 6,500 square feet of water in the forebay and the average depth is sixteen feet.

OFFICERS ELECTED

At a Meeting of the Peterboro Art Culture Club Last Night.

The Peterboro Art Culture Club met last night and enjoyed a delightful paper on "Wordsworth," kindly given by Sheriff Hall, also a paper by Miss Datchler, Miss Dobbin, and Miss Campbell, after this Rev. J. C. Davidson presented the arbitrators' resignation, their term of office having ended. These were Mr. Davidson, president; Mrs. A. Wilmot, secretary. The following were the new officers elected;

President—Mrs. Macfarlane-Wilson.
Secretary—Miss M. Rush.
Librarian—Miss W. Dobbin. (re-elected.)

The next meeting will be held two weeks from last night.

FOOD DOES IT

Curious How Right Food Rebuilds Body.

The benefits of the good, red blood made by Grape-Nuts food is described in a letter from Chicago:

"I was for years sadly afflicted with hemorrhoids caused by constipation, which was the result of impure blood supplied by food not adapted to the needs of the body under certain conditions. My trouble extended to rectal hemorrhoids which greatly reduced my strength. A surgical operation gave me no relief, and I was compelled finally to quit business.

"Luckily, just when things were looking the blackest, some one recommended Grape-Nuts food as a desirable article of diet, and I began (Dec. 1901) its use, and in a few months brought my health back to me.

"The action of my bowels is free and regular now, and this has brought relief from the hemorrhoids. At the same time a neuritic trouble which had been growing on me and which the doctors could never do anything with, has also disappeared. All this return to health I am free to say I owe to Grape-Nuts food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. There's a reason.

BARRIE PAID $11.06

Doure Citizens Pays Heavily for Using Abusive Language.

On completion of the Dummer outrage case yesterday, County Police Magistrate Edmison had still another case to try. In this case Michael Barrie was charged with having used abusive language against Mr. O'Brien, one of Dour's most prominent citizens, is treasurer of St. Joseph's church, Doure. His evidence went to show that when he tried to collect the pew rent, claimed to be due by Mr. Barrie, an altercation arose.

Barrie thought he had settled up to date, while O'Brien was positive he had not. On Sunday, Oct. 22, it was given out in church that Barrie had paid his pew rent for 1904, whereas he claims that it should have been for 1905. After church the two men met on the road and altercation arose in the course of which Barrie called O'Brien a liar and other still more choice names.

Barrie was fined $2 and costs amounting in all to $11.06. His counsel, Mr. E. B. Edwards, will likely appeal against the decision of the magistrate. Mr. W. H. Moore looked after O'Brien's interests.

FIRE ENGINE SHIPPED

The London Fire Fighter Went to Montreal Yesterday.

As our readers are aware the Canadian Fire Engine Co., of London, left the engine here, that was on trial last week, until such time as they needed it elsewhere.

Mr. James, the veteran engineer, in the employ of the Canadian Fire Engine Co., London, yesterday shipped both the chemical engine and steam engine, belonging to the London concern. Mr. James had been deputed by the London Company to look after these two fire fighters during their temporary sojourn here. The steam engine was shipped to Montreal, whilst the chemical engine was sent back to London. Mr. James left last night for his home in London.

Bogus Bills Circulating.

There was a current rumor yesterday about the city that some one is circulating counterfeit $5 and $10 bank bills of a bank which has no branch in Peterboro. Inquiry made of the different banks today revealed the information that so far as they knew there was nothing in the rumor. Whilst these counterfeit bills may not, as yet, have reached the bank tellers, it is the part of wisdom to keep one's eyes open, when dealing with strangers.

First Deer Here This Season

Messrs. Thomas Brightman, his son John Brightman, and Mr. J. Brightman, have returned to the city from Quesse, where they have spent two weeks deer hunting about twenty miles north of Pembroke. The party had good luck, each getting all the law allows. Two bucks shot by Mr. John Brightman and Mr. J. Brightman, jr., arrived in Peterboro yesterday morning, being the first of the season to reach here. They were very fine animals, tipping the scales at 250 pounds each.

Canadian Pacific Appointments.

Montreal, November 1.—Mr. W. Ball, heretofore assistant superintendent of the dining car department of the Winnipeg district of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has been appointed district superintendent with jurisdiction over the western lines of the same company, with headquarters at Winnipeg, and Mr. S. C. Sykes has been appointed assistant district superintendent of the Pacific division with headquarters at Vancouver. A circular to the above effect was issued by Mr. Geo. McL. Brown, superintendent of the Canadian Pacific Railway dining, parlor and sleeping car department, today.

The Chicago Record-Herald.

Life is such a serious business with the average mortal than an opportunity for a hearty laugh is more than welcome to most people. "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine," and so do the humorous features of that great metropolitan daily, The Chicago Record-Herald. The first thing that greets you on the first page of every issue is the humorous cartoon by Ralph Wilder, the well-known artist, that frequently tells more at a glance than could be conceived in a column of reading matter. Every issue contains also a humorous small story on the editorial page, and the "Alternating Currents" column, written by S. E. Kiser, one of the most popular humorous writers in the country. In addition to all these, the Sunday issue always includes a comic section, guaranteed to produce laughter.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The American Girl.

WHAT MAKES HER POPULAR.

The American girl is admired and liked at home and abroad because she is the happiest, usually the healthiest and friendliest of girls. She is fond of life and is alive to everything beautiful and good in existence. Mrs. Langtry has said that the American woman has little to learn from her English sisters.

Dr. Pierce, the specialist in women's diseases, of Buffalo, N. Y., advises simple exercises for women, preferably in the outdoor air. But many women are confined to the house and their household duties or their business confines them to poorly ventilated rooms.

If a woman suffers from a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability, or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, she naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the [illegible] of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The local disorder and inflammation of the delicate special organs of the sex should be treated steadily and systematically.

Backed up by over a third of a century of remarkable and uniform cures, a record such as no other remedy for the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women ever attained, the proprietors and makers of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription now feel fully warranted in offering to pay $500 for any case of Leucorrhea, Female Weakness, Prolapsus, or Falling of Womb which they cannot cure. All they ask is a fair and reasonable trial of their means of cure.

BUTTER AND CHEESE BRINGS BIG MONEY

Thirty Millions for These Products in Ontario and Quebec

Montreal, November 6.—The farmers of Ontario and Quebec are $30,000,000 richer as the result of the total sales of butter and cheese made to the Canadian butter and cheese men during the past season of navigation.

The Lovell, Christmas Co., Ltd., in the first report prepared for the press today, show that the total number of boxes of cheese taken from the farmers during the year was 3,634,787, at a price to the farmer of 10 cents a pound, or a total value of $21,877,000. The total number of packages of butter purchased were 701,891, at an average price of 21 1-3 cents a pound, or $12 a package, making a total value of $4,412,000.

There has never been a season in the history of the industry in which the farmers of Canada have been able to get such a high average price for the cheese and butter.

ST. JOHN'S AWAKENED

Rev. T. Powell of Eglington, Hands outs Some Plain Truth

St. John's church yesterday was well filled at both morning and evening services.

At the evening service there was not a vacant seat in the whole church.

Rev. T. Powell, rector of St. Clement's church, Eglington, near Toronto, very ably filled the pulpit at both services at St. John's church yesterday.

Rev. Mr. Powell, while still a young man, is quite an eloquent, convincing and stirring speaker; he is a man who deals with facts, in language graced enough to restrain the element from the idea of not giving the point he wants to emphasize; he goes right at it, if we might so paraphrase the fisherman's wife as iron hand in a velvet glove.

Rev. Mr. Powell's text, comprising some twenty odd verses, naturally presented the character of his coming discourse. He dwelt particularly on the 13 and 25th verses; "We are looking in these days for union among different religious bodies." No congregation living, practices the lessons given in the sermons on the mountain.

The "Sermon on the Mount," is one of the grandest and most comprehensive lessons ever given in any language. "Bank in the right bank, bank where no corrupting influence can damage your good intentions."

Some people say, "What can I lay up in the way of treasures in heaven?" One has two duties to perform, both to himself, and one to his God. What God wants is sincerity in His worship; take away all ostentation. "There is not a man or woman here to-night who cannot give alms. St. John's church, Peterboro, is not noted for the liberality of its almsgiving.

The speaker continued, "I venture to say there is not a young man in this church to-night, nor, what given more for Cocoso every week than he does to his God. I did not come here to-night to scold you brethren;" a congregation like this is well to do, one sees it on every hand.

After giving the congregation a good heart to heart lecture on their niggardly giving, as compared with the wealth of the congregation, the speaker remarked, "I did not intend to speak on this subject, but to change it.

There he spoke most eloquently, and in words, every one of which conveyed a lesson, of the good Samaritan. When the Lord divides the sheep from the goats, the works of man done for ostentation or for real good, will help decide the choice.

If the Church of England would only break down its barriers of stiffness, and throw out the right hand of welcome to every man as a brother, the Church would go on by leaps and bounds in God's service.

It is a strange thing for a stranger to come before a large congregation that he may never see again. If we break down the barriers surrounding the church, and give hand to the hearts that are breaking for sympathy, love and help, there would be no lawlessness or murder or suicide. This is what he the speaker, means by almsgiving, giving help to others that their hearts and souls are asking for. "Do you ever know the name of the floosy hundred births but or girl living next door? Not You are living in a shell of selfishness: Elizabeth Browning said—"Oh, that I might be the cup of strength to some one in their agony!" When you pray, you store up treasure in heaven." When a man sets or finds God by faith, or his ears hear Him by faith, he is praying. When a man and woman live together, or for many years, as man and wife, they grow to look alike.

He next, in touching terms, portrayed verbally, a perfect picture of a man and wife living together for 50 years, mingling their prayers and thanks from the cradle to the grave of their little ones, brought face to face with God, we get to look like God.

A Nerve Food IS FOUND IN Postum FOOD COFFEE THERE'S A REASON

A good rule for prayers, is to think a lot before you act and pray. When you grow to so face to face by prayer, with God, you lay up treasures in Heaven.

We of the Church of England, call ourselves Catholics; We are Protestants. The trouble is we want a good easy time when struggling towards Heaven. Many people in the English Church, think if they simply squeeze into Heaven, that is all they want. Are these the ones to stand on the threshold of God's temple, in His presence? Over-eating as well as over-drinking, is a sin. By fasting, the speaker does not, when Lent comes, mean giving up meat that people are tired of, and taking to oysters. Fasting means putting a curb line on one's self, so to speak, on control sin, hate, passion, love or self, taken by fasting.

The difference between modern man and Christ is that man wants to stand at the top of the ladder, Christ went down, down and down, in His glorious mission of salvation of mankind. Christ even washed the beggar's feet. Day by day as we deal with the things of this earth, we are preparing our future. To help our fellowmen, we must conquer ourselves, and then reach out to help our neighbours.

No man can serve two masters. You cannot build up a noble character and give way to the dictates of self. What are we getting ready for? We are given a certain time here, to prepare to meet our God. Let us try to see what Jesus Christ looked for in His fellow men.

The speaker gave a splendid comparison between a sculptor looking at a rough block of marble, and how the average man saw it. The former at once sees what he can make out of it; in the same way we ought to look for what we can see in, and bring out of our fellow men.

A LOCAL SINGER

Toronto Saturday Night Has High Praise for Miss Helen Davies

In a very long article on "Choral Work in Toronto," that well edited and readable paper, Toronto Saturday Night, of last issue, has the following in reference to Miss Helen Davies, our local rising queen of song:

"The soprano part is especially well taken, and in this connection it is a pleasure to refer to Miss Helen Davies of Peterboro, who created such a favorable impression at last year's concert, and who is to act as soloist in January. Among our young Canadian singers Miss Davies is taking a prominent place and it is matter for congratulation that one of "our own people" should be chosen for this work. Her voice is singularly pure and flexible, and a bright future may await this talented girl from Ontario's youngest city."

In this article Saturday night gives great praise to Dr. Albert Ham to whom Alberta the paper attributes the great success crowning the recent musical festival.

Two hundred members assembled in the Toronto Conservatory of Music last Monday night for practice. That in the case of so many of Toronto's leading musicians and musicians, Miss Davies, should be singled out for such direct notice, proves that this "Sweet Singer" of Peterboro, must reap a crown of laurels and praise for herself, and thus reflect credit upon both the Peterboro Conservatory of Music, and upon the city itself, her home.

ANOTHER CANADIAN BANK

The United Empire Bank of Canada Will Soon Do Business

That the large financial institutions of Canada are not only doing well as regards personal investments, made by stockholders, but are attracting much attention from the capitalists in England, is shown by the fact that another bank will shortly enter into competition with those already established.

The latest entry into the financial arena on Canada's banking institutions is the United Empire Bank, with head quarters in Toronto.

It is an interesting fact, that this coming bank, whose certain success, is assured by a glance at the names of its directorate, has already received orders of sufficient capital surprised from London, the center of the world's finance.

The United Empire Bank, does not start, however, as an experiment in the genuine change of finance, but, under the management of a gentleman who for ten years successfully steered the destinies of the Standard Bank of Canada, so successfully, through the troubled seas of competitive finance. We refer to Mr. George P. Reid, one of Canada's ablest financiers.

The new bank has already, under negotiations at the Pacific Bank of Canada, obtained its charter, and is now apply to Parliament for permission to take the name United Empire Bank.

The United Empire Bank is now organizing 20,000 shares of stock, to Canadians, in preference to offers already made them by European capitalists, seeking sure and profitable investment, at par value, $100 per share.

The banking system of Canada, and a resume of Canada's history of banking, shows conclusively that Canadian bank stocks are the best and most certainly profitable investment for capital there is. The Government Blue Book, giving a detailed statement of all the banks of Canada, recently issued shows that investment in Canadian bank stocks is about the next thing, as regards safety for the investor to British consols.

A very brief enquiry shows that nearly every investor who got in on the ground floor, on any Canadian bank stock, can to-day sell his stock at from 50 to 100 per cent. increase over par value.

To those seeking a conservative, and at the same time, lucrative investment, we would only say, consult this large adv. of the United Empire Bank on another page of this issue, weigh well the names of those constituting the bank, and then write, before the stock goes above par, to Mr. Geo. P. Reid, Lawler Bldg., corner King and Yonge streets, Toronto.

Josie Carr Sentenced To Seven Years

Will Go to Kingston Penitentiary for Killing the Child She Had Kidnapped---Cried in Court and Said She Was Sorry.

Toronto, Nov. 6.—Josephine Carr, who pleaded guilty to the charge of killing the little Murray baby last May, was sentenced, Saturday morning by the Lordship, Mr. Justice MacMahon to serve a sentence of seven years in the Kingston Penitentiary.

The court rooms was crowded long before His Lordship ascended the bench.

The case was a very startling one, and has attracted marked attention from its very beginning.

CRIED WHEN CALLED ON.

On entering the prisoners' dock, Josephine, though very pale, was apparently not very nervous. When Mr. Rosinette, her counsel, went over to consult with her, her eyes filled with tears. When asked if she had anything to say, she commenced quietly to cry.

"I pleaded guilty to killing the child," she said. "My brother said he would tell my father, so I was frightened and hid the baby. When I went down to see it, the child was dead. I am sorry."

Mr. Robinette then addressed the court on behalf of the little prisoner. After taking the child she had become frightened, he said, and committed the deed which led to the serious charge to which she has pleaded guilty. Her object was really to obtain the clothes and carriage, and not to do away with the baby.

THE JUDGE'S REMARKS.

His Lordship said that he had given the case the most careful thought to be done with the prisoner great and very serious consideration. He had consulted with Mr. Kelly, the Ontario Government's Superintendent of Neglected Children, and the Parole officer of the Department of Justice at Ottawa. There was no doubt that the desire of obtaining money was the first instigation in this matter of taking the perambulator. Perhaps she had had no idea of doing away with the child. That was the more lenient view to take of the case, and that was probably the reason that the Grand Jury had changed the charge to manslaughter. Had they made the charge murder, a petty jury upon investigation might have found her guilty.

SENTIMENT SHUT OUT.

He could not let sentiment affect in a case like this. It was his duty to see what was the best that could be done for the prisoner. The influences in her life had been anything but uplifting, and had dragged her down to the unfortunate position she now occupied, an awful situation for a girl of her age.

COME AND GO

One Gold Lake Party Returns and Another Left Saturday Night

The Gold Lake hunting party, who left Saturday night, on arrival of the fishing contingent from the camp, left about 5 o'clock Saturday evening. Messrs. William Snowden, his son Harold, and R. T. Tooley, who had been out after the elusive trout for about six weeks, came home, Saturday evening spattered with mud, but in the best of health. They report that the fish this year did not bite well, but what they lacked in fish was fully compensated for in cuttermilk and other sundries not bought in a dry goods store. Mr. Snowden, who was not very well at the beginning of the trip, has gained many years in health.

Messrs. Hero Snowden, Frank White, Geo. Irwin, the Charlotte St. tonsorial specialist and others, went out fully equipped and keen for the hunt.

A few minutes before the party left Saturday night a telegram was received from Peterborough, congratulations to the latest successful branch of the American Anga, Mr. Danny Simms, the now celebrated Toronto. Danny's telegram read:

"Sorry can't possibly leave. Important engagement. Don't forget your corkscrew. My latest gag is 'There is no fishing here.' Good luck. Danny."

The party drove out as far as Buckhorn Saturday evening. One member of the party, who had never been hunting before, arrived at the rendezvous, from where the crowd left, with a pair of patent leather shoes and a shinny stiff hat on. He was quickly invested in a pair of rubber top boots and a peaked cap, as being more suitable for a snowy morning on a runway.

The returning party report that on the first day of open season, they could not hunt owing to bad weather. On Thursday they killed four deer, including a splendid buck, shot by A.M. F. E. Maugie. Mr. Snowden brought in a fine buck weighing 280 pounds, shot by Mr. Tom Rutherford.

Mayor May Make Charges

Winnipeg, November 6.—Mayor Sharpe is said to have in preparation a letter which will throw a bombshell into civic circles, and is said to charge corruption in certain quarters. The mayor, however, on report goes, exhibited himself on several occasions in no very complimentary terms on the conduct of one or two men in civic affairs.

GENERAL SPORTING GOSSIP

THE TURF—BASEBALL—LACROSSE—FOOTBALL

HOCKEY.

The local hockey club will hold their annual meeting to-morrow, night.

• • • •

The general impression seems to be that Peterboro will have a good team. With all of last year's bunch here and with "Maggie" Whitcroft, Edwards, Currier, Johnston and others good ones to pick from a fast combination can be placed on the ice.

• • • •

There should be a large attendance on Tuesday night to help get Canada's great winter game under way.

RUGBY.

Saturday's game between Brockville and Peterboro in the first of the series proved to be a great win for the homsters, as they won handily by the big score of 37—0. Peterboro and Dundas will go into the finals as Brockville hasn't one chance in a million of overcoming the 37 points lead, and, if the locals play the game, they ought to increase the lead in Brockville.

The game was played before the largest rugby crowd of the season, numbering about 200 paid admissions and a few hundred dead heads. The weather at the start of the game was cold and rainy, but the locals played such a hot game it cleared up and the sun came out and had a look. The field was in fair shape, considering the rain and snow of the past week.

Both teams caught and ran well and there was very little fumbling on either side. The Peterboro wings outweighed the Brockville forwards and were faster. They followed up good, and were on the ball all of the time.

The Brockville team back of the line were fine and all little fellows. They were fast and checked well. Kersey at quarter is a good general and played a pretty game. Kinton the little half half in a jneeb, and his tore off some dangerous sprints. He gained 80 yards on one run, and was loudly applauded. White, at full, made some good returns, and pulled his team out of many tight holes. Chapman caught and kicked well and Robinson did well until he had to retire.

All the Peterboro men, without exception, played a great game. Shaw kicked five and followed up and tackled like a fiend. His punts were well placed. Ford played the best game he has ever played in this town, and his tackling and running was superb. He downed several runners and downed his man every time. Crowley ran and caught and played his usual good game. Muldern had hard work to get in any of his snake like rushes. Alex. Gillespie at quarter caught well and made several fine runs, when returning the ball on punts by the opposing halves. Gene Hartwooles had the team under good control, and in the backs he had the goods. The inside wings held their men well, and the middle men did well. Creagh and Gilbert the ends tackled hard and fast, and Creagh blocked a couple of kicks for touch-es.

The first half Peterboro kicked against the wind, and at the end the score was 8—0, a try and two rouges, as Shaw kept kicking, and as the Brockville halves caught the ball, they would invariably make their mark. Peterboro always returned the ball fast and did not like their wings on chasing back and forward. The play was in Brockville's territory half the time and, after a series of kicks, Crowley hooked over the line for a five. Shaw converted nicely. He booted the pigskin for the other two points before the half time whistle blew.

In the second half it was Peterboro all the way and they simply played the easterners off their feet, and kept the ball moving toward the visitors' line all the time. The only time the ball would get in Peterboro territory would be on a kick off, and then it would be worked back to the opposing line by runs and kicks.

Crowley and Muldern fuffed off rushes, and Shaw kept his number 12 trying to break the ball. It was fine rushes and the touches and passes came so fast onlookers lost track of the score, but the referee said it was 37—0, as everyone had the same that wouldn't come off. The official referee, Hayes, and umpire Robbins are the words and they are the first real good pair the O.R.F.U. ever sent here to handle a game. The teams had to play all of the time and everything worked like clockwork. The return game takes place in Brockville next Saturday and the locals ought to keep their string of victories intact and add another win to the list.

Following is the line-up:

Peterboro—Full back, Ford; right half, Crowley; center, Shaw; left, Muldern; quarter, Gillespie; scrap, Hartwooles; inside wings, Craig and Brown; middle, Meagher, Macdonald; outside, Gilbert and Creagh.

MISS CALCUTT'S MEMORY

Handsome Tablet Dedicated in St. Luke's Church Yesterday

Yesterday morning a very interesting event was included with the morning service at St. Luke's church. Rev. Mr. Langfeldt, rector of the church, after the Te Deum, had been sung, dedicated the handsome brass tablet, erected in the church, in memory of the late Miss Addie Calcutt.

A portion of that grand service, the office for the burial of the dead was read by the rector. This was followed by the appropriate hymn, "Rest all the saints, who from their labor rest."

The tablet bears, the short but touching inscription, "In loving memory of Adeline Balfour Calcutt, who died May 27th, 1905. 'Life is Rest for the righteous and Gladness for the upright in heart.' Erected by a few intimate friends."

Great interest was naturally taken in this simple ceremony of dedication, not so much for the intrinsic value of the tablet, as for the sterling worth of the deeply lamented lady whose memory it honors.

MANY PRINTERS ARRIVE

Twenty-Two Compositors for Winnipeg Offices

Quebec, November 6.—Twenty-two printers, destined to take the place of compositors on strike at Winnipeg, have arrived from England, in charge of Mr. Charles Brimmer. Forty-eight printers were supposed to have sailed on the Allan steamer Virginian, en route to Winnipeg, but when the steamer arrived and the medical inspection of the steerage passengers was completed, it was found that only twenty-two had registered as compositors.

THE CANADIAN NORTHERN

Mackenzie & Mann System Will Run Into Ottawa

Ottawa, November 6.—There is considerable discussion in railway circles at present, as to who it is that is having the railway surveys made at Billings bridge and Ottawa East. There is a well-founded rumor that the surveys are being made by the Canadian Northern, the Mackenzie and Mann Line. It is claimed that this road is making the surveys for the purpose of constructing a line from Ottawa to Hawkesbury, with the ultimate aim of extending it to Depot Harbor or a point near there on the Georgian Bay. This will give the Canadian Northern a first class wheat line from the St. Lawrence to Western Canada.

YUKON'S GOLD OUTPUT

Already Government Has Received Big Royalties for the Year

Ottawa, November 6.—The government has received royalty on over seven million dollars' worth of gold produced in the Yukon this year.

The Klondyke's gold production to October 19 was $7,656,000. The per capita output of the camp for the ten months of 1905 is about $1,500. No other camp in the world produces such a per capita. The gold output here is figured at $15 per ounce, while on the United States' side it is two and a half per cent. Several more millions may have been recovered from the placers, which was used in the preliminary business of the country. No export tax will be paid till the gold leaves the country, so that the additional output has not yet figured in the returns.

THE FISHERY TROUBLE

Great Britain is Not at All Anxious About it

London, November 6.—The fishery trouble between Newfoundland and the United States is engaging official attention here, but causes no acute anxiety. The recent action of the United States in regard to the poaching of lake fishermen is taken as an indication of the desire of the Washington authorities to take a reasonable view of suhc questions, and come to an amicable agreement with a readiness quite unknown a decade ago. On all hands the moral drawn here is how much Newfoundland would be at an advantage in dealings of this kind with the United States if she formed part of a powerful federation like the Dominion.

"Soo" Power Companies

Ottawa, November 6.—The International Waterways Commission will hold its next meeting in Buffalo, at which it will consider draft regulations requring additional works on the part of all the power companies on both sides of the river at the "Soo." The object of these regulations is to maintain the navigation of Lake Superior unimpaired. Representatives of the different power companies will be heard at Buffalo, and, when all the information regarding the situation at the "Soo" is before the board, a meeting will be held later in Ottawa to prepare legislation for enactment by Congress and the Dominion Parliament, by which all the "Soo" power companies must be governed.

Sanitarium Will Be Built

Quebec, November 6.—The long-talked-of sanitarium at Lake Edward for tuberculosis patients will soon be an accomplished fact, a company to build it having been incorporated and received 500 acres of land adjoining the railway track from the Provincial Government.

'GREEN GOODS" MAN CAUGHT

Operating the Game While Out on Bail Awaiting Trial

New York, November 6. — Disguised as a southern farmer, a post office inspector today arrested on a charge of fraudulent use of the United States mails, Charles Barry, said by the Government authorities to be an old-time "Green Goods" man. Barry was arrested on a similar charge a few months ago, and was only recently released on $1,000 bail. When arraigned on the second charge today he was remanded in default of $10,000 bail.

Some time ago, J. H. Gardner, a well-to-do citizen of Dalton, Ga., received a "Green Goods" circular which he turned over to the postmaster there. The matter was taken up here and arrangements made for the disguised inspector to meet the man who mailed the circular. The inspector was surprised to find at the appointed place Barry, the man he had himself arrested such a short time ago and who already was awaiting trial in a "Green Goods" case.

FOOLING THE POST OFFICE

Country Postmasters Found Using Stamps in Trade

Fredericton, N. B., November 6.—Post Office Inspector Culter has been here regarding country postmasters, many of whom are general store proprietors, using stamps for payment at city stores. These rural postmasters make a percentage on the sales of stamps, and the business has been carried on to the extent of thousands of dollars. To this amount receipts of Fredericton post office has been affected. The practice is also illegal, as only licensed vendors are allowed to sell stamps. It is also a handicap to the local post office, as the Department at Ottawa say extra clerks, although needed, cannot be supplied, owing to the small receipts.

WITHDRAWAL OF TROOPS

Great Britain is Considering Question in China

London, November 6.—The British Government has replied to the proposal of Germany for the withdrawal of the foreign troops from the provinces of Chi Li, China, to the effect that Great Britain is willing to consider with the other powers concerning the best means of withdraving the troops gradually. Negotiations to this end, are now going on. An official of the Foreign Office said yesterday that the question of the withdrawal of the troops was more serious to Great Britain than to the other powers, as Great Britain had greater interests in Chi Li. British companies being largely interested in mines and railways there.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 270 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $200,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $150,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 80 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $80,000.00 to $90,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividend and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every STOCKHOLDER.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.00 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 50 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1904 produced $12,171.50 per hour, every hour, day and night, Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $30,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since writing here some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth as good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock as they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

WHY SO WEARY ?

Always Restless and Weak Isn't Natural—But It's Dangerous

You have to work hard. This uses up lots of nerve force and tears down the body faster than it can build up.

The result is a half-dead feeling you can't shake off. Somehow you must get more vitality. The water in your blood must be turned into nutriment and building material.

This is just what happens in using Ferrozone, which renews the blood and nerves, and makes each organ do the work that nature expects of it.

Ferrozone quickly increases your weight, brings appetite and healthy color, instills a reserve of vigor into the system that defies weariness, exhaustion, debility, or sickness of any kind.

Ferrozone quickly increases your weight, brings appetite and healthy color, instills a reserve of vigor into the system that defies weariness, exhaustion, debility, or sickness of any kind.

The enormous strengthening power of Ferrozone is proved in the case of Mrs. Edward Hill, of Oak Lake, Ont., who says:

"Two years ago I had a nervous breakdown. At night I tossed restlessly in bed, unable to get any rest from sleep. In the morning I suffered from overpowering weakness. My appetite was poor. I grew pale, thin and despondent. A slight backing cough also added to my burden.

"My doctor said to try Ferrozone, and it did me good in a few days. I increased in strength, the nervous sensations disappeared, and with my appetite came back my color and good spirits. I have gained over ten pounds in weight, and as my age is 55, I consider Ferrozone is a marvel." (Signed) Mrs. Edward Hill.

REMEMBER THIS: Ferrozone is a true tonic—not an alcoholic stimulant. Fifty chocolate-coated tablets in a box for fifty cents, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

THE BRITISH NAVY DOUBLED

An interesting and corroborative comment on Prince Louis of Battenberg's defence of the present British naval policy in his speech at St. John on Thanksgiving is furnished by an article in a recent issue of the Fortnightly Review by Mr. Archibald S. Hurd, who is well known as a writer on naval affairs. His enheartening conclusion is that "The Fighting weight and efficiency of the British navy have been more than doubled in the present year.

The method by which this doubling efficiency has been accomplished is described in the one word "concentration." Old ships that have outlived their fighting usefulness, have been sent to the scrap heap; the Pacific, North American and South Atlantic squadrons, composed of ships of inferior fighting value, fighting with inferior guns, have been disestablished, and the ships composing them redistributed with the other ships in the navy upon a better basis; and the men assigned permanently to certain ships and trained to know them. One result was that the summer manoeuvres this year were carried out so smoothly that the public scarcely realised there were any manoeuvres at all. Another result is that the fleet for the defence of the "home seas" has been increased from twenty-eight battleships and ten armored cruisers in September 1904, to forty-three battleships and twenty armored cruisers in September, 1905.

Mr. Hurd thinks that the strategic frontier for England's fleet to defend has changed in the last few years. Formerly it was the Mediterranean, and France was the enemy. Now, following the entente cordiale with France, it is the North Sea and Germany is being watched. Quoting Nelson's dictum that a fleet should cruise frequently where it is likely to fight, Mr. Hurd expresses the belief that the British fleet will be seen much in the North Sea, but he deprecates the view that this constitutes a threat to Germany. Britain is justified in patrolling the North Sea, he holds, just as France, Germany and Russia are justified in patrolling their land frontiers.

Since the destruction of the Russian fleet, Mr. Hurd is of the opinion that the British fleet dominates the world to an extent unparalleled in the last hundred years. The one curious omission of an able article is that he omits all mention of Admiral Fisher, who was then the organizing genius of the reorganization, and in whose labors Canadians feel an especial pride as a great Canadian contribution to Imperial defence.

If there is anything in the line of trouble that the Czar has not had he is likely to experience it in time.

SARNIA' POLICE GO ON STRIKE

Force Resigns Owing to Jake Wismer's Reinstatement

Sarnia, Nov. 4.—The entire police force has resigned. The men waited upon Mayor David Barr and handed that gentleman the "official" document, which reads as follows:

"To David Barr, Mayor of Sarnia:

"We, the undersigned, John Gunn, Alex. Crombie and John C. McNeil, policemen of the town of Sarnia, hereby place our resignations in your hands as Mayor, to take effect at the expiration of the usual month's notice, which we are required to give.

"We find it impossible to work with Policeman Wismer, who has been reappointed to the force, with either credit to ourselves or satisfaction to the public. (Signed) John Gunn, A. Crombie, John C. McNeil."

The trouble is the direct result of the Town Council's action at the last meeting, when by a vote of 5 to 2, the council voted to have Policeman Jack Wismer put back on the police force.

A couple of months ago Wismer was suspended by Mayor Barr for drunkenness, and for shooting his revolver at Policeman Gunn in the police room at the station. Since then the police committee of the council held a meeting, and decided to have Wismer from the force, and Chief of Police Sarvis was instructed to notify him to tender his resignation. Wismer refused to comply, and when the town council met Monday evening the subject was introduced by Ald. Preston, moving that Wismer be reinstated, and given another chance to reform. The motion was carried and the resignation of the other members of the force followed.

KING'S GREETINGS TO U. S. PRESIDENT

Prince Louis Royally Entertained at Washington.

Washington, Nov. 4.—A reception by President Roosevelt at the White House, a dinner at the British Embassy, and a reception and dance at the British Embassy are the features of to-day's program for Prince Louis of Battenburg. The Prince will arrive here in a special train over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad shortly before noon. He will be driven to the British Embassy for luncheon, and in the afternoon will be received formally by President Roosevelt. Officials of the United States Government and Ambassador Durand are planning to do the Prince great honor on the occasion of his three days' visit here. While plans have been taken to give no official color to Prince Louis' visit to Washington, an impressive feature will be the presenting by the Prince of a friendly letter of greeting from King Edward to President Roosevelt.

Toronto Hunter Shot and Killed

Toronto, Nov. 4.—Despatches from Dunchurch to-day state that Wm. A. Clark, manager of the Toronto Cream & Butter Co., was accidentally shot and killed by Wm. Panton yesterday morning at ten o'clock. Mr. Clark wore a light coat, and Panton mistook him for a deer. The bullet entered near the heart. They were both of the Milton Hunt Club, located on the Pickerel River fifteen miles away. Companions are taking the body home to-day.

Mr. Clark lived at 99 Maitland St. He leaves a wife and several small children.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quarts.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7 50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15.0x1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

Placer mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

WILLIAM J. SMITH, ESQ., President and Manager J. B. Smith & Son, Lumber Merchants', Toronto.

The remarkable advance made by the Dominion of Canada during the past five years and the great development of its natural resources have been so significant as to attract the attention of capitalists and investors at the financial centers of two continents.

It may very properly be said that no new country at a similar stage in its history, not excepting the United States, has given such promise of commercial greatness and material prosperity. Canadian securities—Government, Railway, Financial and Land—occupy a very high position in the stock markets of the world.

A notable feature of the past five years has been the growth of the trade between the Mother Country and Canada. The very certain prospect of increasing trade relations—with the probability of their being further encouraged by a closer union—the much more active interest in the Dominion now being taken by the capitalists of Great Britain and the tide of improved immigration now making for Canadian shores, suggest that the time is most suitable for the establishment of a bank which shall not merely realize success in its operations, from the actual needs of the Dominion, but shall emphasize the rapidly growing commercial relations within the Empire.

The UNITED EMPIRE BANK of CANADA will operate throughout Canada with an office in London, England, and later, if the occasion demands, at other large centres in Great Britain.

While being a thoroughly Canadian institution under Canadian management, its directorate will include three or more prominent financiers of London, England.

Although the Provisional Executive have already received offers of large subscriptions for stock from English investors, it is intended to limit the holdings of any one person or corporation and to secure the greater portion of its share capital in Canada, in as widely distributed holdings as possible.

While there have been since 1900 three new banks established in active operation in Canada, all of which are meeting with success, there are fewer banks in existence in 1905 than there were in 1900.

Canada is fortunate in possessing a banking system which, in legislative safeguarding, is unsurpassed by that of any country in the world. The regulations of the Canadian "Bank Act" provide for the fullest security to the investor in bank shares.

The conditions precedent to the establishment of a new institution are now of so stringent a character as to prevent any but a responsible organization from undertaking the banking business.

The currency system by its elasticity avoids "money trouble."

No business possesses the same safety.

No business has been more uniformly profitable.

Its capital is not laid out in plant and stock like a new industrial or mercantile business.

During the past ten years the actual returns of Canadian banks to their stockholders, after setting aside a portion of their annual profits as a reserve fund, have ranged from six to twelve per cent.

During the past three years the earnings have averaged fifteen per cent. per annum per institution.

The prices of bank shares in Canada are most significant, ranging from 135 to 300 per hundred of par value, with the exception of a very few institutions whose stocks are not actively dealt in or quoted on the regular exchanges, but every one of which is paying regular dividends on its capital and accumulating a reserve fund.

Owing to the rapidly increasing needs of the country nearly every bank in Canada, whose existence precedes 1900, has been called upon to largely increase its capital in the past ten years. The new stock has been offered in almost every case at a high premium and under the regulations of the Bank Act must necessarily be first offered to the existing shareholders. The opportunity of investing in bank shares can be obtained by the general public only by purchase in the open market at the high current prices.

The Directors of the United Empire Bank of Canada will be men selected with a view to their business capacity and financial ability. While they will be men of means and thoroughly representative, special regard will be paid to their fitness and capability for the position.

The General Manager will be Mr. George P. Reid, for ten years General Manager of The Standard Bank of Canada. The success of this institution under his management has been widely recognized, Mr. Reid possesses an enviable reputation as being a sound and conservative banker.

Shares will be $100 par value. As preliminary expenses will be kept within very small limits, it is not considered necessary to issue the stock at a premium.

The terms of subscription will be $10 per share on allotment, $10 per share on the first day of the month immediately following the date of allotment, $10 per share every month thereafter on the first day of the month until the whole amount is paid.

Interest at the rate of FOUR per cent. per annum up to the date fixed for payment will be allowed on payments made in advance.

The provisional Directors reserve the right to reject or allot any subscription in whole or in part.

Applications for Stock should be made to MR. GEORGE P. REID, Secretary

Lawlor Building, Corner King and Yonge Streets, Toronto.

Cheques, drafts, money orders and other remittances on account of subscriptions should be made payable to SAMUEL BAKER, ESQ., M.P., and MR. GEORGE P. REID,

VARICOCELE & STRICTURE

No other disease is so prevalent among men as Varicocele. As it interferes with the nutrition of the sexual organs it produces weakness, loss of semen through the urine, decay of the organs, pains in the joins, aching in the back, nervousness, despondency, bashfulness, palpitation of the heart, constipation, and a combination of these results in complete LOSS OF MANHOOD. Thousands of young and middle-aged men are troubled with STRICTURE. If you have reason to believe you are afflicted with it, don't neglect it. It will ruin you. Don't let doctors experiment on you by cutting, stretching or tearing it. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT dissolves the stricture tissue, hence it disappears and can never return. We cure Varicocele and Stricture without operation or loss of time. The treatment may be taken at home privately. Send for our Free Illustrated Book on VARICOCELE and STRICTURE. WE GUARANTEE TO CURE OR NO PAY.

Kidneys & Bladder

All sexual complaints affect these organs, hence the kidneys are a great source of disease. Have you aching or weakness over the small of the back, tendency to urinate frequently, deposit in urine, coldness of hands or feet, a drowsy feeling in the morning. Don't neglect your kidneys. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT is guaranteed to cure any disease of these organs or no pay.

No Names Used Without Written Consent.

O. W. Rowe, of Jackson, Mich., says: I had varicocele in the secondary stage and two operations of a poorly executed. I was operated on twice, undergoing great suffering, but only got temporary relief. I was finally advised to try the NEW METHOD TREATMENT of Drs. K. & K. The enlarged veins disappeared in six weeks, the stricture tissue was removed in eight weeks and my sexual energy and vitality returned so I was a man in every respect. I recommend these doctors with my whole heart.

CURES GUARANTEED. NO CURE NO PAY.

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

Author of "Beaton's Bargain," "His Perfect Trust," "By Another Name," "Her Heart's Idol," "Half a Truth," "His Rival."

"And Lady Dorrington?" asked Nora. "How is she? And did you—did you tell her?" coloring crimson.

"I did," said Marsden, smiling. "Murder will out!"

"Was she very angry?" persisted Nora, eagerly. "I am sure she is displeased."

"She wishes you had more money, that's all, I think."

"There is a good deal more, I imagine, Clifford; she is angry with me? I knew what her plans were, and it makes me uncomfortable to feel that I have been the cause of their defeat. I am really fond of Lady Dorrington."

"And you naturally object to be converted into an instrument of torture?" said Marsden lightly. "She is mistaken, however; she would never have succeeded in marrying me to her mind, even if I had not met a certain witch of a kinswoman. Why, Nora, you must not look dismayed. When you have been Isabel's sister-in-law for a year or two, she will think me the luckiest fellow going, especially when she sees the reformation you will work in me."

"I share Nora's feeling that yours only near relative's objection to yours marriage is peculiarly unfortunate; perhaps it might be as well to postpone—"

"Great heavens! No!" interrupted Marsden, energetically. "You know I have agreed to put off the wedding till after the 15th of February, and that is an age—nearly two months off."

"Barely enough time to make due preparations," said Mrs. L'Estrange, laughing.

"Preparations! Why, very few are necessary. Nora and I are old friends and don't want to astonish each other with finery," urged Marsden.

Nora laughed, and tried to rouse herself.

"I am very fond of pretty things, I assure you," she said.

"And is there any reason that the power of choice or purchase should leave you when Nora L'Estrange becomes Nora Marsden?"

"And Mrs. Ruthven is really getting better?" asked Mrs. L'Estrange.

"Really and truly this time—recovering sufficiently to dabble in business, which her soul loves. I was amazed this morning by a summons from my lawyer, which delayed my appearance here, and on reaching the office, I found it was an offer from Mrs. Ruthven to rent Elvesleigh for five years at a higher rent than any yet proposed. Fortunately, I had not absolutely come to terms with the man who has been nibbling at it for some time, so I determined to give the fair widow the preference."

"It is curious her wishing to live at Elvesleigh, when she wanted to fly from it after that dreadful robbery," said Mrs. L'Estrange. "I suppose those jewels will never be found, the robber."

"Not after this lapse of time, I fancy," returned Marsden lightly. "I should think the thief is tolerably safe."

"Winton passed through town while you were away," said Mrs. L'Estrange. "He seems disposed to return to India before his holiday is half over. He has gone down to see his uncle, Giles Winton, before he goes."

"Ah! Mark Winton is a capital fellow, in spite of his solemnity. You did not make yourself agreeable enough to him, Mrs. L'Estrange, or he would not be in such a hurry to run away," and Marsden threw an expressive glance at Nora as he spoke, which sent an icy, painful dart through her heart. What had not this fatal impression of Marsden's coast her? "That is the uncle who brought him up with his own son, is it not?" continued Marsden.

"Yes," said Mrs. L'Estrange. "The son is dead," she sighed.

"I did not know that. Then Winton is the old man's heir?"

"I believe so." Mrs. L'Estrange rose and closed her writing-book. "You will, I am sure, excuse me, as I promised—"

"Pray do not apologize," cried Marsden gleefully.

"Is it not very fine to-day?" exclaimed Nora. "Do you know, Clifford, I should enjoy a drive so much."

"Would you? Well, I will go and find a conveyance, and a tolerable pair of horses; you shall drive to your heart's content."

"And you, Helen?"

"My dear, you know I am engaged," and with a smile and nod of the head Mrs. L'Estrange left them together.

"And you are glad to see me back, Nora, as glad as the last time I returned?" said Marsden, taking her hand and kissing it repeatedly.

"Yes! Oh, yes only I feel nervous, uneasy, not a bit, like myself. I am distressed about Lady Dorrington. I scarcely can say what I fear. But I feel I want air and motion."

"Very well, we shall have a nice drive. I shall be back in about three quarters of an hour. You will be ready?"

"Quite ready!" Still Marsden lingered.

"Look at me Nora," he said softly. "You have not given me a kiss to-day."

"Do not ask me," exclaimed Nora. "I can not, not now." She half turned from him, but held out her hand.

He kissed it again, murmuring, "As you will, darling!" and went away not displeased; he fancied she must be waking from the unconsciousness that chilled him.

These were terrible days and nights to Nora L'Estrange. Her heart knew no rest from gnawing regret for the miserable misunderstanding which had wrecked her life, and the torturing doubt as to what was best and right to do. She was the source of sorrow to the man she loved most truly, she was deceiving the lover whom she sincerely liked, and, Winton out of the way, might have loved. Then, although she had been mistaken as regard Mark Winton's feelings, it did not follow that her ideas respecting Mrs. L'Estrange were also wrong; perhaps in his disappointment Winton might turn to her. If so, Nora felt she ought to be pleased, but she was not by any means pleased with the idea, on the contrary, it was very bitter. Then what was the right course to take with Marsden? Poor fellow, he was so fond of her. How could she break with him, and break his heart? And suppose she had the hardihood to tell Marsden the truth, how would it sound to say, "Despairing of Mark Winton, I promised to be your wife; now I find he is willing to take me, I wish to break my word to you." Such was the simple fact. No! She never, never could make such an avowal. It was best she should bear the penalty of her own weakness in having too readily yielded to persuasion, to her overeager desire to throw off the pain and shame of caring for a man who preferred another. Besides, what would Winton himself think if, after telling him she was to marry Marsden, she declared herself free? Probably that she was a heartless jilt.

No, there was but one way for her to walk in; she must lock up her secret and her sufferings in her own heart; leave Winton to conquer his fancy for herself, which a strong sensible man, as he was, no doubt soon would; forget him quickly, if possible; marry Marsden, and love him, and do everything for him in the spirit of affection till love came. Oh! would it come? And if it did,

CALCASIEU PARISH

LOUISIANA, U. S. A.

The richest oil region in the world. Quality the finest ever discovered in the South or West. An opportunity for the investing public to get in on the ground floor of a proposition that will bear the strictest investigation.

Calcasieu parish and more especially lands north-west of Lake Charles, Louisiana, U.S.A., are considered by Oil Experts and Geologists to be the seat of primary deposits of the GREATEST OIL BEARING LANDS IN THE WORLD.

Derricks are springing up as if by magic and drills working day and night are sinking deeper and deeper into the oil beds buried in MOTHER EARTH.

There are wells in this parish that are producing from 2,000 to 50,000 barrels a day, and the price is now 45 cents a barrel.

Capital Stock and Holdings

The Union Oil and Sulphur Company, of Sioux Falls, S. D., U. S. A., was organized on the 18th of June, 1903, with a capital stock of $750,000.00, represented by an equal nnumber of shares of the par value each of $1.00; it owns in fee simple 240 acres, and has 467 acres leased, making it one of the strongest companies in the United States.

Location of Property

It lies along side the Kansas City Southern Railroad, is only one mile from the Houstan River, and is within three miles of the GREAT SULPHUR MINE.

To Further Develop the Field

This company are now offering to the public some of their stock at the low price of Forty (40) cents a share, this in ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE STOCK, this company is absolutely out of DEBT, and all subscriptions go towards the development of the property.

The stock of this company has been placed in the hands of the firm of

Farmers' Institute at Warsaw

The meetings of the Farmers' Institute of East Peterboro will be held in Warsaw on December 11th, and at Keene on December 12th and 13th. Judging classes will take place in the rink at Keene. Mr. G. G. Publow, of Kingston, will address the dairymen and others in the evening.

Splendid Peterboro Cattle

On Saturday the local market easily beat a herd of cattle pass over it that would be hard to beat, outside a collection taken from an agricultural fair. Mr. George Webber, the well known local cattle buyer and shipper had twenty head of cattle, which he had purchased, weighed and every head of them turned the scale at or over 1250 pounds each. Mr. Jacobs, the local horse buyer, also had four horses weighed that attracted some attention. The four horses each turned the scales at 1700 pounds or over.

Mr. Geo. Graham's Dogs Poisoned

Mr. George Graham, the popular hotelman, and patron of sporting events of all kinds, has become a victim to the contemptible and cowardly dog poisoner. Mr. Graham now mourns the loss of two valuable thoroughbred, six months' old, bull terriers, which were poisoned during the afternoon or evening of Friday last. Mr. Graham feels the loss keenly not only on account of the great value of these handsome dogs, but from the fact that they were presented him by a friend. If the man, who from spite or meanness, deliberately destroys valuable animals can be brought to justice a heavy penalty would be in order, and be appreciated by every right thinking man in this city. If a man must get even with Peterboro's canines, let him experiment on some of the untaxed yellow curs running at large, but leave good dogs alone.

Newfoundland and Her Troubles

London, November 6.—The Glasgow Herald thinks it unfortunate that Newfoundland should have two political troubles, those of Labrador with Canada, and the fishing trouble with the United States, when she is seeking to raise money, the success of which would be beneficial to her development. The easiest way out of the trouble would be Confederation, but it is not popular in the island, which is enamored of her own time-honored independence.

POLICE COURT NEWS

At Saturday's police court, an old man hailing from Blackstock, charged with having imbibed too freely of the juice that biteth like an adder when too freely used, was allowed to go back to his farm. The oldman came to the city with a car of peas, and having effected a good sale, promptly proceeded to reduce the visible supply of Peterboro's tangle leg. Where the old gentleman made his mistake was thirsty. When the hilarious stage of his jag was succeeded by that which demands sleep, the old gentleman wandered into Mayor Beal's office in the city building, being a convenient spot in greatly required on the aforesaid couch, and proceeded to make the windows rattle with his snores.

Saturday evening another old man 77 years of age, who claims to be a blacksmith, appealed to the police for shelter and was accommodated.

On Saturday P. C. Stewart served a summons on Lester McGillvery, who is wanted in Lindsay on a charge of assault and beating, one Elizabeth Jane Nicholls. The officer, who only had a description of the man's height and appearance, located him at the C.G.E. Co.

TOWNSHIP BOOKS GONE

Mr. Bennett's Personal Loss Shared by the Township of Monaghan

Very general sympathy was extended Saturday to Mr. G. W. Bennett, on his return from Matchemenn Lake, Saturday morning, over his heavy loss by fire a few nights ago.

Mr. Bennett assured a Times representative that our statement as to his only having $800 insurance on his house and contents, was only too true.

Asked about the township's books, he said everything was destroyed except the tax rolls. These he had placed in the collector's hands before he went away.

The minutes of the council, which are very valuable for reference, along with all the papers and documents were burned and how else he explained. The assessment rolls were in duplicate and a copy can be had at the county court house.

A copy of the birth, marriage and death register up to July last, can be secured in Toronto. All births, marriages and deaths since then will have to be registered again.

Mr. Bennett will rebuild at once.

WAS HE ROBBED?

Peterboro Citizen Claims to Have Been Robbed of Valise Still on Hand

On Friday night, a local citizen arriving in town from Toronto, was in quite a state of excitement and something else. The gentleman was seen to get off a railway car, on his arrival at the Peterboro platform, and his actions showed every signs of his being in a highly excited or other condition. He claimed that as a well frequented thoroughfare of the city, he had been the victim of a "held up." Not only was he according to the story told Saturday morning to the local police, held up, but that he was robbed of his valise an umbrella and a considerable sum of money.

There is a strange likiness between this gentleman and a man, carrying a full jag, who got off the train at a local railway station, Friday night, and left his valise standing on the platform. The baggageman, seeing the party's condition, took charge of the valise, and late Saturday night, still had it on hand unclaimed.

One of those puzzles, either the somnambo or the shadow, on his way home, on arrival from Toronto, became weary, and took a quiet sleep in a field near the corner of Dalhousie and Aylmer streets, only awakening at an early hour Saturday night. There is a strange coincidence in the circumstances surrounding truth and fiction in this case.

FARMERS' MEET

Executive Committee of West Peterboro Farmers' Institute Transact Business

A meeting the Executive Committee of the West Peterboro Farmers' Institute, was held in the city council chambers Saturday afternoon, for the purpose of selecting subjects, and the places of meeting for the lectures this year.

Those present were Messrs. T. M. Hunter, President; Telford, Dench, Garbutt, Stewart, Chambers, Mann, Graham, Oulton and Secretary Collins.

The object of the meeting was to select subjects for the winter meetings, which resulted as follows;

December 7th — Afternoon meeting at Lakefield, Mr. Nash will talk on Chemistry of the Soil," and Mr. Shearer on "Rotation of Crops and Selection of Seed Grains." Evening meeting.—Mr. Nash will talk on "Nature Around the Farm;" Miss Rose, of Guelph, O.A.C., on "How Much are we Worth;" Mr. Shearer on "Making a Success on the Farm."

December 8th — Judging class in Petertboro in the afternoon. Evening meeting at North Monaghan.—Mr. Nash on "How Plants Grow;" Miss Rose on "One eye on this field and the other on the town;" Mr. Shearer on "A Dairy Herd."

December 9th—Afternoon meeting in the Peterboro city council chambers. Mr. Nash will speak on "Our Insect Pests;" Miss Rose on "One Eye on the Field, the Other on the Town;" Mr. Shearer on "The Bacon Hog and its Feeding."

Moved by Messrs. Garbutt and Chambers, that the president, vice-president, secretary and Mr. H. Leary be a committee to select a place for the judging class and arrange for the necessary animals.

UNHAPPY EXECUTORS

Th. Jas. Deloe, Executor of J. W. Deloe Estate May Lose His Property

Referring to a Peterboro will case, the Toronto News says:

Mr. James Deloe, of Peterboro, is of opinion that he has received rather rough usage while acting as one of the executors of the estate of J. W. Deloe. Salome Hannah, the wife of deceased, and who resides in the States, brought action against the executors to recover dower out of some land situated near Peterboro. Mr. Justice Teetzel, at the trial granted her dower, and ordered the executors to personally pay the costs, amounting to $279. Now the only property which the executors have in Ontario consists of their interests as devisees in lands under will. John England, the window's solicitor, is proceeding to sell these interests. The executor has obtained an injunction restraining the sale temporarily.

DEATH OF MR. JAS. NEITHERCUT

A Former Resident of Otonabee Passes Away at Dundalk, Ont.

Mrs. R. M. Matchett, East City, received the sad intelligence by telegram Friday, of the death of her brother, Mr. Jas. Neithercut, at Dundalk, after about a week's illness.

The late Mr. Neithercut was in his 78th year. He was born in County Cavan, Ireland, in 1827, and came to this country with his parents in 1841, settling in Otonabee.

In 1851 he, with his brothers, Montgomery and Joseph, removed to Dundalk, where they have since resided.

Mr. Neithercut, who was unmarried, has resided for some years with his brother, Montgomery.

He leaves to mourn his loss four brothers, Montgomery and Joseph, of Dundalk, Henry, of Fraserville, and Alex. M., of Gaylord, Mich., and two sisters, Mrs. John Bell, Selwyn, and Mrs. R. M. Matchett, East City.

THE VITAL CENTER

The stomach is your vital center. No man is stronger than his stomach.

The average man measures his physical vitality by his heart, his kidneys, or his lungs. Yet it is the stomach that should be first considered when you cast up the account of health.

Every organ of the body is sustained and nourished by food which is converted into nutrition in the stomach and conveyed to every part of the system in the form of blood. For this reason, when the stomach is strengthened with Mi-o-na, and is able to convert the food into nourishment, all other organs soon become well. This explains many cures of heart, liver or kidney diseases in the cases where Mi-o-na is used. It is the most wonderful health restorer known.

Just one little tablet out of a ten cent box of Mi-o-na for a few days, and you will soon see a great improvement in your health.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialists which will be sent free. The E. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

The Toilers in Our Factories.

No workmen in the world can do so much or use the same intelligence that our own American workmen and women are capable of. That is why America is now leading the world in manufactures; all due to the brain and muscle of our Yankee men and women.

Unfortunately where there is smoke, dirt and dust and little sunlight there also can be found the germs of disease. Nature's great disinfectant is sunlight. It is in the factory, the workshop, the office, that men and women suffer from diseases which are in the dust and the body air. Such diseases germs enter into the blood in two ways, either through the lungs or stomach.

After years of experience in an active practice, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., discovered a remedy that is a blood-maker and tissue-builder, at the same time alleviates a cough. He called it Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, as alluring attention to its marvelous curative properties in the cure and assimilation of the food—so that the blood gets its elements from the products of digestion, the liver at the same time is started into activity and there is perfect elimination of waste matter. The germs of grip, malaria, catarrh or consumption find a fertile field if the body is not kept in perfect order and the blood pure.

Because the stomach is diseased there is a diminution of the red corpuscles of the blood. This is why one is sleepless, languid, nervous and irritable. Scarcely stomachs groan aloud at the irritating cod liver oils, but they will get all the food elements the tissues require by using the "Golden Medical Discovery."

The "Discovery" is absolutely a non-alcoholic and non-narcotic medicine. There is nothing else "just as good." Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the best laxative for old and young people. They cure constipation and biliousness.

ORANGEMEN AT WORSHIP

Diamond Lodge L. O. L. No. 80 With Other Members of the Order go to Church

Yesterday afternoon, marshalled by the lodge master, some 130 to 140 sturdy Orangemen, and Prentence Boys marched from their place of rendezvous, Orange Hall, Simcoe St., to Park street Baptist church.

The 57th Band was to have led the way, but circumstances arose, by which this part of the program was omitted.

The turnout was under the auspices of Diamond Lodge, No. 80. This splendid body of Canada's strongest orders, as usual turned out in good numbers, marched well, and attracted much attention for the crowds on George street. Diamond Lodge members were augumented by Jubilee Lodge No 7, Prentice Boys and many members of sister lodges. The procession started at 2.30, and were well on time.

Rev. A. H. Bruce, who had arranged for the special service did the honors for his church. Yesterday was a red-letter day in Orange circles being the 300th anniversary of Guy Fawkes Plot, when only the timely warning to Lord Montcagle, prevented England's House of Parliament being blown to pieces, by barrels of gunpowder stored in the vaults beneath.

Rev. Mr. Bruce furnished a most eloquent and appropriate sermon.

In George street church yesterday evening Rev. Dr. Crothers preached a special sermon on the Gunpowder Plot.

To-night Diamond L.O.L. will hold a concert in their hall, Simcoe St. Old Sandstone Lodge L.O.L. will also give an entertainment at Downeys Corners. Addresses will be delivered by well known speakers at both places.

Celebration of Nov. 5th By Diamond Lodge

A Crowded Hall, and an Enthusiastic Audience ---Good Programme, and Speeches by Prominent Clergymen.

There was much enthusiasm last night in Orange circles celebrating the frustration of the Gunpowder Plot. The Foresters' Hall was crowded, the program entertaining, and the speeches instructive and fearless in asserting Protestant principles. Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, M. A., Chaplain of L.O.L. No. 80, was in the chair.

The first number on the program was a vocal quartette by the Misses Bartley, entitled "The Maple Leaf," after which the chairman called on the audience to rise and sing the chorus.

With Mr. Langfeldt on the platform were; Rev. W. L. Armitage of Picton, Rev. A. H. Brace and, later on Rev. Dr. Crothers, who had failed to burn Guy Fawkes at Downer's Corners, and who had come to join the chairman in celebrating the national event with L.O.L. No. 80.

Rev. Mr. Langfeldt then gave the chairman's address. He said that it was a pleasure to be present and to honor the great event that 300 years ago prevented the dastardly attempt to blow up the British House of Parliament. At any rate this celebration was not held as an insult to Roman Catholics; he thought that loyal Roman Catholics might well join in celebrating this event, were it not for the fact that the Roman Church had had too much to do with the origin of the Gunpowder Plot. He referred to the claims of the Roman Church as being the only true Church, a statement which did not reflect very creditably upon that Church, and, reading from the Book of Father Crowley "The Parochial School a Curse to the Church and a Menace to the Nation," he asserted that that Church tolerated badness, immorality, and grattins on the parts of a host of their priests who were for their badness promoted by the Church. This Book, he said, is a fearful indictment against the Roman Church, issued by one of its priests, who is still in communion with that Church. Mr. Langfeldt said that insults from certain Roman Catholic priests should be considered compliments, because they were the result of one's faithfulness and loyalty to principles, such insults do not hurt.

Rev. Mr. Armitage, of Picton, was also present to bring greetings from the True Blues, the Orangemen and Sons of England of Picton, who had attended his church on Sunday. He made some pointed references to the misrepresentations made by Roman Catholic priests, who, he said, declared that Garnet, the Jesuit, was innocent. This priest knew of the plot, yet did nothing to reveal it. The sacramental seal, it is claimed, closed the priest's lips. But there is no law, on God that would forbid a man to reveal a crime, and such a law was nothing but a law of a church that did not hesitate to proclaim that "ends justify the means." The priest was rightly and justly executed. The Roman Church wanted to establish Roman supremacy, by overturning the Government, for this end the gunpowder plot was designed. It was known to the Roman priesthood. The Jesuit did nothing to reveal the plot. The law of God compels us to prevent crime.

Mr. Armitage said that liberty was not as much prized as it should be. Infidel France, the stagnation of Spain, and the ignorance and superstition of South America, were the fruits of the Roman Catholic Church. If the plot had been successful Great Britain would suffer to-day what these countries are suffering; the heel of oppression of that political machine the Roman Catholic Church.

There was no desire to rejoice over the failings of Romanists, but one might well remember the singing of the Te Deum by the Roman Catholic Church as a thanksgiving for the slaughter of 30,000 Protestants on St. Bartholomew's night by Roman Catholics. Our rejoicing is because of having won for us liberty of conscience, and liberty of worship of God.

Rev. A. H. Brace exhorted the audience to watch the "minority cry." He urged the people to look to Quebec and to study how the Protestant minority is treated by the Roman Catholic majority. He wished the enrolment on 30,000 members accomplished in this lodge.

Dr. Crothers came with words of congratulation. He had come specially to be with the chairman, whom he had always found a thorough gentleman, with whom he wished to be associated. He had no desire to stir up strife, but he was ready to maintain Protestant principles. He exhorted the audience to keep their eyes on the aries of bigotry of the Roman Catholic Church as being crushed by the 59 per cent "Hold up your heads and be true to your trust." Dr. Crothers said. He spoke at some length on the Separate school question, and remarked how Mr. Wilfrid Laurier of 1896, was completely swallowed up by Sir Wilfrid Laurier of 1905.

The following program was given:
Vocal Quartette—"The Maple Leaf." The Misses Bartley.
Chairman's Address—Rev. E. A. Langfeldt.
Instrumental Duet—Mrs. Patten and Master Ross Lang.
Vocal solo—Mr. C. E. Coleman.
Instrumental solo—Miss Anderson.
Address—Rev. W. L. Armitage, Picton.
Vocal Solo—Miss Elliott.
Recitation—Miss Annie Christie.
Vocal Solo—Mr. H. Urquhart.
Reading—Miss Thomas.
Address—Rev. A. H. Brace.
Cornet Solo—Mr. W. Hughes.
Address—Rev. Dr. Crothers.
Vocal Solo—Mr. R. Freund.
Recitation—Miss Annie Christie.
Instrumental Solo—Mrs. Patten.
Mr. W. H. Barrie, Accompanist.

A hearty vote of thanks was proposed for the speakers by Col. Miller, which was given by a standing vote. Rev. Mr. Langfeldt exhorted the people to be more than ever determined to uphold the motto; "No Surrender to Popery."

The National Anthem was then sung, and refreshments served.

A PAPER WAISTCOAT

Englishman Thinks Men Will Wear Paper Altogether

Paris, November 7.—An Englishman in Paris named Crabbe has invented a paper waistcoat, which he designed as a protection against chills.

The garment weighs only an ounce and a half, and can be folded so as to go into an ordinary envelope. It is made in one piece with holes for the head and arms.

The inventor, who is an adept in the manipulation of paper, has made pyjamas, socks, bed-boots, hearthrugs, and various articles of general utility. He looks forward to the time when all men will be dressed entirely in paper garments.

Record-Breaking Month

St. Catharines, November 7.—Nearly four million bushels of wheat, corn and oats passed down the canal during the month of October, in addition to large quantities of barley and flax seed. It was a record-breaking month for thecarrying of grain, and the general trade of the canal has been double that of the same month last year. Over two million bushels of the grain carried was Canadian wheat. The present month will show a large addition to the amount of grain taken through.

A NEW THEORY FOR INSANITY

Dr. Suckling, of London, Announces Discovery of Cure for Mental Diseases

THE CAUSE OF MALADY

Medical Man Says Many Cases are Sent to Asylums Without Examination

London, November 7.—Dr. Suckling, of Birmingham, claims to have made the remarkable discovery that a large proportion of the cases of insanity which are not caused by nervous diseases are due to a movable kidney and may be cured in a few months by a comparatively simple operation.

Dr. Suckling is a graduate of London University, consulting physician to Queen's and other hospitals in Birmingham and the author of several works on diseases of the nervous system.

Details of his discovery are fully described in a book just published by Dr. Suckling, and should all he claims for it be correct, it is possible that lunacy may be reduced by nearly one-half.

WOMEN MOST AFFECTED.

"I have found a movable kidney present," Dr. Suckling says, 'in forty per cent. of the women and six or seven per cent. of the men suffering from nervous diseases.

Many women have committed suicide or been sent to asylums who might have been saved had the condition of their kidneys been discovered.

"In my own practice I can recall four such cases of suicide. One patient while waiting for admission into a hospital drowned herself. Three others, whose parents would not allow them to be operated upon, also drowned themselves. Another case had been committed to an asylum because I was not suported in my advice.

CAUSES ARE NUMEROUS.

As to the causes of this complaint, there are many. Among those mentioned by Dr. Suckling are tight corsets, high heeled shoes, falls from bicycles or horses, pulling down window sashes or lifting heavy weights. The modern craze for athletics is also blamed, including horse exercise, cycling, golf, hockey, and tennis, either of which may cause the malady or increase its intensity, the doctor says.

The symptoms are even more numerous that the causes, ranging from the actual mania caused by mental depression and loss of memory to severe headaches, appendicitis, insomnia, and even absolute loss of the power of walking. In men, irritability of temper is a very frequent symptom, and no doubt, says Dr. Suckling, it spoils many of their careers.

NO EXAMINATIONS MADE.

"I have no doubt," says Dr. Suckling, "from the repeated experience in my practice that many women are sent to asylums who only require the operation being made. From my large and varied experience with insanity cases, and realizing the astounding effects upon the mental condition of a dropped kidney, I say that no man or woman should be sent to an asylum without careful and repeated examination of their kidneys."

The Finance Committee recommended payment of a number of accounts, which was adopted.

Mr. Crane read the following report:

Your Property Committee recommend that the salaries of the various janitors, dating from 1st November, be as follows;

Institute	$460	Increase $25
Central School	425	" 25
South Central	360	" 75
North Ward	375	" 30
West Ward	325	" 45
East Ward	350	" 30
George street	175	" 25

This is an increase of $270 per year.

The report also recommended that tenders be asked for removal of the old ruined gymnasium.

AMATEUR FUR BUYER

A Local Dispenser of Drugs Buys Mink Skins Cheap?

A George street druggist has recently been exchanging the cheering odors of sulphuretted hydrogen and iodoform ofr the pine scented ozone of the deer stalkers' paradise, Eagle and Gold Lake, and has entered temporarily a new line of business. He is buying furs, and to these furs hangs a tale.

A few days ago, just previous to the arrival of our hero in camp at Eagle Lake, Messrs. W. S. and M. T., members of the Gold Lake hunting party, shot three porcupines, one of which was a very large one. The pelts from these animals were removed and quills faced inwards, were nailed to the lodge to dry.

The merchant who figures as leading man in this little drama, in due course calling at the camp and seeing the skins hanging up, enquired what kind of animals they were from. The quills, as noted, were out of sight, being next the wall.

One of the party at once said the large skin was that of a racoon, whilst the smaller ones were mink. "What do you want for them?" enquired the compounder of pills. "Oh," said M. T., "I'll let you have the coon for 25 cents and the two mink for $1, seeing they are for you." "All right," said our hero, digging up the $1.25 and handing it over. The entire party, fully entering into the joke, advised the purchaser to leave the skins on the wall to dry. This was agreed to, and now, W. S. and M. T., who, in the meantime have returned to the city, are waiting to see that mink ruff or muff, made out of porcupine.

It is said that the conspirators are now at logger heads over division of the $1.25.

FIGHT FOR LOCAL OPTION

One Hundred Municipalities Expected to Vote on It in January

Activity is everywhere manifested in the local option movement throughout the Province. Between fifty and sixty campaigns are now on, and every day new ones are heard from, all looking to a contest on the 1st of January. The situation is in every respect encouraging to the temperance reformers, says The Globe, for from present appearances nearly a hundred municipalities in Ontario will endeavor to wipe out the bar-room. The latest municipalities to report local option campaigns in progress are Meaford, Chesterville, Grimsby Town and North Grimsby, South Grimsby also, East Wawanosh, Orillia Township, Madoc, Thornbury, McNab Township (Renfrew County), Markdale, where they have formed a temperance hotel company to work if need be on similar lines to that at Owen Sound. Lakefield village is also, it is said, preparing to submit the local option bylaw.

Germany's Overture to France

Paris, November 7.—The "Aurore" is very emphatic on the subject of Germany's overtures to France. "Let us say, once for all, to Germany that if it has her hope to found in Europe a German hegemony on the ruins of the British Empire, neither Germany's blandishments nor her fury will secure from France any response other than that which she has already made. For the rest, should a war be imposed upon us we will submit to it; but we will be a party to no enterprise of aggression against any one whomsoever."

Drives Out by Labor

Chicago, November 7.—Led by the Allis Chalmers Company, which is said to be planning to shut down its Chicago works and do all its business at its new $1,000,000 plant at West Allis, Wis., a number of other prominent industrial concerns are preparing to furnish Chicago business of labor difficulties here. They employ 7,000 hands.

$2,000 More Voted The Board of Works

For Street Improvements--$12,000 Fixed Assessment for Central Milling Co. Passes Council--Routine Business.

The City fathers met in regular bi-monthly session last night, when Works.

There were present; Mayor Henry Best, Aldermen Johnston, Crowe, Hall, Tovey, McIntyre, Bolton, Scott, and Adams.

$2,000 MORE FOR STREETS.

[illegible] the estimates of the Board of Works be authorized to have [illegible] street regulated, and a crossing constructed from that street to Rink street—Carried.

Ald. Johnston [illegible] remarked that he was a little sorry to see the money which should be devoted [illegible] street improvements swamped the eyes of the Board of Works, which they necessarily came under his supervision. He then pressed the following proposals which he urged that immediate attention be given to;

Division street, sidewalk in bad condition.

Crossing opposit Tredgold's on Water street, [illegible] gutters, supposed one was there at one time.

Ald. Crowe said he must have a little work for the Board of Works to attend to. There is no crossing at Murray street, opposite Bain's lane, nor one either on Water street, across to the park.

Ald. Adams replied that he would second a resolution to have this work done if a resolution were couched with it to add $2,000 to the appropriation of $12,000 for streets, which is now expended.

The Mayor—"You can't do that. The Board of Work's appropriation for this year was $12,000, last year's by $2,000, and $2,000 was also expended last year for stone, which was not used till this year. This brings 1905's appropriation practically up to $15,000.

Ald. Hall remarked that the work asked for is necessary, and as funds for street purposes are low, he thought $2,000 should be added to the Board of Work's appropriation, and all the crossings repaired with good gravel.

Ald. Adams—"We have been curtailing of late, and if all this work is to be done funds must be raised for the purposes."

Ald. Johnston thought the work should be done, even if the appropriation is exhausted. "Look at the amount of money expended last winter in removing snow from George street, unprecedented in previous years."

Ald. Hall—"I second a resolution to add $2,000 to the appropriation."

The Mayor—"Where's the money to come from?"

Ald. Hall—"The Council will vote it."

The Mayor—"On what authority? The rates were struck on the appropriations made, and if this is allowed we shall show an overdraft. I told you at the time the rates were being struck too low."

Ald. Hall—"And I remarked the same myself."

Ald. Adams here pointed out that last year scarcely any money was spent on the streets; it all went in sidewalks. Consequently this year an exceptionally large amount of work had to be done on the streets, far more so than in previous years.

His Worship thought the city had got less value for its money this year than heretofore.

Ald. Adams moved, seconded by Ald Hall, that $2,000 be added to appropriations of the Board of Works, to complete works in progress at the present time, and do work ordered by the Council the remainder of the year—Carried.

The above work will now be attended to.

Ald. Begley moved, seconded by Ald. Johnston, that a temporary bridge be constructed across the creek on Victoria avenue, to render that locality passable—Carried.

CARRYING AWAY CITY STONE.

The engineer gave notice that a large quantity of stone from water works excavations on Water and Argyle streets, is being drawn away by private individuals, and asked that the police be instructed to put a stop to such proceedings. This will be done.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

Ald. Bagley gave notice that at next meeting he would introduce a by-law to prohibit the running at large of dogs within the limits of the city, and to provide for the destruction of such dogs. In this connection, he said, he had received numerous complaints from people whose flower beds and lawns had been destroyed by dogs. He also intended to introduce a by-law to prohibit the running at large of dogs in these cases, whether tagged or not, destroy lawns, and also the goods of store keepers. Hence the need of such a by-law.

BY-LAWS.

A by-law to appoint a city member of the Board of Audit for auditing criminal justice accounts, passed its several readings. S. R. Armstrong received the appointment, at a salary of $4 per day during such audit.

A by-law to provide for advancing money for the expenses and disbursements of the police in such cases where they have to act in criminal cases outside the city, passed its several readings. The treasurer is authorized to pay out of the general funds of the city, such expenses and disbursements, which will eventually be refunded by the Government, in a roundabout way through the county. The chairman of the Finance Committee and His Worship will sign all cheques issued for above purpose.

A by-law respecting the construction of a sewer on Water street between Smith's to Hilliard streets, on the recommendation of the Board of Health on sanitary grounds, had its first reading, but was then left in abeyance not enough aldermen being present to adopt it.

A by-law to authorize the construction on a sewer on Barnardo avenue, to authorize an agreement with John E. Hayes for the construction therefore, and to authorize temporary advances for the cost thereof, passed its several readings.

SNOW PLOWING.

Ald. Adams moved, seconded by Ald. Scott,—THAT the snow plowing districts be rearranged by taking away a portion of the center, west area and northern districts, and creating a new district—five on this side of the river, and one in No. 1. And that tenders be advertised for snow plowing and the Board of Works authorized to purchase three new snow plows of modern design—Carried.

In this connection, it appears according to the engineer, that the following distances are covered in each district; Northern district, 10 1-2 miles; western, 13 1-2 miles; central, 10 miles; southern, 7.29. While the southern district is larger in area than either of the others, less distance is covered in snow plowing, by reason of so many streets having a sidewalk on one side only, whereas the other districts are more compact, and walks both sides.

THEY THINK IT A SHAME.

A number of ratepayers applied once more for a gravolithic sidewalk on the west side of Jackson crescent. If they cannot get a gravolithic walk at present they would accept one of planks, as the inhabitants think it is ridiculous and a shame to have to live in a house for over a year say pay taxes therefor, and have to walk in mud and water every time it rains to get to Albert street. On motion of Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald Adams, the engineer will be instructed to lay some sort of a temporary plank walk in this locality until such time as a permanent one can be constructed.

WHOLE COUNCIL REPORT.

Ald. Johnston presented the following.

Gentlemen—Your Committee of the Whole Council beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That the assessment of the Central Milling Company be fixed at $12,000 for a period of ten years from January 1st, 1906 on terms similar to those in the by-law fixing the assessment of the Peterboro Cereal Co., so far as they will apply, provided this is confirmed by the Legislature.

2. That at the next session of the Ontario Legislature, authority to applied for to change by-law No. 1077, authorizing the issue of $60,000, for the new Collegiate Institute, so as to permit the debentures to be issued payable at the end of thirty years, and to extend the time in which they may be issued three years.

This report was adopted as read.

Communications and reports of committees are left over till to-morrow.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should not you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 170 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stathp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $200,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $20,000.00 to $30,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividend and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.50 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 50 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1901 produced $10,811.80 per hour, every hour, day and night, Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $30,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth as good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock as they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

GREAT BRITAIN PLEASES RUSSIA

And Everything in Dispute Will be Settled

AN AGREEMENT IN SIGHT

Which Will Make the Two Nations Close Friends

St. Petersburg, November 7.—It is understood on authority on which every dependence may be placed that the negotiations which have been in progress between Russia and Great Britain with a view to the final settlement of outstanding questions between the two countries have made such favorable progress that agreement is already in sight.

Roughly speaking, the basis of the agreement is an undertaking on the part of Great Britain to meet on certain conditions the desire of Russia to establish a port in the Persian Gulf.

The bulk of the trade routes through Persia are almost entirely in Russian hands, and further developments are being entered upon with the tacit acquiescence of the British Government. One of these developments includes the establishment of a large number of additional branches of the Russo-Persian Bank, whose agents are now located in every trade centre in the Shah's dominions.

The acquiescence of Great Britain in these developments and in their request on the Persian seaboard has been secured by an undertaking on the part of Russia not to proceed with her forward movement on the Turkestan border.

In this movement is bound up the crux of the Central Asian problem, and the removal of the tension will mark the beginning of a new and a happier era in Asiatic politics.

The understanding which is on the eve of completion is in its broad general outlines in harmony with the contents suggested by the late Lord Salisbury some ten years ago. Expressed in a sentence, it means peace in Asia.

In Persia it means commercial freedom for Russia and political freedom for Great Britain. Neither will interfere with the other, nor will Afghanistan be any longer a bone of contention between the two powers.

Pale and Anxious

Your Countenance Indicates the Body's Awful Struggle for Health.

Impossible to work or think clearly when there is no reserve of vigor, no nourishment in the blood, no supply of nerve energy.

The life of the half-sick man is pitiful, in fact, almost criminal, when bounding strength is so quickly derived from Ferrozone.

This nutritive tonic is guaranteed to strengthen all men, women and children. Weak organs get new force, vital energy is generated. Muscle and fat are added, healthy color is restored and the blood fairly tingles with newfound life.

Read the evidence of Jno. Carter, of 316 King St. East, Toronto, who says: "After a severe attack of Grippe my health was almost shattered. I suffered constantly from nervousness and dyspepsia. At night I would waken with terrible palpitation and heart pains. Work became a great effort. At ten in the morning I was so tired and weak I could hardly work another minute.

"Then came a bad attack of rheumatism which laid me up in bed. I could scarcely lift the weight of a pound and to stoop or bend was impossible. My druggist recommended Ferrozone, and he knew what he was talking about, for it retuilt my strength, gave me abundant appetite, better blood, and new nerve energy. The rheumatism has disappeared. I weigh more, feel refreshed and vigorous, and am able to work ten hours a day. Ferrozone did it all."

You will be steadied, toned and strengthened for all time to come with Ferrozone. Get the genuine in 50c. boxes or six for $2,50. at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., or Kingston, Ont.

NORTH YORK CONTEST

The Times is well known in this part of the Province as an Independent journal. Our policy is invariably to consider the public good in preference to petty party antagonism. In considering the coming election in North York, where the Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, recently appointed Postmaster-General, will, as is customary with all Ministers of the Crown when appointed to office, test public opinion, both personally and from a political standpoint.

We consider that Mr. Aylesworth has shown by his vast forensic ability, his striking personality and his deep knowledge of Canada's affairs, that his recent appointment to the management of Canada's most important Department of Government, is one of the ablest strokes of policy yet in evidence by the present Laurier Government.

That Mr. Aylesworth is fully qualified, from every point of vantage, to intelligently, economically, and with honor to himself and his country, govern the vast and complicated business affairs of the Post Office Department, is too generally acknowledged to require comment or assertion. Mr. Aylesworth is comparatively a new light in the political arena, and for this very reason, being no hide-bound politician, is untrammelled in the administration of this far reaching Department, by previous years of unkept promises and pledges to political heelers and friends.

His life-long reputation for honor, honesty and integrity of purpose, place him above all suspicion of possible manipulation for or by party friends. There is no doubt but what, in event of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's withdrawal from the Premiership, Mr. Aylesworth's name would be one of the first mentioned as his successor.

In view of these circumstances, we consider, speaking from an Independent point of view, that it seems a pity that the Conservative party in North York, sinking party antagonism for once, did not, at the last moment, allow the election of Mr. Aylesworth to go unopposed. It would have been a graceful compliment to one of Canada's foremost men and talented lawyers, and a fitting mark of approval of the Government's policy, in inviting to the Cabinet a man, whose administration of his Department, cannot but redound to the credit of the country, and ensure economy, general satisfaction, and honest management of our Postal affairs.

A Canadian in Russia writes that he is anxious to get away. Evidently he does not like fireworks.

WILD MAN WITH HORNS

HAS BEEN TRAVELLING THE COUNTRY AS CUROSITY

Remarkable Fraud Discovered in Springfield Ill.

Springfield, Ill., November 4.—A pretended wild man with horns and huge tusks was discovered here yesterday. He is George Brown, a big negro, hailing from Georgia, who applied to Dr. Walter Ryan to have the silver plate which held the horns in place removed from his head.

For more than a year and six months the negro had been carring the plate about on his head, concealed beneath the scalp, but recently it began to slip out of place, causing considerable discomfort. He said that the plate had been inserted under his scalp for the purpose of fastening two horns upon it. At the same time two of his front teeth had been sawed off and supplied with gold crowns, upon which could be screwed down two formidable looking tusks, and when this had been accomplished he was an ugly looking, ugly looking, ugly looking real "wild man."

He declared that in this fashion he had travelled all over the State of Georgia, attracting wondering multitudes of people, who came to see upon the real live "wild man," captured in the recesses of Africa.

As the negro said that the plate had been hurting him for some time, Dr. Ryan took the man to the St. John's Hospital, where he removed it.

BANKER HAS BROKEN DOWN

Case of T. H. Brown will be Tried Next Thursday

Hamilton, Nov. 4. — T. Hillhouse Brown, the bank manager, who was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of embezzling $5,000 from the Bank of Hamilton, was not brought up in the police court this morning. The Crown attorney asked that the prisoner be remanded till next Thursday.

Thomas H. Crerar represented the prisoner, and asked that the case be enlarged till a week from Saturday. The magistrate continued the case till next Thursday, and intimated the preliminary examination or trial must be gone on with then.

It is understood that J. W. Nesbitt and George Lynch Staunton have been engaged by the prisoner's friends. While the charge is for appropriating $5,000. it is said the shortage exceeds this, and the inspectors are not through yet. The peculations extend over a period of three years.

The arrest has caused the greatest sensation of years in this city. Mr. Brown being so well-known and popular. He has broken down completely at the jail.

Toronto Level Crossings

Toronto, November 6. — Mayor Urquhart and Ald. Geary, who have returned to the city after a conference with General Manager Hays, of the Grand Trunk Railway, in Ottawa, report that the railway is willing to depress its tracks as far as Sunnyside and raise them from there to the Humber if the city will contribute a share of the cost. The intention is to abolish the menaces of so many level crossings in the south and west part of the city. To make the change would involve an outlay of from $600,000 to $750,000. Bridges would be required for the streets crossing, and tracks 40in South Parkdale, and while the Grand Trunk have not committed themselves regarding Mr. Hays' suggestion, it has been stated at the City Hall that the city might pay the cost of building these.

REV. T. C. STREET MACKLEM, D. D., Provost and Vice-Chancellor of Trinity College, Toronto.

M. McLAUGHLIN, ESQ., Member of the late firm M. McLaughlin & Co., Millers, Toronto.

WILLIAM J. SMITH, ESQ., President and Manager J. B. Smith & Son, Lumber Merchants', Toronto.

The remarkable advance made by the Dominion of Canada during the past five years and the great development of its natural resources have been so significant as to attract the attention of capitalists and investors at the financial centers of two continents.

It may very properly be said that no new country at a similar stage in its history, not excepting the United States, has given such promise of commercial greatness and material prosperity. Canadian securities—Government, Railway, Financial and Land—occupy a very high position in the stock markets of the world.

A notable feature of the past five years has been the growth of the trade between the Mother Country and Canada. The very certain prospect of increasing trade relations—with the probability of their being further encouraged by a closer union—the much more active interest in the Dominion now being taken by the capitalists of Great Britain and the tide of improved immigration now making for Canadian shores, suggest that the time is most suitable for the establishment of a bank which shall not merely realize success in its operations, from the actual needs of the Dominion, but shall emphasize the rapidly growing commercial relations within the Empire.

The UNITED EMPIRE BANK of CANADA will operate throughout Canada with an office in London, England, and later, if the occasion demands, at other large centres in Great Britain.

While being a thoroughly Canadian institution under Canadian management, its directorate will include three or more prominent financiers of London, England.

Although the Provisional Executive have already received offers of large subscriptions for stock from English investors, it is intended to limit the holdings of any one person or corporation and to secure the greater portion of its share capital in Canada, in as widely distributed holdings as possible.

While there have been since 1900 three new banks established in active operation in Canada, all of which are meeting with success, there are fewer banks in existence in 1905 than there were in 1890.

Canada is fortunate in possessing a banking system which, in legislative safeguarding, is unsurpassed by that of any country in the world. The regulations of the Canadian "Bank Act" provide for the fullest security to the investor in bank shares.

The conditions precedent to the establishment of a new institution are now of so stringent a character as to prevent any but a responsible organization from undertaking the banking business.

The currency system by its elasticity avoids "money trouble."
No business possesses the same safety.
No business has been more uniformly profitable.
A bank begins to earn profits for its shareholders from the outset.

Its capital is not laid out in plant and stock like a new industrial or mercantile business.

During the past ten years the actual returns of Canadian banks to their stockholders, after setting aside a portion of their annual profits as a reserve fund, have ranged from six to twelve per cent.

During the past three years the earnings have averaged fifteen per cent. per annum per institution.

The prices of bank shares in Canada are most significant, ranging from 125 to 300 per hundred of par value, with the exception of a very few institutions whose stocks are not actively dealt in or quoted on the regular exchanges, but every one of which is paying regular dividends on its capital and accumulating a reserve fund.

Owing to the rapidly increasing needs of the country nearly every bank in Canada, whose existence precedes 1900, has been called upon to largely increase its capital in the past ten years. The new stock has been offered in almost every case at a high premium and under the regulations of the Bank Act must necessarily be first offered to the existing shareholders. The opportunity of investing in bank shares can be obtained by the general public only by purchase in the open market at the high current prices.

The Directors of the United Empire Bank of Canada will be men selected with a view to their business capacity and financial ability. While they will be men of means and thoroughly representative, special regard will be paid to their fitness and capability for the position.

The General Manager will be Mr. George P. Reid, for ten years General Manager of The Standard Bank of Canada. The success of this institution under his management has been widely recognized, Mr. Reid possesses an enviable reputation as being a sound and conservative banker.

Shares will be $100 par value. As preliminary expenses will be kept within very small limits, it is not considered necessary to issue the stock at a premium.

The terms of subscription will be $10 per share on allotment, $10 per share on the first day of the month immediately following the date of allotment, $10 per share every month thereafter on the first day of the month until the whole amount is paid.

Interest at the rate of FOUR per cent. per annum up to the date fixed for payment will be allowed on payments made in advance.

The provisional Directors reserve the right to reject or allot any subscription in whole or in part.

Applications for Stock should be made to MR. GEORGE P. REID, Secretary

Lawlor Building, Corner King and Yonge Streets, Toronto.

STOCK BOOKS NOW OPEN AT ABOVE ADDRESS

Cheques, drafts, money orders and other remittances on account of subscriptions should be made payable to SAMUEL BAKER, ESQ., M.P., and MR. GEORGE P. REID.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quarts.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7 50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 0x1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

STRICTURE AND KIDNEY DISEASE CURED.

G. E. WRIGHT.

"I had stricture for eleven years. It finally brought on Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I had an uncomfortable [illegible] pain in the groin and feeling as though something was in the rectum. My back was weak and I could scarcely stoop over. Urine was full of sediment. Had a desire to urinate frequently. Family doctors, so-called specialists, patent medicines, electric belts, all failed. I was discouraged. I had spent hundreds of dollars in vain. Finally I consulted Drs. Kennedy & Kergan as the last resort. I had heard a great deal about them and concluded from the fact that they had been established over 25 years that they understood their business. I am delighted with the results. In one week I felt better and in a few weeks was entirely cured. Have gained sixteen pounds in weight."

A TANGLED WEB

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

would she not be a traitor to her true, first love? Destiny was too potent for her; she could only conquer, by bearing her fate!

Meantime Lady Dorrington made no sign. The society papers announced that Mrs. Ruthven has sufficiently recovered to remove to Torquay, where she had taken Lord G——'s beautiful villa, and added a hint that "as we asserted some time since, there was no truth in the report that she was about to contract an alliance with a certain squire of high degree in the Midlands whose brilliant success as a sportsman, yachtsman, and man of the world, could not insure that other and greater success which, no doubt, was dearest to him of all."

Mrs. L'Estrange and Nora both watched with uneasiness for some token of amity from Lady Dorrington, and the seeming estrangement of his only sister greatly increased Nora's reluctance to become Marsden's wife.

Nothing, however, can gut the drag on time's chariot wheels; the days went by swiftly yet heavily. Nora was surprised how few opportunities she found for being alone with Mrs. L'Estrange. She longed to ascertain what tie had existed between Mark Winton and her step-mother. Yet she never had a chance for leading up to that subject. It was one respecting which she could not ask a simple, straightforward question, and she never was long enough alone with Mrs. L'Estrange to approach the topic with masked batteries.

Marsden was constantly with them, always charming, obliging, sympathetic; and it needed all Nora's tact and ingenuity to avoid the frequent tete-a-tete interviews he was perpetually contriving, to escape his caresses, from which she shrunk with a sort of dread she was herself ashamed of.

Sometimes she could not conceal this shrinking from him, and it filled him with an angry despair, that called forth her deepest remorse, and obliged her to atone so amply, that Marsden was once more joyous and hopeful.

"If you knew all you have cost me!" he would sometimes cry, "all I have risked for you, you would not cut me to the soul, with this accursed cold prudery! Not that I would hesitate to pay any price that would make you mine; but I sometimes doubt you have any heart to give."

Then Nora would tremble, and assure him how dear his happiness was to her, and take his hand in hers, and stroke it with gentle kindness, and Marsden would become reasonable once more.

For Bea, this was a heavenly interval of treats and toys, the circus and the panorama. Indeed, as at the harvest of the sugar-cane, all came in for a share of sunshine and good things, and at times Nora wondered at her own insensibility and ingratitude.

One evening, shortly before Christmas, Marsden had looked in later than usual, after dining with some friends at his club. He stood on the hearth-rug, retailing the political and other gossip he had heard, and questioning Mrs. L'Estrange and Nora respecting their shopping.

"Mrs. Ruthven is coming to town next week," he said. "I had a talk with Shirley to-day. He had been down to see her; she has not deigned to communicate with me, but I hear through my solicitor she has sold that villa she was so wild to get a month or six weeks ago, and made fifteen hundred pounds by the transaction."

"Is it possible!" exclaimed Nora.

"Some people seem to have the power of turning all they touch to gold," said Mrs. L'Estrange.

"Fortunate people," returned Marsden. "Talking of gold, I see Winton's old uncle died rather suddenly on the thirteenth, so, I suppose he'll have plenty to do settling his affairs, instead of rushing back to punish the unworthy in his district."

"Was old Mr. Winton rich?" asked Mrs. L'Estrange, carelessly.

"I am not sure. I think I have heard that he made money or saved money of late years. He lived at a little shooting box he had on the edge of a Yorkshire moor. I don't think he ever held up his head since 'Black Mark' went to the bad."

"Do not say that Mr. Marsden!" exclaimed Mrs. L'Estrange, earnestly. "Father and son misunderstood each other; but the son was more sinned against than sinning." Her delicate face flushed as she spoke.

"You are more charitable than most people, Mrs. L'Estrange, to one who, if not sorely belied, did not care for any one save himself; at any rate, it is likely Red Mark, as we used to call him, will step into his shoes."

"Old Mr. Winton had a daughter, I think?"

"Yes, who married against his will. I don't know what became of her. Perhaps she may come in for some of the father's money. But I must bid you good-bye, as well as good-night. I am going down to Eversleigh to-morrow to see after some matters. I don't fancy, after all, Mrs. Ruthven will take the place, she has made so many difficulties and stipulations."

"How long will you be away?" asked Nora, who had grown very silent of late.

"Well, quite three or four days. You will write to me, will you not, my sweetest sweetheart?"

"Yes, certainly."

"And will you take a parcel for me to Brookdale?" asked Mrs. L'Estrange. "I'll go and fetch it."

"With pleasure," said Marsden.

"Now, dearest," he cried, as soon as they were alone, "one farewell kiss. I have an odd sort of fancy that this may be the last you'll ever give me. It is extremely absurd this superstition, and must mean I am going to die, for if I live I shall undoubtedly have many a sweet kiss in the days that are coming."

[illegible] of [illegible]

Clifford," said Nora, more touched by his words than he was aware, and she leaned forward to press her lips gently to his cheek. "I trust you may have many, many happy years before you."

"Will you make me happy?"

"I will do my best for you, dear Clifford. I will, indeed."

"God bless you darling!" kissing her hair, her brow, her cheek quickly, passionately, and letting her go as Mrs. L'Estrange re-entered the room.

"It is not very large, and if you will send it over to the cook at Brookdale, I shall be much obliged," she said, handing the packet to him.

After a few more words Marsden bid them adieu and departed. Mrs. L'Estrange and her step-daughter drew nearer the fire, and sat for some minutes in silence.

"I did not think Mr. Marsden as bright as usual," said the former at length.

"No. He was a little more serious than usual," returned Nora.

"But he is always pleasant and kind. I really think, dear Nora, you are wonderfully fortunate. Yours is a case where true love has run smooth."

"The ides of March have come, not gone."

"That is quite an uncanny speech, Nora." There was another pause.

Then Nora, gathering up her resolution, said quietly:

"Did Clifford Marsden know Mr. Winton and his cousin when they were all boys?"

"Yes. They used to be in Oldbridge now and then, and he was at my father's rectory once."

Peterboro Baker's Combine

We notice that The Times' defence of the poor of this city, in demanding that the exorbitant price of bread here be lowered, brings an explanation from one of the Peterboro bakers on the argument in defence of the local bakers' combine prices is amusing. He admits that flour is cheaper, now in Peterboro, but that the old prices were too high. How ingenuous! Flour in Lindsay and other towns is the same price as in Peterboro, but the standard weight loaf is sold always. Do the local bakers pay higher wages than elsewhere? Our correspondent forgot to mention this little detail.

Mrs. Chas. Hammill's Death

The many friends of Mrs. Charles Hammill of Winnipeg, but formerly of this city, will regret to hear of her death. The deceased was a daughter of the late Patrick Dreaney, of Peterboro, and was thirty-seven years of age. She had lived in Winnipeg for some years. The late Mrs. Hammill was a sister of Mrs. George Baker and Mrs. J. H. Yelland, Peterboro. Her brother and two sons survive. The funeral will take place in Winnipeg.

MRS. BLACKWELL'S DEATH

Old and Respected Resident of Douro Passes Away

One of the best known, and universally respected residents of the county, in the person of Mrs. James Blackwell of Douro, died on Sunday at the family residence near Auburn.

The deceased was a daughter of the late Robert Reid, Esq., Of a large family, only one sister, Mrs. Robertson, of Lakefield, is left. Three brothers of the family, all deceased, in past years, were Mrs. Strickland, of Lakefield, Mrs. T. McNab, Mrs. Ivan O'Beirne, Mr. John Reid, surveyor, and Mr. James Reid, of Peterboro.

The deceased was 87 years of age and for the last three years had been in failing health, thus leaves to mourn her a husband and four sons. The sons are Messrs. William, Robert, James and Edward Blackwell.

The funeral will take place this afternoon at two o'clock, p.m., from the family residence, Douro.

CLERGYMEN MEET

Peterboro Ministerial Ass'n. Met Yesterday in Y. M. C. A.

A very interesting meeting was held yesterday morning by the local Ministerial Association. Those present were: Rev. J. C. Davidson, Rev. Dr. Torrance, Rev. F. J. Scott, Rev. W. M. MacKay, Rev. Dr. Crothers, Rev. J. G. Lewis, and Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, resident ministers, and Rev. E. W. Pickford, of Norwood, and Rev. D. A. Thompson, of Hastings, visitors. A proposal for a representative general meeting of the association of Ontario, as suggested by the St. Catharines' Association, was fully considered, and will likely be adopted.

A vote of thanks, moved by Rev. Dr. Crothers, seconded by Rev. Dr. Torrance, was tendered the authorities of the Y.M.C.A. for the use of this parlor for meetings of the Association through the year.

Rev. Dr. Torrance read a paper on the "Conditions of Proper Participation in the Lord's Supper, which bore evidence of careful preparation and deep study. The communion arrived at was that only those who are in the faith and by faith united to Christ and whose life accords with his precepts, should participate. A general and most interesting discussion on matters of general interest was held.

To Release Prize Ships

Tokio, November 7.—An Imperial ordinance has been issued ordering the foreign merchantmen captured by Japanese warships since October 5 to be released. The captures include the American steamship Centennial, which was seized October 12, on her way to Vladivostok.

A RESTAURANT ROW

Mr. P. W. Miller Applies Instead of Making Boots

Yesterday afternoon about five o'clock, a resident of the east side, who both in personal stature, and that of the jag he carried, far exceeded the average.

After wandering westward across the bridge spanning our beautiful Otonabee river, the six footer, had evidently entered several doors, the insides of which ever see scenes of revelry or the goods that make it. After having loaded up, the east sider entered a restaurant on east side of Water street, and facing on the market square.

Having gotten himself outside a "square" meal for 15 cents, the gentleman of size and hilarity refused to give up the necessary nickels. The restaurant keeper sent to the police station. All the force however were out on duty.

Application for assistance was then made to Mr. F. W. Miller, the shoemaker. With prompt willingness, for many there on whom he has called, Mr. Miller went, saw, heard and flung the man out.

The east sider then followed Mr. Miller into his shop and became abusive in the unloading of choice awl, Mr. Miller placed one of his shoes where it would do the most good, and here ends the story. The east sider will probably be so tired to-day, after his exertions, it will hurt him even to take a seat.

The Price of Bread

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—The bakers of this city have been subjected to some rather severe criticism lately regarding the price of bread, and I have been asked to make this explanation on behalf of the bakers. It has been said that as flour has dropped in price that, therefore, bread should be cheaper. Now, under ordinary conditions, this would be quite proper and reasonable, providing the drop in flour was sufficient to warrant it. The fact of the matter is, that the price of bread has been too low in Peterboro according to the price of flour. During last winter and the first part of this summer flour reached an almost unprecedented high price, and the bakers of this city sold bread at 5 cents at which there was absolutely no profit for themselves. The bakers would have been perfectly justified at that time in raising prices to 5 1-2 or 6 cents per 11-2 lb. loaf as they did in many other towns and cities, but they did not do so here. Had they done so, they could now lower the price down to 5 cents again, and everybody would be satisfied. I believe the statement can safely be made that bread is supplied to consumers in Peterboro of better quality and on an average cheaper than in any other city or town in Ontario. Thanking you on behalf of the bakers for space to make this explanation, I am sir, yours truly.

Two Men Drowned at Belleville

Four men, on Sunday night, namely Frank Ondendonk, William Urquhart of Albury, Prince Edward Co., and James and John Garbutt, of Thurlow, were in a row boat near Nigger Island, about seven miles from Belleville. Whilst crossing the bay, in some way the boat upset. By the timely aid of people who heard their cries, all four were rescued alive, but Ondendonk and Urquhart died from the shock and exposure.

GOOD BUTTER

Peterboro Creamery Made Their First Butter Yesterday

About two weeks ago, The Times said that the Peterboro creamery, on Aylmer street, would open about this date.

Yesterday a representative of The Times by special invitation, attended the ceremony, which was merely a business matter, of watching the huge churn in this creamery, turn out the first creamery butter ever manufactured in this city.

About 11 a.m., after the huge overhead steam driven belts had sufficiently revolved churn, an anxious minute or two were in evidence for Mr. Downham the proprietor. Would the cream produce a paying quantity of butter, and would the butter be of high quality?

After the clamps had been removed, and the door opened, a brief glance, and a hasty taste and critical inspection of the butter, brought a wide smile to Mr. Downham's face. The Peterboro Creamery did its work satisfactorily, and the butter is as good as any made in any country in the world. Another Peterboro industry has turned out a success.

The Times representative present purchased the first pound of butter churned out and wrapped up by the Peterboro Creamery, and whilst not advertising any class of goods gratis, we think Peterboro butter will soon receive attention from the largest concerns handling high class goods of this kind.

BUSINESS ALTERATIONS

Mr. M. Pappas Will Improve and Add More Tables to His Billiard Rooms

Mr. M. Pappas, who some eight weeks ago, bought out the old established tobacco, cigar and billiard establishment, so successfully managed by Mr. James Dolan, is about to make extensive alterations and improvements in the place.

As is well known to our readers Mr. Pappas now has two establishments adjoining, immediately north of the City Hotel. One is his elegant shaving parlors and shooting gallery, with a billiard room to the rear; the other, purchased from Mr. Dolan, has a cigar store in front, with a billiard room in the rear.

Mr. Pappas is now about to remove the partition between the two billiard rooms, turning them into one large hall. This will make one of the largest and most complete places of this kind in Canada.

This enterprising merchant, who is a comparitively new arrival in this city has already built up an large a trade he has decided to add several more new tables to his establishment.

He left by C.P.R. express last night for Toronto on business. Whilst in that city, Mr. Pappas, will purchase three new billiard and pool tables for Messrs. Samuel May & Co. He will also buy whilst in Toronto a complete new set of cigar show cases, and fixtures for his two stores, soon to be thrown into one.

Such enterprise as this is characteristic of Peterboro's merchants.

MR. SNOWDEN'S LATEST

Woke the Wrong Man in a Bobcaygeon Hotel

A good story was told last night by the genial proprietor of the Snowden House. There was a bunch of knights of the grip sitting round telling yarns. One of the party had just told of how he had, on one occasion, to sleep with the stable boy, when out West.

"O, that is nothing," remarked Mr. Snowden. "I remember when I first started hotel keeping at Bobcaygeon, a peddler came in during a blizzard, to stay all night. The storm was so bad that he could not proceed farther, yet I had no room for him unless he was willing to occupy a bed with a negro stable man. The peddler balked at this for some time, but finally became so sleepy that he accepted the situation, and turned in with the black man, leaving an order to be called early. Then the boy employed about the hotel got in his funny work, and blackened the peddler's face while he slept. In the morning the boy called the peddler at the appointed time, but when the guest had looked in the mirror, he hurried back to bed, adding: 'The dang fool of a hotel keeper has awakened the wrong man.'"

Now, boys, this is a true story, and if you don't believe it you can ask Harv. Thompson, of Bobcaygeon.

A MONTREAL VISITOR

Mr. Gravel, a Prominent Citizen of the Canadian Metropolis the Guest of Mr. Turner

Mr. Lunigs Gravel, J.P., one of Montreal's leading business men, arrived in the city last night, and for a few days, whilst here, will be the guest of Mr. J. J. Turner.

This is Mr. Gravel's first visit to Peterboro, and under the guidance and knowledge of his host, he will doubtless advertise this city favorably on his return home.

Mr. Gravel accompanied Mr. Turner, and the rest of that jolly and representative party, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, on their trip to England. On board ship, during the eastward-bound passage, Mr. Gravel helped materially to keep the pot of fun a-boiling, being a member of the "shout" among the manufacturers.

At the large banquet held in the Hotel Cecil, London, attended by Lord Strathcona and many other dignitaries, Mr. Gravel sang the solo in God Save the King. We trust his visit to Peterboro, will be a pleasant one.

SAD DROWNING

Three Men Lose Their Lives in the Waters of Eagle Lake

Last Wednesday a sad fatality occurred at Eagle Lake, whereby three men lost their lives.

It seems that Arthur Wensley, aged 28 years and single, who lived at Eagle Lake; Thomas Ingleis 29 years, single, who also lived at Eagle Lake, and Chas Arabery, 35 years old, who lived at Bobcaygeon, where he leaves a widow and seven children, were drowned while crossing.

The bodies of Wensley and Ingleis have been found, but that of Arabery is still missing.

The men were going hunting and were upset out of a canoe.

Andrews Preferred Suicide to Gallows

Trapped Murderer Shot Himself and Female Companion---Leaves Statement Denying Murder.

San Francisco, Nov. 8.—Trapped in his room by the police, and fully aware that his last moment of escape had been barred, Milton Franklin Andrews, who, it is said, murdered Bessie Beaton on Cutler Mountain, near Colorado Springs, ten months ago, and who murderously assaulted and robbed Wm. Ellis, an Australian horse man at Berkeley, Cal., last night shot and killed Nadda Oliva, his female companion, and then fired a bullet into his own head, causing instant death. Andrews, for whom the police of the entire country were searching, was fully prepared for the tragedy that closed his career.

The officers who went to arrest the pair received no answer to their repeated knocking on the door. At the moment one of the officers was despatched for an axe, with which the door was broken open, Andrews fired the shot that ended the career of his companion. The bullet was fired into her right temple, and she dropped dead on the bed, falling backwards with her hands clasped.

DENIED HIS GUILT.

When the officers gained entrance to the apartments they found Andrews lying on the floor grasping a revolver in one hand and a mirror in the other.

On searching Andrew's body the coroner's deputies found $130 in gold and an English sovereign, all the money that remained of the $500 of which Ellis was robbed at the time he was lured by Andrews to a cottage in Berkeley. Considerable jewelry was also found on Andrews.

A rambling typewritten statement, written presumably by Andrews, who denied that he had anything to do with the murder of Bessie Beaton, was found in one of the women's stockings.

OFF TO THE COAST

Mr. Clemence Bell, Lately of Bank of Ontario Here, From San Francisco

Mr. Clarence Bell, son of our well known fellow-citizen, Mr. F. E. Bell, who was recently removed from his position with the Bank of Ontario in this city, to a higher place in the Montreal branch of that bank, spent Sunday with his parents and friends here.

Mr. Bell has accepted an important position with the Citizens' National Bank of San Francisco.

He has now gone to meet Mrs. Bell in Toronto, where she has been visiting with relatives, Toronto being his wife's home.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell will at once start for their adopted home in the glorious climate of California.

Receipts Still in Front

Ottawa, November 7.—Receipts from all sources in Canada still keep in front of expenditure. For the four months of the present fiscal year ending October 31, the excess of revenue over expenditure amounted to $5,957,751, and for the month of October only, the surplus was $1,541,232.

Over ordinary and capital expenditure combined, and surplus for the four months was $6,626,143. Receipts show a gain of $1,386,216. when compared with the first quarter of the previous fiscal year. The increase in expenditure for the same period was $2,957,763.

A CATHEDRAL WEDDING

Mr. John Shanahan Takes as His Bride Miss Hannah Shanahan

Yesterday morning at nine o'clock, Rev. Father Galvin, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives of the contracting parties, united in marriage Mr. John Shanahan and Miss Hannah Shanahan, both of this city.

The bride was charmingly attired in a gown of brown ladies' cloth, with white silk blouse trimmed with allover lace, and wore a brown velvet hat to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Mary Howren, was gowned in blue cashmere trimmed with allover lace, with yoke, and wore blue velvet hat to match.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the wedding party adjourned to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tremaine, George street, where a dainty and recherche wedding breakfast was served. The bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful presents and congratulatory favors, testifying to their popularity among a host of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Shanahan will take up residence on Sheridan street.

THE LATE MRS. J. W. COURTNEY

Decease of the Wife of a Former Resident of This City

[illegible] announces the following account of the decease of Mrs. J. W. Courtney, of Montreal. Mrs. Courtney was formerly a resident of Asselstine, and was [illegible] in this city and around Peterboro [illegible] Mrs. Courtney was taken ill with [illegible] symptoms with him on his [illegible] now.

The death of Mrs. J. W. Courtney in the early hours of Thursday morning, was a [illegible] shock to the people of the village. While in Napanee on Wednesday, she was seized with a stroke of [illegible]. Dr. Ward was called, and Mr. [illegible] was taken home, but the [illegible] failed and [illegible] early [illegible]. The late Mrs. Courtney was a [illegible] figure in church work here and will be much missed. For thirty-four years she was organist of the Methodist church, during which time she missed but four Sundays, one while attending the Grand Lodge I.O.G.T. in Brockville, one on account of her mother's death, one on account of her father's death, and one through sickness. In the Sunday school she was organist for twenty-eight years, being organist at the time of her death. During that period she taught the infant class, and the influence she exerted over the young in the Sunday school during that time has extended to all parts of the land wherever one from the school has gone. For years also she was a prominent worker with the I.O.G.T. and Juvenile Templars. Besides the bereaved husband, she leaves two brothers, Rev. Dr. Benson, Perth, and E. B. Benson, St. Thomas. The funeral services were held at the house on Saturday afternoon. The choir of the Methodist church furnished music, and the services were conducted by Rev. J. F. Mears, assisted by Rev. J. H. Claut, Rev. C. K. S. Radcliffe, of St. John's church, and Rev. J. Gandier, of the Presbyterian church. The pall bearers were Rev. Dr. Benson, E. B. Benson, R. E. Lyons, J. R. Courtney, Rev. M. E. Wilson and Rev. W. Service. Beautiful floral tributes were received from the Epworth League, the Methodist S.S., the choir of the Methodist church, the Infant class, Miss Gandier, Dr. Benson and E. B. Benson. The remains were placed in the vault. Mr. Courtney has the sincere sympathy of his many friends in his hour of bereavement.

THOUSANDS OF MILES OF WIRE

Have Been Strung by C.P.R. Telegraph Co.

GREAT PROGRESS IS MADE

The Great C.P.R. System Never Was in Such an Efficent and Prosperous State

Montreal, November 8.—"This is a great year for telegraphic business," observed Mr. James Kent, the manager of the C. P. R. Telegraph Company, who has just returned from a trip to the Pacific coast, in which he inspected the condition of the system along the main line and the principal branches. "A great year for business, and the telegraph system of the Canadian Pacific was never in better condition that it is today.

"We naturally do a larger business when there is a good crop than when there is a bad one. I do not know that it is so much the telegrams that the farmer sends, but they help. We—or rather our lines in the North-West—come in with the procession of interests, industries and commercial organizations that are dependent upon the progress of the new country, and upon the character of the farmer's wheat, yield for a large part of their prosperity.

"We are increasing our telegraph mileage as fast as we can to meet the wants of the rapidly developing districts in the West.

"This year we have strung about 3,000 miles of wire, half of which was copper wire, and next spring we will make whatever further advance may be required to keep pace with the ever expanding requirements of the country. Every time I visit the West some addition is necessary. Just what proportion the telegraph bears to the railway increases in the matter of return or increment it is impossible to say, but I can tell you this that no sooner are the metals on a new branch laid than we follow with the telegraph wires to get ready for the new business that we know will be created.

"Several of these branch extensions constitute the new telegraph mileage. They are running out in all directions, north, east and west.

ATHLETIC WORLD

BY OUR SPORTING EDITOR

RUGBY.

The locals had a good stiff practice last night. They are also requested to turn out for practice to-night and to-morrow night, even though the Brockville game for Saturday is off. There is Dundas to be accounted for, and it will never do to quit (the) successful record (of) the last time is called this season.

* * * *

Brockville has enough! The game for Saturday is dead. This was settled by a teleramation between the powers that be in Peterboro and Brockville pig skin sinners, held yesterday afternoon. Peterboro thus goes into the O.R.F.U. finals with Dundas. It is not yet known whether there will be a game with Dundas on Saturday or not, but it is probable that there will be.

* * * *

The local also appreciate the action of Brockville very much. Had it been a little earlier in the season they would have escaped nothing more than a trip to Brockville as they consider the Island City team as straight, manly and gentlemanly an aggregation as they have had the happy misfortune to down this fall.

HOCKEY.

All players and lovers of Canada's winter game, hockey, are asked to be present at the annual meeting of the Peterboro Hockey Club, which will be held at the Oriental to-night at eight o'clock.

* * * *

The National Hockey Club, at an enthusiastic meeting held Monday night, organized for the season, when the following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Mr. J. C. Conroy.
President—Mr. Chris Graham.
Vice-President—Mr. Fred Whitcraft.
Treasurer—O. Giroux.
Captain—K. Pentland.
Manager—T. McGrath.

With Mr. Chris Graham taking an active interest in the club's affairs, and the last staff they can in [illegible] coupled with their last year's record, the Nationals should and will put up strong hockey this season.

* * * *

The local Bankers deserve great credit for being the first club in Peterboro this year, to organize a hockey team. With the officers named appended below, we predict that the Bankers will show that they can drive a puck, with as great celerity as they can refuse to discount a doubtful note.

On Monday evening they held a well attended and enthusiastic meeting in the Ontario Bank Chambers, the particulars of which unfortunately, owing to Council meeting, Board of Education and other meetings of perhaps more general business interest, were crowded out of yesterday's issue.

Everything points to the Bankers having a strong and swift bunch on the ice this year.

The following officers were elected:

Patron — E. Hardley Wilmot, D. Hawkes, Charles, John Crane, Peter Campbell, A. A. Hollingshead and J. H. Ferguson.
Hon. President—R. M. Hamilton.
President—C. Currier.
Vice-Pres.—Harry Rush.
Secretary—Gladstone Main.
Treasurer—V. R. Edwards.

It was decided to play in the City League as one is organized this season. The club's colors will be black and white.

Among the players available for the club are the following.—Carter, Carmichael, N. Hoar, Edwards, McFarlane, Sawers, Godfrey, Kelly, Burnett, Ferguson, Malhern, Walters, Main, Stark, Brownscombe, McClennan and Gilmore.

With this talent available some of the local clubs, not to mention outsiders, will have to get up and hustle or lose their scalps.

TAKES TIME

Some Years Getting There and What Happened Then

The poison in coffee does not always work its mischief swiftly—sometimes it fastens its hold upon the victim by slow degrees that are not noticeable for a while. But once it begins, the day will surely come when the coffee drinker will be "up against it" and must have relief.

A lady writes from Ont.:

"We were great coffee drinkers in our home, using it at every meal and frequently drinking it in the evening with friends, and it was not until after the lapse of years that we began to realize that it was doing us harm.

"My symptoms were not so bad, although my health suffered in many minor ways, but my husband became afflicted with a most painful stomach trouble. He could not assimilate his food properly and everything he ate gave him great distress. We were slow to suspect the truth; but we now see that it was caused by the use of coffee.

"At last he determined to quit using coffee altogether, and like a good wife I did so, too. We worried along for a month without any hot table beverage, till one day a friend happened to say to me 'I am using Postum Food Coffee now, and feel so much better of it.' I told her that we had tried it and did not care for it, and she said it must have been because it wasn't properly prepared. So I bought a package and prepared it strictly according to directions. We were astonished and delighted at the result.

"We have been using Postum Coffee for a year now, and I rejoice to be able to tell you that it has cured my husband of his dyspepsia. This is a statement that does not seem to have the significance it ought to have. If I could make you understand how intense his sufferings used to be, you would realize what a deliverance Postum wrought for him.

"My own health has also greatly improved and the credit for all must be given to Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

OUR BIG INDUSTRIAL EDITION

The Times Will Issue Ten Thousand Copies

The Times Special Industrial edition which we are now working on, will be issued early in December, and will be one of the [illegible] complete special numbers ever issued from a Peterboro newspaper office. Already we have received the support of all the leading manufacturing concerns in this city, and wish to extend our thanks to them for their liberal and loyal assistance. We are making every effort to make this edition a complete representation of the City of Peterboro.

This number will have a circulation of about 10,000 extra copies, and will circulate locally as well as reaching all parts of the Dominion.

This number will contain illustrations and articles of Peterboro's enterprises, and of the men who manage and direct them, and will be worthy in every way of the support of our commercial men.

Your hearty co-operation will assist us in this movement.

WEDDING BELLS

Miss M. L. McClean Becomes the Bride of Mr. C. J. Gainey

Yesterday morning a very pretty wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McGrath, in St. Peter's Cathedral, when Miss Mary Loretta McMann, eldest daughter of Mr. D. McMann, east side, and Mr. Clarence J. Gainey, were joined in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The wedding, whilst pretty and interesting was performed in the presence of only the immediate friends of the bride and groom. The bride was dressed in a pretty gown of cream voile over taffeta, and wore a blue picture hat. She was attended as bridesmaid by her sister, Miss Maggie McMann. The groomsman was Mr. Harry Gainey, brother of the groom.

The gift of the groom to the bride was a gold chain and locket, to the bridesmaid a ring, and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links.

Mr. and Mrs. Gainey left on the 11.45 G.T.R. train for Toronto and Niagara Falls, and on their return will reside at 469 Driscdale Terrace.

New York Excursion.

The date, December 1st. New York Excursion, via Lehigh Valley Railroad. Tickets only $9.00 from Suspension Bridge, Niagara Falls, to New York and return. Tickets good 10 days. Good on all express trains except Black Diamond Express. For further particulars call on or address Robt. S. Lewis, Canadian Passenger Agent, 10 King Street East, Toronto.

Norway's New Ruler

Christiania, Nov. 8. — The future King and Queen of Norway (Prince and Princess Charles of Denmark) are expected to arrive in Christiania, November 25 or 26. The Prince will take the oath before the Storthing immediately after his arrival.

Fiendish Crime at Springfield

E. R. Beck, a Young Man, Victim of a Diabolical Attack That Will Probably Result in His Death

St. Thomas, Nov. 8.—A crime, most fiendish in character, was committed on a young man named E. R. Beck in the vicinity of Springfield.

The young man now lies at his home in that village in a critical condition, and it is probable that the charge of murder will be laid against some person or persons unknown.

The story of the crime is told by young Beck himself. He states that while wandering about the woods in the outskirts of the village he was seized by three tramps, who threw him down, and with a sharp knife, emasculated him.

Young Beck walked to his home unaided, and apparently tried to conceal his awful condition. He failed to apprise his parents of the crime until some time afterwards, and in the meantime must have suffered almost unbearable torture. He sank rapidly, and despite the attention of the physician, his life is now despaired of.

WAS DEED DONE IN REVENGE?

The apparent resistance of Beck to have his condition known, and the fact that no tramps were seen in the neighborhood, it is asserted, gives credence to a report story in circulation regarding the occurrence and why the brutal attack was made. However, this report also lacks verification.

It is to the effect that the crime was committed in revenge.

The whole countryside is aroused over the deed, and the police of the different municipalities are on the lookout for tramps. Those, answering the description of the parties alleged to have been implicated in the deed, were arrested at Ridgeville, and will be brought to-day.

Crown Attorney McCrimmon leaves to-day for the scene of the crime, and will take whatever action is warranted to discover the offenders.

HEAVY LOSSES BY BAVARIAN

Cargo on Board is Estimated to be Worth Half a Million Dollars

DISASTERS OF THE SEASON

Present Indications are That the Bavarian Will be the Most Costly of all

Montreal, Nov. 8.—The Bavarian high up on the rocks opposite the island of Orleans, with one of the most valuable cargoes shipped out of the port, during the present season on board, coming on top of other disasters, which have taken place from time to time since the opening of navigation, is giving the marine underwriters much food for thought.

"At this time it would of course be impossible to say what the loss on the Bavarian will be, but I am of the opinion that it will be very [illegible] considered, [illegible] further in one of the marine insurance organizations to-day.

"Roughly speaking, I would say that the cargo on board the Bavarian is worth half a million dollars, while the ship herself cost perhaps a million when she was built back some seven years ago.

"As regards the cargo, there will, of course, be a great deal of salvage, but under the best of circumstances, the sum is always very small."

Incoming steamship captains express the opinion that the Bavarian has made her last voyage, that it will be next to impossible to get her off the rocks where she now lies. In coming up the river, the incoming captains have brought their vessels as near the Bavarian as possible. They state that her funnel is at least six feet above the normal, indicating that her engines have been raised that much from their bed by the rocks upon which she lays amidships. They are of the opinion that she will, in spite of all effort, break up where she lies, particularly in view of the lateness of the season, there being so little time between now and the close of navigation.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE

Mary Emlaw of Campbellford Tries to Solve the Great Mystery

As some young men, on Monday were crossing the Trent bridge at Campbellford, they were horrified to see a young girl struggling furiously in the river's cold embrace.

The girl, only 19 years of age, was Miss May Emlaw, who was making an abortive attempt to take a watery route to life's greatest mystery.

It seems that the young girl's mother had attempted to force her into a marriage, in which the little god Cupid was not leader. There had been acrimonious disputes between parent and child on this marriage question, the girl refusing to give her hand when her heart was not given. She had even been heard to threaten taking her own life in preference to a loveless marriage.

Little attention was paid to this threat, and when the argument did not cease, the girl rushed from the house, and climbing up on the abutment of the Trent river bridge, she threw herself into the water.

That she was determined to carry out her design was shown by her frantic attempts to frustrate the efforts of her rescuers.

There is little doubt that the girl was in an almost insane condition when she made the attempt upon her life.

DECLARED ILLEGAL

Court Decides Against Head of Ottawa Fire Department

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—Judge O'Meara gave his decision yesterday in the case of Forde vs. Ottawa, an action to have the payment of Fire Chief Provost's expenses to the Dulwich convention declared illegal. The city gave the chief $100, which he drew as quick order money as an injunction could issue. Judge O'Meara declares that the payment was illegal, the money not being for civic business. It now remains to be seen whether Mr. Forde will follow up and sue the aldermen for the money. Four men voted for it, and besides the $100 there will be another $100 costs.

LADY FLORENCE DIXIE PASSED AWAY

Death Closes Career of Remarkable English Woman

London, Nov. 8.—Lady Florence Dixie, the well-known writer, traveller and champion of woman's rights, who acted as war correspondent for a London paper during the Boer war, died [illegible] at her home, Cae Stuart, Annan, Dumfriesshire, Scotland.

Lady Florence Dixie was born in London on May 25, 1857. She was the youngest daughter of the seventh Marquis of Queensberry. She [illegible] poems in her childhood under the pseudonym of "Darina," and her writings and poems of her later days are well known. Horses and dogs were her best friends. She was a fine rider and advocated the cross-saddle for women. Though an excellent shot, she decried shooting as an amusement, writing many time against it.

Lady Florence Dixie was a keen champion of woman's rights. She [illegible] to the Primrose League, though advocating Home Rule all round. Owing largely to her influence, Cetewayo, the captive King of Zululand, was restored to liberty. She travelled extensively and explored the unknown wastes of Patagonia.

Mr. J. A. Gemmill Dead at Ottawa

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—J. A. Gemmill, the well-known barrister, died this morning, after a week's illness. He was born at Carleton Place in 1846, and comes of a distinguished family. He was an intimate personal friend of Sir Charles Tupper, the veteran statesman, always making Mr. Gemmill's home his home when visiting Ottawa.

A New Japanese Court

London, November 7.—The financial editor of The Times says that, although many persons persist in believing that the Japanese conversion issue is imminent, such is not the case. "No arrangements have yet been made for the loan, but the situation is such that if the Russian loan recently negotiated is suspended two or three months the way will probably be clear for a Japanese issue, though it does not necessarily follow that it will be made at once."

Mr. Aylesworth's Declaration

Toronto, Nov. 8.—An Ottawa special says that Hon. W. S. Fielding resents Mr. Aylesworth's reference to pensions to ex-Ministers, and will not go to North York to support him. It is alleged that Mr. Aylesworth was consulted and agreed to the increases and indemnities before they were brought up in the house.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 275 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $200,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $30,000.00 to $60,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividend and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, THIS STOCK IS CHEAP at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.50 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 50 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but ASK! The closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines. What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1904 produced $36,511,150 per hour, every hour, day and night, Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $39,239,50 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? Then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C stock as they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

How Consumption Starts

Tired When You Waken--Languid All Day—Nerves Worn Out —Snap All Gone

Your limbs feel "draggy" and excessively weak. A night's sleep seldom brings satisfying rest. Continuous headaches, exhaustion and nervous sensations destroy your health. Soon every spark of vitality is used up. Then you catch tuberculosis.

Start to-day. Build up, get new nerve force, and overcome this process of decay. Use Ferrozone, which physicians consider the most vitalizing, uplifting tonic ever made.

Ferrozone cures because it can furnish the body with sufficient nutriment and building material.

Think of the instant effect—at once the appetite increases, delightful color in the cheeks proves that rich, red blood is being circulated. Tired muscles are invigorated, flesh and weight are added. Nerve force develops, and bounding, joyous health is firmly established.

That is certain Ferrozone restores failing strength from any cause. The experience of Mr. Thos. Lund, of Mehreiber, Ont., proves this;

"Neuralgia worries and cares had about exhausted my strength. I was weak and miserable. My cheeks lacked the color of health, and occasionally I had spells of rheumatism. Then my appetite fell off, and nothing could tempt me to eat. Worn-out feelings, chills and despondency filled my very being. I became anaemic and dwindled down to a shadow. Consumption was very near. Ferrozone put strength in my body with a rush. It built me up, strong, virile and happy, and I have been well ever since."

Ferrozone cures sickness by curing the real cause—lack of blood and nerve tone. It keeps people at their best—fit, ready and anxious for work. In 50c. boxes only, six for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

COUNCIL MEETING

Chief Engineer of the Boiler Inspection Company says it Would be Cheaper to Replace Boiler in Fire Engine Than to Repair It.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From a number of citizens, petitioning an electric light on Division street.—Fire, Water and Light committee.

From A. E. Micks, applying for permission to erect a temporary wooden building at the rear of his new store, 212 Hunter street, to be replaced by a substantial brick one in the spring. This was granted, providing Mr. Micks make the change to comply with the fire bylaw not later than the first of May, 1906.

Mr. J. Z. Rogers applied for permission to make connection with the main sewer where it passes close to the west side of his lot in Ward Five.—Board of Works.

From the Y.M.C.A. Debating Club, enclosing the following resolution passed by that body: "Resolved, that the expenditure of $25,000 in the purchase of new fire equipment would be in the best interests of the city."—Received.

Robert Howland apied for an increase of his $18 grant for taking care of the Inverlea Fars, as it is necessary he should i... duty each Sunday during the summer months, when the Gospel services are being held, he having to keep order.—Finance committee.

Citizens petitioned for an electric lamp at the corner of Smith and Bethune streets.—Fire, Water and Light committee.

Property owners petitioned for granolithic sidewalks on the following streets: West side of Reid, from Brock to Hunter streets; south side of Bolivar street, from park to lot No. 9, plan 85; west side of Reid, from Brock half way to Hunter street; inside the tree line, east side of Belmont avenue to Wellington street; inside the tree line, west side of Belmont avenue, from Hunter street to Homewood avenue; on the south side of London, from Reid street to a point 114 feet west of Reid street.

Property owners petitioned for the construction of a sewer on Simcoe street, from Rubidge to a point 70 feet east of Reid street; and one on Simcoe street, from Reid to Rubidge street.—Board of Works.

From Scott & Hogg, applying for a sewer connection with their warehouse, to connect with the south end of the building near the south-east corner, while the sewer is being constructed along the railway right of way.—This was referred to the Board of Works, to take action.

From Vincent Crebar, asking permission to have a small moveable pop corn standsfther on Hunter or Simcoe streets, near the corner of George.—Licence committee, to report.

From the Frost & Wood Co., Toronto, enclosing a tax bill that was forwarded to them by their travelling representative, in which the City of Peterboro claims taxes of $60.94 from this company, endeavoring that they own no property in Peterboro, nor are they tenants, and therefore cannot see that any valid claim exists against them. They further added that they have an account with Mr. Taylor, of Peterboro, who should no doubt be taxed to the extent of the personal property on this bill.—Court of Revision.

Ozias de Laplante wrote, on behalf of Mr. Thos. McDonough, protesting against the validity of taxes against his client to the amount of $39.16 on the personal property assessment of $1,500 of the estate of the late Chas. LeGros, andadding that said Thos. McDonough cannot be called upon to pay the tax in question, he not being the party assessed as the owner of the goods.—Court of Revision.

From Josiah Robertson, applying to have his name placed on the roll of deputy returning officers for the city.—Received.

From Geo. Spencer, Superintendent C. P. R., complaining that the nearest fire alarm box to the city station and freight sheds—corner of Perry and George streets—is too far away for a person to sound an alarm in the event of fire, especially at night when the station night staff is limited. Mr. Spencer asked for an alarm box at the end of the platform on George street, which would be available for other citizens.—Fire, Water and Light committee.

From John Thompson, pointing out the need of sewer connection with his house on Dublin street.—Board of Works.

From Geo. C. Robb, Chief Engineer of the Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company of Canada, stating that after thoroughly examining the boiler of the old fire engine, he advised that it would be cheaper to purchase a new boiler than repair the old one.—Fire, Water and Light committee.

FINANCE REPORT.

In the absence of Ald. Mason, Ald. Adams presented the report of the Finance committee, recommending payment of a number of accounts, and that the Selectors of Jurors be paid $5.00 each, in accordance with the certificate of the Clerk of Peace.

We received an account for $5.00, from Dr. J. W. Gray for information as to the cause of a death, and we recommend that it be not paid, as the city is not responsible in the matter.

We also recommend that the following accounts passed by the Board of Health be paid: Ormond & Walsh, $11.85, St. Joseph's Hospital, $27.00. The report was adopted as read.

LEGAL COMMITTEE REPORT.

Ald. Scott presented the following: Gentlemen,—Your Legal committee beg leave to report as follows;

1. That the order of the Police Magistrate of Lindsay, making the City of Peterboro liable for the maintenance of Jeremiah Clary in the St. John's Industrial School, was brought before the Magistrate by the City Solicitor, and on the evidence produced the order was changed relieving this city of the responsibility.

2. We recommend that the case of T. W. Hubbell against the city for injuries to a horse on the Brock street bridge, be settled by the city paying $27.50, and that a cheque be issued for that sum.

The report was adopted as read.

A WORD OF GOOD COUNSEL.—When the days are bleak and nights are long and cold, keep Perry Davis' Painkiller in the house. It is your faithful friend, as it was you parents' friend. External and internal use.

THE FOLLOWING GENTLEMEN HAVE CONSENTED TO ACT AS DIRECTORS:

SAMUEL BARKER, ESQ., M.P., Director the Landed Banking and Loan Co., Hamilton.
GEORGE A. CLARE, ESQ., M.P., President Clare Bros. & Co., Limited, Preston.
E. E. A. DUVERNET, ESQ., of the firm DuVernet, Jones, Ross and Ardagh, Barristers, Toronto.
LORD ERNEST HAMILTON, Director Employers' Liability Assurance Co. London, England.
EVAN H. LLEWELLYN, ESQ., M.P., Director Great Western Railway Co., London, England.
REV. T. C. STREET MACKLEM, D. D., Provost and Vice-Chancellor of Trinity College, Toronto.
M. McLAUGHLIN, ESQ., Member of the late firm M. McLaughlin & Co., Millers, Toronto.
WILLIAM J. SMITH, ESQ., President and Manager J. B. Smith & Son, Lumber Merchants', Toronto.

The remarkable advance made by the Dominion of Canada during the past five years and the great development of its natural resources have been so significant as to attract the attention of capitalists and investors at the financial centers of two continents.

It may very properly be said that no new country at a similar stage in its history, not excepting the United States, has given such promise of commercial greatness and material prosperity. Canadian securities—Government, Railway, Financial and Land—occupy a very high position in the stock markets of the world.

A notable feature of the past five years has been the growth of the trade between the Mother Country and Canada. The very certain prospect of increasing trade relations—with the probability of their being further encouraged by a closer union—the much more active interest in the Dominion now being taken by the capitalists of Great Britain and the tide of improved immigration now making for Canadian shores, suggest that the time is most suitable for the establishment of a bank which shall not merely realize success in its operations, from the actual needs of the Dominion, but shall emphasize the rapidly growing commercial relations within the Empire.

The UNITED EMPIRE BANK of CANADA will operate throughout Canada with an office in London, England, and later, if the occasion demands, at other large centres in Great Britain.

While being a thoroughly Canadian institution under Canadian management, its Directorate will include three or more prominent financiers of London, England.

Although the Provisional Executive have already received offers of large subscriptions for stock from English investors, it is intended to limit the holdings of any one person or corporation and to secure the greater portion of its share capital in Canada, in as widely distributed holdings as possible.

While there have been since 1900 three new banks established in active operation in Canada, all of which are meeting with success, there are fewer banks in existence in 1905 than there were in 1900.

Canada is fortunate in possessing a banking system which, in legislative safeguarding, is unsurpassed by that of any country in the world. The regulations of the Canadian "Bank Act" provide for the fullest security to the investor in bank shares.

The conditions precedent to the establishment of a new institution are now of so stringent a character as to prevent any but a responsible organization from undertaking the banking business.

The currency system by its elasticity avoids "money trouble."
No business possesses the same safety.
No business has been more uniformly profitable.
A bank begins to earn profits for its shareholders from the outset.
Its capital is not laid out in plant and stock like a new industrial or mercantile business.

During the past ten years the actual returns of Canadian banks to their stockholders, after setting aside a portion of their annual profits as a reserve fund, have ranged from six to twelve per cent.

During the past three years the earnings have averaged fifteen per cent. per annum per institution.

The prices of bank shares in Canada are most significant, ranging from 175 to 230 per hundred of par value, with the exception of a very few institutions whose stocks are not actively dealt in or quoted on the regular exchanges, but every one of which is paying regular dividends on its capital and accumulating a reserve fund.

Owing to the rapidly increasing needs of the country nearly every bank in Canada, whose existence precedes 1900, has been called upon to largely increase its capital in the past ten years. The new stock has been offered in almost every case at a high premium and under the regulations of the Bank Act must necessarily be first offered to the existing shareholders. The opportunity of investing in bank shares can be obtained by the general public only by purchase in the open market at the high current prices.

The Directors of the United Empire Bank of Canada will be men selected with a view to their business capacity and financial ability. While they will be men of means and thoroughly representative, special regard will be paid to their fitness and capability for the position.

The General Manager will be Mr. George P. Reid, for ten years General Manager of The Standard Bank of Canada. The success of this institution under his management has been widely recognized, Mr. Reid possesses an enviable reputation as being a sound and conservative banker.

Shares will be $100 par value. As preliminary expenses will be kept within very small limits, it is not considered necessary to issue the stock at a premium.

The terms of subscription will be $10 per share on allotment, $10 per share on the first day of the month immediately following the date of allotment, $10 per share every month thereafter on the first day of the month until the whole amount is paid.

Interest at the rate of FOUR per cent. per annum up to the date fixed for payment will be allowed on payments made in advance.

The provisional Directors reserve the right to reject or allot any subscription in whole or in part.

Applications for Stock should be made to MR. GEORGE P. REID, Secretary
Lawlor Building, Corner King and Yonge Streets, Toronto.
STOCK BOOKS NOW OPEN AT ABOVE ADDRESS

Cheques, drafts, money orders and other remittances on account of subscriptions should be made payable to SAMUEL BAKER, ESQ., M.P., and MR. GEORGE P. REID.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 per acre for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quarts.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7.50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 0x1500 feet. The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspepsia stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured, 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish." W. A TANGLED WEB

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

"Will you think me unwarrantably intrusive if I ask you a few questions about those by-gone days?" laying her hand gently on her step-mother's knee.

Mrs. L'Estrange smiled thoughtfully.

"No, dear, I can tell you anything, and there is not much to tell."

"Did you know Clifford before you married my father?"

"Scarcely knew him. I met him several times. He was a delightful boy at nineteen or twenty."

"Was he a great friend of Mark Winton's?"

"No. More the friend of the other Mark. You know both the Wintons had the same name, it used to make confusion. They had not been brought up exactly together. They were at different schools, but both were sent to study with my father—one for the army, the other for India. We used to distinguish them as Black and Red Mark. They made Clifford Marsden's acquaintance at his aunt's Mrs. Atherley's at Oldbridge, and he came down from London to see them once, for a few days, to my father's rectory in Hampshire. Oh! what a sweet home it was. What ages away back that time seems!"

"And," whispered Nora, leaning lightly against her companion, and fixing her eyes on the glowing coals, "Mark Winton was very fond of you?"

"Well," returned Mrs. L'Estrange, with a quiet smile, "he fancied he was—he said he was—and I, a foolish, motherless girl, believed him."

"But was he not faithful and true?" cried Nora, infinitely surprised.

"There might have been a mistake somewhere; but it all came hard enough on me," returned Mrs. L'Estrange. "There was a gentleman in our neighborhood who wished me to marry him—a very good fellow. I was inclined to like him, but after Mark made me believe he loved me I thought of no one else, and I refused my first admirer. Then Mark went away to India. He wrote to me once or twice. Then came my great sorrow. My father died, leaving barely sufficient to pay his debts. I was very friendless, we had lived away from all our relations, and I waited and waited for a letter from Mark, but none came for more than a year. Then I had a curious epistle, bidding me farewell, and expressing deep regret for any pain he might have caused me, but that marriage was out of the question for him. I never replied. I felt that chapter was closed forever. That was just after I went to live with Miss Webster—an engagement Mrs. Atherley got for me."

"I could never have believed that such a man as Mr. Winton would have [illegible]," said Nora, her heart beating, her eyes lit up with indignation. How can you ——"

"But, Nora," interrupted Mrs. L'Estrange, quickly, "it was not Red Mark, whom you know, who behaved in this way! I do not fancy he ever was in love in his life. Oh, no! It was his cousin. Our friend was always true and steady. I will remember when, owing to the similarity of name, some knowledge of his cousin's engagement to me reached him, he warned me against throwing away a certainty for a will-o'-the-wisp, as, no doubt, I did. Ah! that was a dreadful time. Its bitterness and mortification sting me still! My life, under its new conditions was dreary and trying enough to make me very grateful to your father for giving me the chance of leaving it—and you know the rest."

"Then—" Nora paused, and, changing her sentence, observed, "Do you know, I fancied, at one time, that you would marry Mr. Winton?"

Mrs. L'Estrange laughed softly.

"That is curious," she said, "for I fancied that you and he were taking to each other, until after the Eversleigh ball—when a sort of change came to both of you."

There was a pause of a few minutes. The light died out of Nora's eyes, the color from her cheek. At length she said:

"Then you would not marry Mr. Winton?"

"It is extremely unlikely that he would ask me," said Mrs. L'Estrange, laughing. "And as to me, all ideas of love or matrimony are over forever. Ben is, and will be, my only love. I want no more."

A dull sense of despair numbed Nora's heart; it was a few seconds before she could collect herself to say:

"Do you think Clifford Marsden knew all this?"

"Yes; I imagine he did. He was very friendly with Mark, and continued to be after our friend, Red Mark, went out to India. My fiance, as I fancied him to be, did not go till after. He was appointed to a regiment stationed at Delhi, and, I believe, was very unfortunate and weak. Mr. Winton gave me an account of his later life. He died two years ago. I had not heard anything of him for a long time, and I was so grieved to think of his wasted life! How well it is that the future is hidden from us! There, dear, is the whole history."

The whole history! Mrs. L'Estrange little dreamed what a sting it left in her step-daughter's soul. Was Clifford Marsden's memory really defective? Or, had he misrepresented facts? Surely he was too much a gentleman to do so? At any rate, she (Nora), had been juggled out of the best chance of happiness ever offered her; for she now felt convinced Mark Winton had loved her from the first.

"Dear Helen," she said, rising with an effort, "I have kept you up too late; let us go to bed. What an extraordinary jumble life is!"

"Yes! Is it not incomprehensible?" returned Mrs. L'Estrange, kissing her. "You look dreadfully pale and tired, Nora."

repeating itself in fiery syllables all night long; strive as she would, Nora could hear nothing else, think of nothing else. What an incomprehensible destiny that which doomed her and the man that loved her well, as she now believed, to separation forever!

Was she deceived, or only inadvertently misled? If deceived she would never, never forgive. And she must find out.

CHAPTER XIV.

The balmy air of Torquay did wonders for Mrs. Ruthven, and her own resolute eagerness to regain health and strength still more.

The attentions and inquiries of various noble and distinguished invalids, sojourning, like herself, in that famous resort, soothed and satisfied her. Lady Dorrington had written glowing eulogiums and recommendations of her friend and guest, and all things promised fair for the ensuing spring campaign. But though sweet and placid to those few favored visitors who were admitted to her presence, the real vivifying influence which was bringing back energy to her system was the hope, the prospect of revenge. To lose Clifford Marsden, by whom she had been so fascinated, was bad enough; to lose the lord of Eversleigh, the hero of a hundred conquests, was worse; to lose him to a simple, inexperienced girl, whom she had herself praised

HERE IS A CURE FOR

Sleeplessness

Weak, Listless, Sleepless Men and Women Cured Every Day by Dr Hamilton's Pills.

The physical suffering and mental anguish that victims of sleeplessness endure is indeed a sad story. But in Dr. Hamilton's Pills there is swift relief from this awful condition. Thousands have proved the merit of this grand medicine, among them Mrs. G. T. Lyons, one of the best known residents of Geneva, who writes: "My health ran down and I was unable to sleep. I had headache and pains in different parts of my body. In the morning I was weary and exhausted—no rest or comfort came from the snatches of sleep I got.

"Dr. Hamilton's Pills braced me at once. After the first night I got refreshing sleep, that extreme weariness left me and I recovered very fast.

"No medicine I ever used gave such telling results as Dr. Hamilton's Mandrake and Butternut Pills."

Don't let sleeplessness drive you crazy. take Dr. Hamilton's Pills and get well. You will soon be in fresh vigor, your appetite will be vigorous, force and energy will be instilled into your nervous system.

By nourishing and purifying the blood and by stimulating the action of the kidneys, liver and stomach Dr. Hamilton's Pills accomplish wonders. Try a 25c. box, or five boxes for $1, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

A Deere Wedding

Yesterday morning in St. Joseph's church, Douro, an interesting event took place when Miss Mary Heffernan, daughter of the late Patrick Heffernan, of Douro, was married to Mr. Stephen Murphy, postmaster of Guelph, in the presence of a number of friends of the contracting parties. The nuptial knot was tied by Rev. [illegible]. The bride was attired very becomingly in a dress of pretty navy blue ladies cloth, with white hat of plumes and velvet. The happy couple will reside in Guelph.

Paint Factory May Open Here

It was rumored yesterday that Peterboro's large and growing family of industrial enterprises may soon be increased by still another factory. The new establishment will be for manufacturing dry paint. Our readers will remember that Mr. R. G. Newhall, who represented the English syndicate contemplating establishing the factory in Canada, spent some weeks in this vicinity, enquiring as to the facilities available in Peterboro for an industry.

It seems that the result of his investigations was decidedly in favor of this city. This company will also manufacture wood alcohol. Mr. Newhall has visited many Canadian towns and cities, and still has others to investigate before finally deciding.

A Telephone Pipe Dream

A Canadian, of Brantford, according to the Paris correspondent of the London Mail, will offer the French Government to provide husbands for 2,000 lonely French "belle girls," now waiting in the Paris telephone exchange. This gentleman, who is president of a company now opposing the Bell Telephone Company, it is said, offers to pay travelling expenses, board and lodging, with pocket money thrown in, for the 2000 girls, and to try to procure husbands for the girls. This article savors strongly of a canard. Where is any tangible opposition being given by the Bell Company? If any such opposition were to substantialize, we thought the "Machine" Co., were to cut out the salaries paid to hard-working lady-like girls, by using an automatic central. And, more than all does it look like a canard, when the question of "Ways and Means" is taken into account. Were any such offer to be made, the French Government, and parents of girls, would do well to see what is the color of money.

LOCAL INCIDENTS

BY THE TIMES MAN ON THE STREET.

—It is not intended to have Mr. Jerom Kay Jerom repeat his performance here on his return trip.

—St. Peter's Cathedral is considering the erection of a Catholic church in the south end of the city.

—Be sure and give us a call for games, toys and picture books for the children; new goods arriving daily and prices right. Times Bookstore.

—Next Sunday, the ladies of St. John's church choir, will wear "mortar boards," i.e., flat topped college caps.

—The Strangers Fellowship Club of the Y.M.C.A. held their annual meeting on Saturday night, November 11, at 6 o'clock.

—St. John's church social on Monday evening, attended by Brothers of St. Andrews and King's Daughters, was entertained by Rev. Dr. Sparling. A most enjoyable time was had.

—The drainage Trust yesterday, as foretold in The Times, began work yesterday morning on deepening the channel for the American Cereal Works to the C.P.R. bridge.

—Last night an Indian named Alfred Edwards, who claims to live in Belleville, annoyed the harbours of the Hotel des Ogs Bridal Chamber plank. Too much sampling of the forbidden juice was the cause.

—The Quarterly Business Meeting of the Park street Baptist church will be held to-morrow evening next. A full representation of the membership is requested as business of importance will be considered.

—A young man with only one arm hospital, where he was as a result was a self-invited guest at the police station last night. He claimed to have recently gotten out of a local of a railroad accident by which he lost the missing arm.

—One of Mr. W. H. Hamilton's delivery horses yesterday morning, whilst bringing a load of canned goods from the G.T.R. station, ran away down Simcoe street and down George. A broken whiffle-tree caused the trouble. No further damage was done.

—It is not true, that the water commissioners have a gang of men employed at the filtering station, slaying the microbs with clubs and guns. No attempt has yet been made by the bacteria to crawl over the edges, and inaugurate a direct attack upon the city.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

—Mr. C. B. Boutley is in Toronto on business.

—Mr. Thos. Barrie went to Toronto on business.

—Mrs. J. E. Firth, Dalhousie street, will not receive this afternoon.

Plans for Opera House

To-morrow evening at 7.30 in Ormond & Walsh's, the plan for the opening night of the Grand Opera House will be opened to subscribers. The first attraction will be the "Yankee Consul," the great musical success. This will give those who have subscribed for seats an early opportunity to secure the choice of the house. The plans will probably be opened to the general public about Monday.

Music School for Peterboro

The Metropolitan Music School of Music, of Toronto, is to open a branch in this city at an early date, subject determined on. This faculty will be a large picture, by a quintette of members of the staff of the Metropolitan School, Mr. Orrell Carl Forsythe, organist and choir-master, of St. Andrew's church, will be the musical director of the school. Mr. Forsythe, who arrived in the city a few days ago, is a brother of Mr. W. O. Forsythe, director of music in the Metropolitan School.

LOSE THEIR DOGS

Eagle Lake Party, Owing to Fall of Snow, Lose Their Canine Assistants

It was currently reported yesterday morning that the Eagle Lake party were stranded for lack of dogs. Mr. Firstwood, the well known butcher, had word to this effect from friends in the party, and yesterday afternoon, this grave trouble was proven to be only too true, by the arrival, in town of Ald. E. b. Mason's brand.

Early Thursday morning the dogs were let loose and they started on the scent through about three inches of snow which had fallen on Wednesday. During the day the weather turned mild and the snow melted and the dogs lost their tracks. They did not return, and ever since the hunters have been tramping from camp to camp in search of their animals, but up to yesterday no trace of them had been found.

Mr. Arthur Mitchell, who is one of the party, took his brother's dog up, and the last the party saw of it it was chasing a bunk. How it ever found its way home is an mystery. There were ten dogs in the pack, and this is the only one that has been seen.

Mr. Firstwood's letter also stated that the Eagle Lake party had shot three deer up to Wednesday night, but the loss of the dogs, has spoiled their fun.

PHILOMATHEAN SOCIETY

Collegiate Institute's Society Holds First Meeting of Season

On Monday afternoon the Collegiate Institute's Philomathean Society held its first regular meeting of the present season. The meeting was held in the Y.M.C.A. Hall. The chair was occupied by Mr. Stanley Fife, president, who gave a most comprehensive address on "Oratory, and the Cultivation of the Art in Literary and Debating Societies."

Miss Burnett read a paper on "Wordsworth," which gave a clear insight into the beautiful thoughts and expression of this celebrated poet. During the meeting Misses Eva Stevenson, Dorothy Fessenden, Jean Campbell and Lillian Deane, read selections from the same poet's works, illustrating the different phases of Wordsworth's writings.

Misses Gladys Crange and Edith Connor delighted the audience with piano selections.

At the end of the program, Miss A. Weir, B.A., criticised the meeting in a most able manner, pointing out defects in the matter which had been used, and also in the manner of its delivery.

The meeting closed by the singing of God Save the King, Miss Hazel Sanderson presiding at the piano.

The Collegiate Philomathean Society has before it the prospects of a most interesting and successful year's work.

CLEANED HOUSE

Out With the Old Food and in With the New

They have sensible women in El Reno, Oklahoma. One says:

"For 30 years I was accustomed to eat freely of pork, hot biscuits shortened with lard, and a rich diet of every kind, washed down with plentiful strong coffee.

"In time my appetite became fickle and my digestion was almost completely destroyed.

"My complexion grew to be absolutely repulsive—thick, muddy and sluggish—and I was so nervous and cross that I cannot now understand how my friends endured my crankiness; my memory failed, nothing went right with me and life became almost unendurably burdensome. Medicine did me absolutely no good whatsoever. I endured this condition for 7 years.

"In January (1904) a friend told me that for several years prior to 1896 she had suffered much as I appeared to be suffering, and that the cause of it was improper food. That when she reached this conclusion she began the systematic use of Grape-Nuts food, with a general course of diet and exercise, such as is recommended in the little book, 'The Road to Wellville,' and was thereby completely restored to health in a very short time.

"Knowing that the word of my friend could be implicitly relied upon I determined to follow her example. I stopped the use of all medicines at once, made Grape-Nuts food the principal article of my diet, and practised the course of living enjoined in the 'Road to Wellville'—and all to my great joy and bodily comfort as witness:

"My mind became clear and active, and my memory fully restored.

"My digestion has been completely renewed, and I am no longer haunted nightly by hideous dreams.

"My appetite has ceased to be fickle and capricious, one moment 'all gone' and the next voracious and insatiable, but now it is healthy and normal, ONCE MORE.

"My nerves are steady and strong.

"I really believe I am as amiable as any woman ought to be on this earth. I'm glad I'm living.

"My complexion has cleared up and is like it used to be when I was a girl." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Mr. O. Humber Secures Position

Mr. Orlando Humber, the well-known mill-wright has returned from a business trip to Toronto. Whilst in that city, Mr. Hunter was engaged by Mr. H. H. Cook, general manager of the Ontario Lumber Co., as chief millwright for that large concern. Mr. Humber expects daily to receive notice to go to his new place of employment. In the meantime, he is finishing the new machinery in the Lock Works.

Bank of Commerce Enlargement

The local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce will shortly make extensive alterations and enlargements in the interior of their present handsome building.

Mr. Hughes-Charles, the popular manager, reports that the bank's business has enlarged so greatly, their present quarters are altogether inadequate. The contract for the work, it is understood, has been placed in the hands of the Globe Furniture Company, and the new fittings will be of handsome workmanship. The east lane end of the building will, it is said, be fitted up for one of the bank and auditor teller's wicket open.

HUNTING SCENES

A Local Man's Adventures at Eagle Lake Handed Down to Posterity

A well known landsman of this city has just returned from an extended fishing and hunting tour at Gold and Eagle Lakes.

The dispenser of the glass that cheers, and, when used in moderation, inspires with poetic and philanthropic ideas, returned not only in person but in fac-simile. The artist of the party portrayed the genial hostess in a series of pictures, entitled "——— in trouble. Act 1 shows the hotelman standing, about 2 a.m. on the four foot high stoop of the hunting lodge.

The hotel man's expression, as shown in the pictures, shows that he is listening to the night wind whispering through the redolent pines, and remembering that life after all is good. The artist, with true attention to time and truth, has drawn his subject arrayed appropriately in a robe de nuit.

Act 2 shows the man turning an aerial summersault from the stoop, as he has leaned too far towards the nearby waves of the lake.

Act 3 shows him lying at length on the inhospitable ground.

Act 4, and final shows the party, similarly arrayed, and armed with lanterns, finding the "corpse" dearbied up over a log.

These pictorial mementos of hunting life keep green in memory the good times, whilst in the wilds, and tell a story truer than words could express.

ARTISTIC WINDOW

"Mac" the George Street Tobacconist Succeeds in Making a Good Display

Mr. McDonough, better known about town as "Mac" has perhaps the most artistically decorated tobacconist's window that Peterboro has ever seen. In the window are samples of tobacco, arranged to show both the crude leaf and the finished article.

Along the large plate glass front is a row of rolls of Canadian tobacco, made into round and half pound twists, as used by the Habitants of lower Canada, and also by the river drivers of our Ontario waters. The floor of the show window is completely covered with broken bundles of raw leaf tobacco, as imported by the cigar factories to be rolled into future smokes.

On the glass shelves, suspended by wires, are Christmas goods in the shape of various kinds of tobacco jars. In each jar arranged to represent in shape, contents are cured tobacco leaves.

The taste ensemble, is relieved of monotony, by pyramidical retards, placed at intervals displaying all kinds of pipes. The whole window is artistic and well worthy of a second look. It is such enterprise as this that draws customers and we consider the man who fixed up the window, to be an artist in his profession.

Scandal at Court

Kiel, November 7.—Fraulein Milewsky, former maid of the late Duchess Amelia of Schleswig-Holstein, has brought suit for slander against Princess Henrietta of Schleswig-Holstein, aunt of the German Empress, because of a letter written by Duke Ernst Guenther of Schleswig-Holstein, brother-in-law of Emperor William, in which Fraulein Milewsky is alluded to as a "dangerous, cunning swindler." The case will be tried before the Court at Kiel. The Empress and a long list of princely personage will be asked to testify.

Exceeds First Estimate

Montreal, November 7.—Wheat deliveries along the Canadian Pacific Railway system indicate that the estimates of the grain crop made early in the fall of 70,000,000 bushels will be far surpassed. Already deliveries exceed 72,000,000 bushels, as compared with 11,000,000 bushels at the same period of last year.

Britain Against The Tax on Her Travellers

Imperial Board of Trade Sends a Complaint to Ottawa About Quebec Tax---All Enlightened Nations Without Such Legislation.

Ottawa, Nov. 9. — The Imperial Board of Trade has taken up the cudgels on behalf of British business interests, and directed a despatch to the Canadian Government, protesting the strong protest of Old Country exporting houses against the Quebec commercial travellers' tax. In its communication it gives a list of the countries where taxes are imposed on commercial travellers. This goes to show that none of the more enlightened nations of Europe put any such restrictions on international trade. France, Germany, Italy, Spain, and Greece, welcome all the commercial travellers who care to do business in their midst. Moreover, among those countries who do tax travellers, none demand any such figure as is exacted in Quebec. The figures are furnished to bear this statement out.

The despatch in question came before the Dominion Cabinet at its last meeting and will be brought to the attention of the Quebec authorities.

TAKE IT TO COURTS.

Ottawa, Nov. 9.—The Trade and Customs Department is understood to have reported some time ago in favor of disallowing both the Quebec and the H.C. Travelers' Tax bills on the score of interference with trade. The Minister of Justice, however, to whom the matter was referred, is of the opinion that the British North American Act would afford the Dominion no justification for vetoing the legislation. There the matter stands for the present. The Federal authorities have some time yet within which they may be disallowed, but in the meantime no final action has been taken. It is, of course, quite open to anyone to test the constitutionality of these bills before the courts, and if, as stated, action has already been taken in Quebec, the Government can easily facilitate a speedy decision of the case before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The Ministers at Ottawa would probably prefer that the point should be dealt with in this way.

WHAT COAL MEN WANT

Sixty Cents Per Ton Duty on Anthracite Dust

Ottawa, November 9.—Manager Dick, of the Dominion Coal Co., was here on Monday looking up statistics as to the importation of anthracite dust from the United States. Anthracite was put on the free list for the benefit of householders, while a 50 cents per ton duty is placed on bituminous coal). Since the tariff was made, a method of mechanical stoking has been invented which enables anthracite dust to be burned. It is taking the place of Canadian bituminous coal in Toronto, Montreal, and even further east. It is a waste product of the American mines and can be sold cheaply. The eastern coal producers will ask to have a duty of 60 cents per ton placed upon it. They will ask for protection against British coal which comes in under the preference at a low freight rate as ballast, and in steamers which are aided by subsidies of the Dominion.

ELEVEN PRINTERS HERE

Men on Their Way to the West in Town

Yesterday eleven printers arrived in town on their way to Western Ontario. They were all the way from England, and were composed of job printers, compositors and two pressmen. The men have been engaged to fill the places of striking printers.

Mr. Durrell, one of the party, told The Times that trade in England was not good, and that many men were leaving for Canada and the American States. Several of the party have friends in town, whom they are visiting for a day or two previous to going west.

MISS WOODGATE LEAVES

Superintendent of the Barnardo Home Returns to England

To-morrow night Miss Woodgate, superintendent of the local branch of Dr. Barnardo's Home, leaves for England, where she will hereafter reside, giving up on her departure, the work in Canada. Miss Woodgate has been in charge of the Peterboro branch for the last fifteen years, except during a short time in which Capt. and Miss Metcalfe were here, and Miss Woodgate was in England.

Miss Woodgate's successor in office is Miss Pierce, who has lately arrived to take up the duties. Miss Pierce has been identified with the Homes for many years, and was in charge of one of the Girl's Homes at Hilford, England, where large interests of the work are centered.

There is no truth in the reports that the branches of the Barnardo Home will close owing to the lamented death of their founder, as arrangements have now been completed for carrying them on.

A WONDERFUL MIRAGE

WHAT MEN ON ARCTIC WHALING FLEET SAW

Hugo City Just Ahead of Ship, Lighted by Thousands of Electric Lights

San Francisco, November 9. — The bark Gayhead, the first of the Arctic whaling fleet, arrived here last night. On thenight of August 13th, when the Gayhead was cruising about 75 miles west of Phibyloff Island, in Behring Sea, Mate Pease and the men on deck Pwere startled by the appearance of a great city immediately ahead. There was the shore line and, rising above it were thousands of electric lights twinkling along a hundred streets. Here and there, apparently at prominent corners, were larger lights, and along the shore were the myriad lights showing at the wharves. But the mate and his men knew that this must be a mirage, and that for hundreds of miles beyond where these lights flared out was only an expanse of desolate water. The mate called Captain Pierce and he looked upon the scene and was bewildered. There was no accounting for the wonderful sight. This city seemed as real as San Francisco seems to a vessel anchored in the channel near Goat Island. When daylight came the spectacle faded away and in all directions was only the bosom of the cold sea with no land in sight and no great city within thousands of miles.

MONSTER SUN TO DO HAVOC

Luminary a Thousand Times Larger Than Our Sun is Coming This Way

TO RIP UP SOLAR SYSTEM

Chicago University Professors Have a Startling Theory of Origin of Solar System

Chicago, November 9.—A new theory as to the origin of the earth and other bodies of the solar system is advanced by professors at the University of Chicago. It is called the spirit nebular hypothesis, and makes things look gloomy for posterity one thousand million years hence. for then, according to the professors, a monster sun, thousands of times larger than our sun, will sweep through the solar system, stirrings things up much like a railroad train stirs up the dust along the track.

The professors who have solved this theory, so important to the astronomical world, are Forrest R. Moulton, of the department of astronomy, and J. C. Chamberlain, head of the department of geology. They have been experimenting in space since 1898 and have just made public their conclusions.

Instead of earth and planets having been formed by rings thrown off by the sun, as has been the general belief since 1796, they claim the bodies of the solar system owe their existence to a great sun, which swept through these parts some millions of years ago and created such a disturbance that our sun threw off a spiral cloud of dust. This dust, whirling around in the heavens, condensed and formed planets. Jupiter, Saturn and Neptune, it is declared, were formed in this way, while the smaller planets—Mars, Mercury, Venus and the Earth were merely single specks of dust.

This, it is said, accounts for the solidity of the earth. The professors believe the earth has been solid and rigid since it was the earth. The former planets are supposed to be in a more nebular condition.

According to the nebular hypothesis of Laplace, which has been accepted since 1796, the solar system extended to Neptune, the farthest planet. As a contraction occurred, rings were thrown off by the sun, one for each planet. The planets in turn threw off rings, forming satellites. In the case of the earth, the moon was thrown off.

The new theory declares that the disturbing sun kept stirring things up around our sun for 20,000,000 years, when it finally got far enough away so that things settled down in the solar system.

The disturbance raised enormous tides on the sun, like those on the ocean, except that these tides were thousands of miles high. The attraction of these tides has kept the bodies of the solar system revolving around the sun.

If the theory is not accepted, the friends of the professors say, it is only necessary to wait until the wandering sun drops around our way again.

HEARST'S BARREL

Municipal Ownership Candidate for New York Mayoralty Will Contest Results

New York, Nov. 9.—Returns give McClellan the New York Mayoralty but Hearst claims fraud and will make a contest.

Hearst, owner of three huge and powerful newspapers, who was a would-be candidate for the U.S. Presidential chair, and who was frequently made fun of by the Republican illustrated papers, as dealing out dollars wholesale, has temporarily been defeated for the mayoralty of Greater New York.

Ohio is still in doubt, Massachusetts elects a Republican Governor. The Republicans triumph in New Jersey and Rhode Island. The Democrats in Virginia. The Democratic effort to disfranchise negroes in Maryland was defeated.

The last account shows that Mayor Geo. B. McClellan has been re-elected by a little more than 3000 votes. Twenty-six election districts are still missing. William Randolph Hearst will contest the election, charging that the election has been stolen by fraud. Declarations are made that a recount will show Hearst elected.

As Hearst has enormous influence, owing, not so much to his income, which perhaps runs over $2,000 a day, as to the platform he ran on, will possibly yet be the mayor.

POKER GAME CAUSES A DUEL

Two Travelling Salesmen Quarrel and Kill Each Other

Tahula, Miss., November 9.—"You're a liar." The words came as the finale of a poker game in which Jake Glenn, of Greenwood, Miss., denied the accusation of W. A. Spratlin, of Memphis, that he had been cheating.

Half an hour later both men were dead—shot in a street duel with 44 caliber pistols.

The men were drummers. Spratlin was about 30 years old, while Glenn was about 35. They met in a leisure hour at Tahula and sat down to a quiet game of poker. Luck went against Spratlin, and he accused his companion of cheating. Glenn denied the accusation, and the bitter words that led to the shooting followed.

Glenn went to a hardware store and purchased a revolver. Spratlin went for his weapon to his room. They met on the street in front of the Wilson house, and Glenn again asked Spratlin to recall his epithets. The tone was void of menace, but his manner was determined. In reply, Spratlin, who had his weapon drawn, opened fire. He sent four bullets through Glenn's body, causing death in two minutes. Glenn drew his pistol after he was down and fired two shots, either of which would have proven fatal to Spratlin, Spratlinlied twenty minutes later.

RECORD BREAKING PRICE

3613 Boxes Boarded Yesterday and all But Stony Lake Sold

High prices ruled at the Cheese Board held in Ontario Bank Chambers yesterday. This is the last meeting of the season, and yesterday's prices beat all records of the year.

There were 3613 boxes boarded, and, all but 53, boarded by Stony Lake, were sold and bought the remarkable price of 12 7-16 cents.

Those present were astonished that such a high price should be bid at this season of the year, especially as yesterday's session was the wind up of last season's sales. When Mr. Kerr had 12 3-8 cents, almost fabulous prices, were forthcoming.

Not only was this the highest price of the year on the Peterboro Board, but it was also the highest price ever received on this board, and it was the highest price this year in Canada on any Board.

A discussion on the question of turnippy flavored cheese took place, and the feeding of turnips was condemned strongly. Mr. Whitton, one of the buyers, was the principle speaker on the question, and he gave his experience which was to the effect that he had found that turnipkins fed to milking cows had produced far better results than turnips, and he advised the farmers to give it a trial.

As is usual at the last meeting of the Board, the customary votes of thanks were passed to the President and to the Ontario Bank, for the use of the Board room.

The number of cheese boarded by the different factories were as follows:

Keene	155
Warminster	150
Shearer	90
Central Smith	160
Villiers	95
Warsaw	115
Westwood	200
Oakdale	77
Missing Link	85
Daisy D.	47
Lakefield	180
Pine Grove	136
Peterboro	50
Ottonabee Union	65
Maple Leaf	120
Myrtle	125
Ormonde	180
Young's Point	70
Lang	125
Fraserville	130
Indian River	115
North Dummer	75
Ballyduff	90
East Emily	105
Trewern	112
Bensfort	105
Cedardale	55
Stony Lake	53
Crowe	128
Mount Pleasant	67
Norwood	95
Fleetwood	150
Buckhorn	145
Hope	35

The buyers present were; Messrs. Kerr, Fitzgerald, Cook, Whitton, Gillespie, Robins, Wrighton, and Morton.

The bidding was opened by Mr. Gillespie, who offered 11 3-8 cents, and Mr. Whitton raised it to 11 1-2.

Mr. Kerr at 12 7-16 cents bought Ormonde, Villiers, Warsaw, Ballyduff, Trewern, Lakefield, Pinegrove, Warminster, Shearer, Lang, East Emily, Bensfort, Young's Point, Indian River, Fraserville, Oakdale, Daisy D, Missing Link, Ottonabee Union, North Dummer, Central Smith, Westwood, Fleetwood, Mount Pleasant, Crowe, Norwood, Hope, Cedardale. Mr. Kerr wanted to buy the whole board and called every factory at 12 7-16, but five refused to sell, and he then raised his offer to 12 1-2 cents, and called two of the five remaining factories, but this salesmen still refused to dispose of their cheese.

Mr. Fitzgerald then offered 12 7-16 cents for the whole of the board remaining unsold, and four of the five sold. Stony Lake refusing to sell subject to station inspection.

Prior to the opening of the sale, the salesman of Fraserville factories complained that Mr. Whitton had agreed to buy their cheese, and had held back $16, and that although he had agreed to pay him after the last meeting, he had refused to make good his promise. Mr. Whitton explained to the meeting that he had deducted the amount from the cheese because of the fact that there was a turnippy flavor, which was a detriment to the quality of the cheese.

The salesman of the Oakdale factory also complained about the same buyer, who, he said, had deducted half a cent a pound on account of cracks which had been fooled in some of the cheese. Mr. Whitton explained the transaction, and said that he had agreed to make a full report on the number of boxes, and was prepared to make a satisfactory settlement if he had not paid enough.

It was decided to leave the question of the settlement with the Fraserville factory to Mr. Ward, the instructor, and if he did not substantiate the statement of Mr. Whitton on the quality of the cheese he would pay the balance due.

Mr. Whitton, before the Board closed, moved a vote of thanks to the president and directorate of the BOARD for the manner in which the meetings had been conducted during the year. It was seconded by Mr. Girvin, and was unanimously carried.

Mr. Young, in fitting terms, acknowledged the thanks and gave them present some very good and advice concerning matters appertaining to the Board.

A vote of thanks was moved by the secretary to the Ontario Bank for the use of the Board room, which was also carried unanimously.

This closed the Cheese Board for the season of 1905.

Refused to Let Husband Read Letter

Hamilton, Nov. 9.—Coroner Thompson has learned that Mrs. Philander Smithdeen, who, with her infant child, was murdered by her husband, received a letter on the day of the murder which she refused to allow to him. This enraged the man who killed his wife and himself. Smithdeen told his parents about the letter, which is now in possession of the family. It will be produced at the inquest to-morrow night.

Says 40,000 Ballots Were Improperly Cast

Hearst, Defeated by 3,485 Votes, Says He Really Won---Nearly 200 Boxes Missing---Workers Bruised and Bloody.

New York, Nov. 9.—Election day came to a close with a dramatic scene at the Hoffman House, where Wm. R. Hearst gathered his friends and advisers around him to begin the last contest of his political career. The returns which indicated the success of his Democratic opponent, George B. McClellan, As the late vote came in, showing McClellan only a few thousand ahead, and as it was noised that figures from some of the East Side districts were missing. Mr. Hearst said he believed he was being cheated out of a hard fought and honestly won victory, and announced his intention to make a contest in the courts. He sent out a call at once for the members of the Law Committee of the Municipal Ownership League, and soon they began to arrive, many of them in evening dress, they having been found in theatres or at social gatherings. At the hotel waiting for the lawyers were scores of Hearst voters, with stories of violence and outrage at polling places where they had gone to cast their ballots.

MEN BRUISED AND BLOODY.

Men were coming into the hotel constantly with bruised and bleeding faces. One man had his arm broken, and another's head was cut so badly that Mr. Hearst had him put to bed in the hotel. Reports were brought in telling of one man having had his eye gouged out and of a Hearst man whose finger had been chewed off in a polling place.

New York, Nov. 9.—This city yesterday elected George B. McClellan, the candidate for the Democratic party, Mayor by a plurality of 3,485 over William R. Hearst, the nominee of the Municipal Ownership League. Mr. Hearst refuses to admit McClellan's election, and will make a contest in the courts.

The new city government, exclusive of the Board of Aldermen, will be constituted as follows;

Mayor—George B. McClellan, Democrat.

Comptroller—Herman A. Metz, Democrat.

President of the Board of Aldermen—Patrick F. McGowan, Democrat.

Borough presidents — Manhattan, John F. Ahearn, Democrat; Bronx, Louis F. Haffen, Democrat; Brooklyn, Bird S. Coler, M.O.; Queens, Joseph Pownel, Republican and M.O., Ind. Democrat; Richmond, George Cromwell, Republican.

JEROME'S STATEMENT.

District Attorney Jerome issued this statement last night, on being assured of his election:

"I was certain that the people would not back up the attempt of the bosses to force me from office. Coming as it does straight from the hands of the people, in spite of the opposition of the bosses and machines, my election is peculiarly gratifying. The District Attorney's office will go on for four years more under my direction under this same system that has prevailed for four years.

"There is nothing more to be said, save that it was a test of strength between corrupt bosses on one side and an aroused public opinion on the other. There is no trifling with the people when they have been aroused, and my election is a lesson that the bosses will not soon forget.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 320 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 16,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $300,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $30,000.00 to $60,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividends and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.50 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three lifetimes, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Dixie Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.50 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 80 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1904 produced $18,281.50 per hour, every hour, day and night. Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $30,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, but there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock as they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

COULD CONTROL OF C.P.R. BE OBTAINED

Sensational Rumors That Americans Are After Our Great Highway

IS AN IMPOSSIBILTY

It Would Cost a Sweet Penny to get Hold of Stock Enough to Oust the Canadians

Montreal, November 9. — The stock market was full of rumors yesterday that the Hill-Morgan interests had captured the C. P. R.

A prominent New York wine merchant, for one, is estimated to have had in his possession at least 150,000 shares of Canadian Pacific carried in various offices.

If it were possible for Mr. Hill to secure control of Canadian Pacific he would thereby have come to dominate the railroad situation on this continent to a degree never before dreamed of.

In railroad circles, and more especially in Canadian Pacific circles, it is not believed to be possible for either Mr. Hill or any other American interest to secure control of Canadian Pacific. The reasons that underlie this belief may be outlined as follows:

In addition to about $101,000,000 of common stock there are outstanding over $77,000,000 of preferred stock, which may be increased to $80,000,000 at the will of the directors. It would be absolutely impossible to buy even a very small proportion of this preferred stock in the London market, which is the only market where it is traded in.

The Wall Street Journal points out that to buy control through the common stock it would be necessary to secure over $76,500,000 of the stock.

In the case of a stock as narrow as Canadian Pacific has always been it is extremely improbable that over 80 p.c. of the issue as it stood on July 1, 1904, and about 75 per cent. of the issue as it stands today could have been picked up in the market. Canadian Pacific stock has always been extremely well distributed, over 12,000 security holders having been on the books of the company at the last report.

In addition, it is doubtful that any syndicate of American bankers or railroad men would undertake to control the great Canadian railroad highway. Such a step would mean that immediately all the political, municipal and individual efforts of Canada and its people would be directed against the Canadian Pacific.

ANNUAL MEETING

Protestant Home Board Presented With Satisfactory Report

Our report of the annual meeting of the Protestant Home Board, held Tuesday afternoon, was unfortunately held over for lack of space. Rev. J. C. Davidson, Rector of St. John's church, opened the meeting by reading a suitable selection from the Holy Bible. He was followed by Rev. Dr. Crothers in prayer.

The following were in attendance: Miss Rogers, president; Miss Rogers, treasurer, Mrs. Miller, secretary; Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Donnelsmore, Mrs. J. B. McWilliams, Mrs. R. S. Davidson, Mrs. F. Hardley-Wilmot, Mrs. Munro, Mrs. Birdsall, Miss Nicholls, Rev. J. C. Davidson, Rev. Dr. Crothers, Rev. F. J. Scott, and Mr. J. B. McWilliams.

The secretary, Mrs. Miller read her report, which was of very similar character to that of last year. Taken as a whole, the affairs of this most commendable institution were reported as being satisfactory. A marked reference in the secretary's report, was made to the lamentable lack of interest taken by the ladies of Peterboro in this institution; it is to be hoped that, in the future, the ladies of Peterboro will awaken to the duties they morally owe to an institution kept up by gratuitous assistance, for assisting the aged in distress.

The treasurer's report was presented by Mrs. Roger. It showed total receipts amounting to $2,433.82, with an expenditure of $2,119.75, leaving a creditable balance on hand of $314.07. The report was adopted.

The question arose as to the action which would be taken with regard to the matter of the building of a House of Refuge, as had been ordered by Dr. Bruce Smith, Inspector of Public Charities. It was decided upon a motion by Mr. J. H. McWilliams, that upon the occasion of the meeting on December 1 of the County Council a joint meeting might be arranged between a committee representative of this Protestant Home, the clergy of the city, and committees from the City and County Councils.

His Lordship Bishop O'Connor will also be requested to send a representative to the meeting on behalf of the House of Providence.

A despatch from Brockville says: "The locals are loud in their praises of the treatment received at Petrolea."

* * * *

The T.A.S. have elected Mr. A. Quinlan, captain. They will play the Charlotte street Guild team at Riverside Park on Saturday.

* * * *

The Toronto Star says, — While the teams did not think Charles Wilkinson, of Brockville, was any good at all as referee, the crowd voted him the best of the season. He called all plays like a baseball umpire and everyone could follow the game intelligently.

* * * *

As stated in yesterday's issue, the management of the Brockville team notified the locals on Monday afternoon that the coming match was off. Since publication of this news The Times has ascertained that the Brockvillians, from their acquaintance with this city, have caught a common epidemic in civic government here, and changed their minds.

* * * *

The locals received word Tuesday night that the Brockville team wanted them to come on Saturday. The Brockville team will be strengthened by the addition of Mallory, Williams, Dobbie and other old stars Quebec Union players. The locals are confident of being able to defeat them.

The team practised last night in the rink. It is expected that "Bill" Crowley will be able to play on Saturday in spite of his injury.

Duplicating Siamese Twins

Palmers, November 9.—A tragical a woman named Rosa Simon has given birth to male twins united laterally from shoulder blade to the ribs. The twins have but one throat, two heads, three arms, three breasts. Each has a separate stomach and they have four well proportioned legs. The mother of the twins is doing well.

The Scourge of Consumption

Thousands Are Dying—If Tired Languid or Run Down Get Protection Before Too Late

No child, man or woman is safe from consumption unless their blood is pure, rich and nourishing.

Allow the blood to become thin, and immediately the whole system grows weak. The lungs are deprived of resisting power and the ever-present tubercular bacilli develops.

The most positive protection against consumption is Ferrozone, which restores the blood to full strength. Weak lungs are instantly strengthened. Worn-out tissues are rebuilt. New life is given to the lungs and all danger of consumption is destroyed.

Mrs. E. J. Richardson, Manotick, Ont., tells as follows of her enormous gain in health from Ferrozone: "For two years I was not well. I was thin and anaemic. Towards spring I fell into a condition of nervous exhaustion. A dead, tired-ness hung over me like a load of lead. Housework of any kind I simply couldn't do. A bad cough developed that worked me greatly for I thought it might be tubercular. When I first read of Ferrozone I was convinced it was good. I took it regularly for eight weeks and the change in my condition was wonderful. My cheeks filled out and became clear and rosy. I gained eight pounds and now am strong and vigorous as possible."

Ferrozone feeds, nourishes and tones up the body—it sends the thrill and vim of robust health from head to foot—makes you feel better at once. Won't you use Ferrozone? Price 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

TO KILL LOCAL OPTION.

The leading organ of the license holders of Ontario, whether hotelmen or grocers, according to the Toronto papers, gives advice, that by its unsound and short-sighted policy, would tend to foster the very spirit of public sentiment that this class of the mercantile community would naturally fight.

The Wine and Spirits Journal, of the current month, is quoted by several Toronto dailies as advising hotelmen to "sell liquor, (inferentially) any way to procure funds to fight any possible chance of local option.

This number of the Journal has not as yet reached its Peterboro patrons, but either the advance sheets or first numbers, seem to have been in the hands of some of the great Toronto dailies, such as the News and Globe.

If, as reported, the spirit of the journal's editorial advice is to sell liquor, legally or illegally, to procure funds for the very commendable purpose of defeating local option, this organ of the hotelmen, is doing its patrons incalculable harm.

We do not for one moment think that a paper gaining its trade and patronage largely for the discerning advertisers, would willingly and treasonously advise them in such a way that, as by following the advice, the hotelmen would fall into a trap of their own construction. Either the Toronto dailies are mistaken in their interpretation of the Journal's motives, or this advice has been inserted without being fully digested by those sitting in the editorial chairs.

In this city we have all, at least all whose memories extend back to those disgraceful years of drunkenness under the Scott Act, had sufficient experience of local option, to never want a recurrence of such a blight on Peterboro's prosperity and sobriety. We all remember, how, by the use of paid spies and sneaks, for a few fitful months, whilst the revivalist enthusiasm lasted, and the ultra temperance men put up their money to carry on "The good work" (?) that every man fearing his neighbors and relatives might be spies or agitators, the act was rigidly enforced. Our memory trembles with indignation and disgust, as the inevitable drunkenness and disregard for law and order, that followed as the ultra temperance men's enthusiasm and consequent contributions dwindled, is recalled.

We do not, for one moment advocate the abuse of such privileges as the law gives license holders, as by selling to Indians, minors, or drunkards, or selling out of legitimate hours. God forbid! But we do not, nor does any man holding a stake in Peterboro's prosperity, want to see any such local prohibition as the Scott or any similar half-dead temperance law; we do not want to see Peterboro's present strides towards prosperity and growth, fettered by any law that will disturb the present system of letting citizens get, in moderation what they want and will have, and thereby, as did the Scott Act, shut out our farmers from hotel yards and accommodation. Nor do we want to see such malicious and back biting personalities indulged in as were bred by our fortunately deceased local option law.

Should such advice as that quoted as coming from the Journal, and which we will not credit till we see it through, be acted on by the local hotelkeepers should they, whatever purpose the money gained thereby be used for, try to sell liquor now and who never they could, contrary to our present admirable liquor laws, they would not only be throwing down the gauntlet to advocates of prohibition, whether local or general, but would be playing directly into their hands, and helping their cause and the retrogradation of our good town of Peterboro.

To observe the license laws in their entirety, to sell to no minors or drunkards, to close at proper and legal hours; in short, to give the prohibitionists no cause for complaint, is the surest way to gain public sympathy and support, to help the city and forever to not only end any clamor, but any tangible reason, for local option.

NEW APPENDICITIS CURE.

Consul General Guenther, of Frankfort, Germany, is a government representative who construes his mission abroad in a wide and generous sense. No content with compiling dry and uninteresting trade statistics and sending to Washington dull reports of tariffs and inspections, Mr. Guenther branches out into novel fields of investigation. In a recent report to the Department of Commerce and Labor this enterprising Consul General tells his countrymen of a new treatment for appendicitis which is receiving attention from the highest German medical authorities.

The new remedy is called "collangol," and is a silver solution which is a powerful internal antiseptic. Until now the accepted remedy for appendicitis has been a prompt operation, and the sooner the operation after the diagnosis the better the chances of the patient for recovery. Of all that has been written on the treatment of appendicitis, discussion has generally revolved about the question of whether, in a given case, an operation must be performed to save the patient's life. The new trend of thought in regard to disease is encouraging to those who harbor a dread against what is considered a lurking terror to humanity. Appendicitis has never been properly understood; at least no effective measures have been discovered for warding it off. It is the foe of the well and the ill, the weak and the strong alike. It comes with terrible swiftness, at times, and no man or woman can say with certainty if on the morrow he or she will not be lying on the operating table under the surgeon's knife.

The new German treatment comes well authenticated. Within the last few years chemical means for rendering silver, quicksilver, and several other metals soluble in water have been discovered. It is a water solution of silver that is given the appendicitis patient, and according to the Munich Medical Weekly remarkable results have followed the new treatment. Within two or three days after treatment a decided improvement was noticeable in incipient cases. Except in two very severe cases, out of seventy-two cases treated all were cured without any surgical operation. Many great and good things have come out of Germany, but if a way is found to eliminate the terrors of appendicitis an anxious world will breathe a prayer of thanksgiving.

The November Bohemian.

Did it ever occur to you what would happen if all the ministers throughout the country went on a strike? Now suppose that you were in love with a nice little girl and wanted very much to get married, what would you do? How would you go about to find a solution for this difficult problem? If you want to know how it was done in one instance, read "The Mid-Century Ministerial Strike," by Frank M. Bicknell, in the November Bohemian.

But this is not the only good story in this number. It is full to the brim and running over with other stories just as bright and clever; write sandwiched in now and then is a poem well worth reading. You will especially enjoy reading "The Sorceress," by Edwin Carlile Litsey, and "The Wise Stork," by Leon Meade. "An Old Sweetheart," by May Irene Copinger, is a pretty little love tale of the Indian summer of the heart. But we don't want to tell you what is in The Bohemian. Just purchase a copy at the news stand and see what is in it for yourself. You won't regret it.

Scandal at Court

Kiel, November 7.—Fraulein Milewsky, former maid of the late Countess Amelia of Schleswig-Holstein, has brought suit for slander against Princess Henrietta of Schleswig-Holstein, aunt of the German Empress, because of a letter written by Duke Ernst Guenther of Schleswig-Holstein, brother-in-law of Emperor William, in which Fraulein Milewsky is alluded to as a "dangerous, cunning swindler." The case will be tried before the Court at Kiel. The Empress and a long list of princely personage will be asked to testify.

Receipts Still in Front

Ottawa, November 7.—Receipts from all sources in Canada still keep in front of expenditure. For the four months of the present fiscal year ending October 31, the excess of revenue over expenditure amounted to $3,927,761, and for the month of October only, the surplus was $1,541,392.

Over ordinary and capital expenditure combined, and surplus for the four months was $3,606,142. Receipts show a gain of $1,205,216, when compared with the first quarter of the previous fiscal year. The increase in expenditure for the same period was $2,227,222.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces (excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7 50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 0x1500 feet. The fee for recording a claim is $5

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to another for each of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The leases shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish."

A TANGLED WEB

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

and patronized, was worst of all.

Already society had begun to talk of Clifford Marsden being about to marry some country nobody; but as yet there was no certainty in the report, and, deep in her heart, Mrs. Ruthven swore the marriage should never take place.

It was part of her scheme to prevent Eversleigh from going into strange hands, even for a season. She was determined to rule there herself. Captain Shirley's visit was a stimulating tonic; but she was not too confidential with her right-hand man. She listened to his accounts of Marsden's devotion to Nora, the steadiness and sobriety of his life in consequence, of the early date fixed for their marriage, the rumors that he intended to settle all he possibly could upon his bride elect, etc., etc., to all of which Mrs. Ruthven listened almost in silence, with down cast eyes, inscrutable smile.

In vain, Shirley tried to draw some observations from her, which might indicate in what direction the current of her feelings was setting. He could not even make up his mind if she had resolved to renounce Marsden. The only sentence which escaped her lips on the subject was when Shirley reiterated the report that the marriage was to take place immediately; then Mrs. Ruthven said, languidly:

"If it does not take place soon it will probably not take place at all."

"May I ask your reason for saying so?"

"Well, chiefly because Mr. Marsden is not a man of very fixed purpose—and—something may occur to change his views. Talking of change, did I tell you that I have got rid of that place at Twickenham? It seems that a rich stock-broker took a violent fancy to it, and he has given me a thousand pounds for my bargain."

"Did you tire of it so soon?" asked Shirley, in surprise.

"Yes; sickness and seclusion have wrought a radical change in me. I now feel I must be in London and in the complete country, alternately."

"I am afraid, Mrs. Ruthven, that I have unconsciously done something, or left undone something, that has induced you to withdraw the confidence you once placed in me," said Shirley, with a wounded air, looking straight into her eyes.

"Then you are mistaken; I give you exactly the same amount of confidence I always did—a good deal, but by no means all. You have been useful to me, and I have been useful to you. I am still disposed to be your friend, but do not suppose you have the smallest power to injure me. The day is long gone by for that."

"Injured you! Do you suppose that such an idea ever crossed my brain? My inclination is only to be your most devoted servant—more, if you would accept me!"

Mrs. Ruthven laughed softly.

"I quite believe you," she said; "still—"

"You have never been quite the same since you were robbed of your rubies," he interrupted. "You seem to have grown doubtful of every one."

"I am," she exclaimed with sudden fire. "Utterly, completely distrustful; and you mutter feeble complaints because I will not tell you the vague hope I have of recovering them. Leave that alone; I may confide even that to you one day, but never if I find you presuming to try discovery on your own account. I alone have a slight clew, and I will have no one meddle."

Shirley looked at her so completely startled and surprised that she laughed a strange, almost hysterical, laugh.

"You must not excite yourself," he exclaimed; "you might bring on another relapse."

"That would never do," she returned in an altered voice. "I want to be well soon; I have a good deal to do. Tell me, Shirley," she went on, "why did you not make love to Nora L'Estrange? She would have been a suitable wife for you."

"I was quite willing to do so, but somehow it was impossible. I could never get beyond the weather, or the last new waltz, with her."

"What is there different in her from other women?" she asked scornfully; "you have been tolerably successful with other women."

"I don't know. Miss L'Estrange is frank and pleasant, and all that sort of thing, but she is the most inaccessible woman I ever came across."

"Shirley, you are a fool! A young creature fresh from the school-room and educational trust, is the easiest game of all! Man, have you so little experience as not to know you can always count on at least one traitor within the trenches?"

"Perhaps the game was not sufficiently exciting; anyhow, Winton did not give a fellow much chance."

"Winton! yes, that is a man I should enjoy mortifying. I think he was fond of Nora L'Estrange, and I suspect she liked him. But who would refuse Marsden of Eversleigh?"

"He is not so great a catch."

"Listen to me," cried Mrs. Ruthven, not heeding him. "I want to go to London—let me see—I think I could bear the journey next week. I want you to take rooms for me at the Alexandria Hotel; I shall keep them for awhile. I like this place, and can go up to town as I like. You must secure good rooms, and have everything made comfortable and warm—above all things, warm."

Captain Shirley took her directions with profound attention, and then their talk flowed in ordinary channels. Mrs. Ruthven was quiet, and in rather a more cheerful mood; she was more civil and friendly than usual. Yet Shirley left her with an odd impression that there was danger in the air.

The short absence which Marsden contemplated, unavoidably extended itself to nearly a week.

[illegible] which would observing how been a welcome period of repose to Nora, was robbed of its restfulness by her brooding over her step-mother's communication. It was like fighting the air, this constant routing of phantom doubts, which dispersed only to reassemble in palpable battalions, while the question, did Marsden knowingly deceive her? remained unsolved. She determined to ask him. She would not again permit herself to be blinded with some half truth. She was more uneasy than she would admit; she could not apply herself to anything, and she even incurred a gentle rebuke from her step-mother, for her indecision respecting some of her preparations, which Mrs. L'Estrange complained caused unnecessary delay.

The day before Marsden rejoined them, the post brought Mrs. L'Estrange two letters of some importance to this true history. The first she opened was from Winton. It was written in a depressed though friendly tone, and gave some particulars respecting his uncle's death, and the amount of property bequeathed by deceased. There was, he said, a good deal of business to be settled. His uncle's only daughter was dead, but he found she had left a son in indifferent circumstances; and Winton went on to say, that he felt it his duty to divide the bequest with this boy, whose guardian he would undertake to be; finally he expected to be in town after Christmas, when he would have the pleasure of calling on Mrs. L'Estrange.

A New Japanese Court

London, November 7.—The financial editor of The Times says that, although many persons persist in believing that the Japanese conversion issue is imminent, such is not the case. "No arrangements have yet been made for the loan, but the situation is such that if the Russian loan recently negotiated is suspended two or three months the way will probably be clear for a Japanese issue, though it does not necessarily follow that it will be made at once."

Mr. Aylesworth's Declaration

Toronto, Nov. 8.—An Ottawa special says that Hon. W. S. Fielding resents Mr. Aylesworth's reference to pensions to ex-Ministers, and will not go to North York to support him. It is alleged that Mr. Aylesworth was consulted and agreed to the increases and indemnities before they were brought up in the house.

Gold Bug Stock

Has been withdrawn from the market by the Company. There is none of it for sale except a small block on which I have an option. This stock I am placing at 25 cents per share. 100 shares will cost you $25.00. In my judgment it will sell for 60 cents per share on the open market inside of 90 days. The papers of Oregon say that the rich find of ore in the Gold Bug mine is the greatest sensation known in the State in many months. Hon. George A. Newman, Assistant adjutant General of Iowa, has just been to Sumpter, visited the Gold Bug, bought heavily of the stock, and on his return tells me it has the finest ore and is the best looking property he saw any place in the West.

I give Bank references, the very best. I sell every share of this stock on honor. If you want 100 shares send $25.00 to the Mechanics' Savings Bank, Des Moines, telling them to turn the money over to me when I deliver the stock, to be sent to you. If you want 1,000 shares send $250. Everything about the Gold Bug is legitimate. It is now one of the richest mines of the North-West. We think that the first dividends will be paid in January or February, 1906, and you will see this stock selling at $1.00 per share on the open market in less than one year. Five strong veins, much of the ore literally sprinkled with free gold. Let me tell you about it more in detail. Address,

The richest oil region in the world. Quality the finest ever discovered in the South or West. An opportunity for the investing public to get in on the ground floor of a proposition that will bear the strictest investigation.

Calcasieu parish and more especially lands north-west of Lake Charles, Louisiana, U.S.A. are considered by Oil Experts and Geologists to be the seat of primary deposits of the GREATEST OIL BEARING LANDS IN THE WORLD.

Derricks are springing up as if by magic and drills working day and night are sinking deeper and deeper into the oil beds buried in MOTHER EARTH.

There are wells in this parish that are producing from 2,000 to 50,000 barrels a day, and the price is now 65 cents a barrel.

Capital Stock and Holdings

The Union Oil and Sulphur Company, of Sioux Falls, S. D., U. S. A., was organized on the 16th of June, 1903, with a capital stock of $750,000.00, represented by an equal number of shares of the par value each of $1.00; it owns in fee simple 240 acres, and has 480 acres leased, making it one of the strongest companies in the United States.

Location of Property

It lies along side the Kansas City Southern Railroad, is only one mile from the Houstan River, and is within three miles of the GREAT SULPHUR MINE.

To Further Develop the Field

This company are now offering to the public some of their stock at the low price of Forty (40) cents a share, this is ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE STOCK, this company is absolutely out of DEBT, and all subscriptions go towards the development of the property.

FOREST AND STREAM PUB. CO.
346 Broadway, New York.

I offer, subject to prior sale, 50,000 shares of the Capital Stock of The

Oxarna Gold Mining Company

at the "Ground Floor" price of TEN CENTS A SHARE, (none has been offered for less), par value $1 00, fully paid and non-assessab e.

The OXARNA GOLD MINING COMPANY is capitalized at $1,000,000.00, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1.00 each. The Oxarna Stock was originally all in the treasury, no preferred or promotion stock having been issued by this Company, and up to the present time only 353,500 shares of their stock have been issued.

The OXARNA COMPANY own by United States Patent and Deed, 142 Acres of highly mineralized land in the Famous Thunder and Custer Mountain, Idaho districts, and over $12,000,000.00 net has been realized by the Mines in our immediate vicinity. One of the Mines contiguous to our property on the north has produced $1,000,000.00 and five veins of this rich ore parallel on one of our claims, and by about 2,000 feet of shafts, tunnels drifts and upraises the OXARNA COMPANY have uncovered over $3,000,000.00 worth of ore, and they have a large amount of ore in the ore bine and on the dump that averages over $57.00 a ton, and they expect to be in position to Mill not less than 100 tons of ore every day in a very short time, but if they only Mill 30 tons a day in less than one year they can pay 100 per cent. on the par value of the stock out standing in dividends, for they expect to have less than 400,000 shares of the stock on the market when they are fully financed.

The Oxarna Company have purchased a Mill all fully equipped and ready for business, that originally cost about $15,000.00, and they owe a balance of $5,000.00 on this Mill that will be due in three months, and in order to raise this amount quickly I am privileged to make this most liberal offer, for the stock is easily worth par today, for the time is rapidly approaching when the Company will be on a paying basis and the stock will become immensely remunerative in the near future.

Subject to prior sales I offer the above allotment on the following terms: 4 per cent. discount will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order, or subscriptions will be accepted on the installment plan, 1-4 of the amount with the order and a like amount in 30, 60 and 90 days. Make all orders payable to the undersigned or remit through the NATIONAL BANK of Delphos, and they will forward stock subject to your order.

Personally I advise you to get all of this stock that you can pay for during the next three months, for it is an exceedingly good investment. For further particulars call on or address,

EXQUISITE COMPLEXION

Quickly Acquired if the System is Regulated by Dr. Hamilton's Pills

Their power of Dr. Hamilton's Pills over the complexion is marvellous. As if by magic all blemishes, humors and impies disappear. A clear, ruddy glow is quickly manifest on the cheeks, and looks that delight the eye come to stay. It is by purifying and enriching the blood, and thereby building up the constitution, that Dr. Hamilton's Pills accomplish so much in a short time.

"I can highly recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills for the complexion, writes Miss E. M. Porter, of Clear View, Io. Before using this medicine I had a very pallid, murky complexion, and there was no redness or color in my cheeks. But Dr. Hamilton's Pills changed this and my looks have been much improved."

In every case of dull, sallow complexion, wherever, the skin is blotchy and rough, Dr. Hamilton Pills quickly prove their merit. You'll look better, feel vastly improved by relying on this great medicine, which is in stock in about. Price 25c per box, or five boxes for $1, at all dealers, or by mail, from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

New York Excursion.

The date, December 1st. New York Excursion, via Lehigh Valley Railroad. Tickets only $9.00 from Suspension Bridge, Niagara Falls, to New York and return. Tickets good 10 days. Good on all express trains except Black Diamond Express. For further particulars call on or address Robt. S. Lewis, Canadian Passenger Agent, 10 King Street East, Toronto.

Mr. Eastwood Home Again

Mr. Vin. Eastwood has returned from his annual hunt at Ketchenum Lake. By last Monday morning the party had been successful in killing nine deer. Although going in bad weather they had only hunted three days. The remainder of the party will return on the 14th.

Death in Nicholls Hospital

The death occurred at Nicholls Hospital yesterday morning of Sarah Hunter, daughter of Mr. Robert Hunter, and wife of Mr. William Head, jr., lot 13, concession 3, North Monaghan. The deceased, who was 26 years of age, is survived by a husband and three children. She had been ill for some time with appendicitis. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon, at two o'clock, to Little Lake cemetery.

Choral Society Practice

The Peterboro Choral Society had another successful practice last another successful practice Tuesday night. There was a good attendance of the soprano, tenor and contralto sections, but the basses were lamentably weak. Two new part songs were taken up—Dr. Garrett's "Good Night Farewell," and Pinsuti's "Tell Me, Flora." The work of the Society is developing increased interest and enthusiasm.

Mr. W. Queen's New Appointment

It was rumored yesterday that Mr. W. Quinn, lately employed by the Crown Land's Department, Toronto, as Woodranger, has been appointed superintendent of the Trent Dredge, now engaged in deepening the Otonabee, below Hunter street bridge.

Mr. Quinn, in his new position, will probably learn along the work and effect great improvements in our local navigation.

Local Branch of Canal to Close

The section of the Trent Canal between Lakefield and Peterboro will be closed for the season on Monday next, Nov. 13th. The traffic on the canal during the present season has been exceedingly heavy, and has continued right up to the present time. The date of closing was, owing to Mr. McCallum's happy forethought, postponed from that which was originally intended in order to allow of the continuance of the late fall traffic.

A MARSH MEASURE

Ald. Begley's Motion to Keep All Dogs Chained Up

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Alderman Begley is now out with a motion that will not prove acceptable to a large number of our citizens and that seems, from every point of view to be a harsh injustice.

The alderman may know what his motives are for fathering such a motion at this particular time of year: it is not for me to impute any motives.

He claims as his reason for wanting to keep all dogs off the streets that they destroy lawns and merchants' goods. I grant that a few lawns may be slightly injured; as regards the merchants' goods, they should not leave goods that will be sold to customers where dogs can get at them. It is very easy to keep dogs out of the shops.

For every dollar's worth of lawn that is injured by dogs, hundreds of dog owners get hundred of dollars' worth of pleasure and household protection. Who would pay 50c. to let even keep a dog that must pine for months tethered by a chain. The very idea of such inhumanity and cruelty is revolting to the mind of any decent man or woman. Perhaps the city father would like an amendment tacked to his act, by which dogs must be kept for six months in a bird cage.

It seems to me that it is, or should be, ultra vires for the city to collect a tax from a dog owner and then forbid him to use the dog as is customary and human.

Does the alderman look eagerly forward, his eyes glistening with anticipated pleasure, to the time when he can walk along the streets and, from back yards, hear the piteous cries from dogs tied up, and possibly without water in hot weather? Does he hail with joy the glorious opportunity that burglars will have when citizens get rid of these faithful guardians of the household? Does he long to see little children, whilst out getting fresh air, left at the mercy of such gentry, whilst their four-footed defender is left tied and whining in the woodshed? Does he gloat over his coming delight when men, who take their pets along on walks or drives, must go alone?

All the harm that the dogs do to lawns or elsewhere is fully compensated for by the pleasure and protection given by man's most faithful friend, who shows his love to his dog by paying the city license for keeping him.

Yours truly,
DOG OWNER.

THE YANKEE CONSUL

New Opera House to Open With One of Best Plays on the American Stage

All lovers of the drama and opera in this city, and they are many, will hail with delight the news, as foretold in The Times, that the fine new opera house will officially be opened on November 15th, with the laughable and catchy sparkling musical comedy "The Yankee Consul."

Too much praise cannot be extended to Mr. Rupert Bradburn for the way in which he has invariably kept faith with Peterboro's theater-goers, and also for the manner in which he and his assistants have pushed the fine new home of the drama to completion.

It is now up to the public of this city, to recognize that they appreciate this opportunity of hearing a first-class company and support the best companies, now on the road, by turning out en masse at the opening night.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured.

with Local Applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials free.

Albany Club Entertains Col. Everest

Col. J. G. Everest, General Travelling Passenger Agent of the vast Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway system was in the city last night. The Colonel whose headquarters are in Chicago, is one of the most widely known railway magnates of the United States. His genial features are familiar to all the leading men of the western metropolis, particularly those who transact business on Adams and Washington streets. Col. Everest last night, was a guest of the Albany Club, and was voted by the members of this leading social club as a jolly good fellow.

Mr. Pendash Interviews Vice-Royalty

Mr. Johnston Pendash, son of Chief Pendash, of the Mississagua Indians, Bigwatha, has just returned from Ottawa. His object in making the trip to the capital, was to present to the Indian Department some claims which the tribe had to make. Mr. Pendash says that in this, he was successful, and that his trip was productive of good results. He had a number of interviews with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the officials in the Indian Department, to whom he presented his claims, which will receive prompt and probable favorable attention.

Disturbances in Vienna

New York, November 9. — A special despatch to The Sun from Vienna states that the agitation for universal suffrage continues to cause anxiety to the Government. There was a disturbance at the university today between rival students, and several demonstrations were made yesterday, and rioting was renewed. At Prague the Socialists barricaded suburban streets and fired on the soldiers, who stormed the defenses and captured them. There were many casualties. It is said that the Socialists have distributed a thousand revolvers among their adherents. The Government has sent 2,500 additional troops consist in preserving order.

GETS A DEER AT LAST

Mr. Thos. Brown, a Springville Batchelor Now Has a Deer

A tame live deer was in this city yesterday. The deer was not full grown, being only a beautiful soft-eyed and timid fawn, standing scarcely more than two and a half feet in height, was quartered over night in the stables of the Munro House.

The pretty little animal, which has now become quite tame, and comes at the call of those it knows, to eat bread or tobacco from one's hand, was caught last spring by Mr. J. W. Hales of Apsley, Burleigh township, upon his farm. It was at that time scarcely over 18 inches in height. It rapidly grew tame, and was allowed perfect liberty about the premises. Mr. Hales drove down Tuesday from his home and intends presenting the animal to Mr. Thomas Brown of Springville.

He states that upon the whole the hunting parties located in his vicinity have been enjoying good luck, and very considerable success, notwithstanding the somewhat inclement state of the weather. Complaints a few days ago were quite numerous with regard to the loss of dogs, but they have since, with very few exceptions, been recovered.

Mr. Brown's friends in Springville are now congratulating him upon having a real live "deer" of his own, and trust he may soon replace it by a really truly "Dear."

BOYS BRIGADE

All Saint's Church Organizes Two Companies, Under Encouraging Auspices

A meeting was held in All Saints' Sunday school room, Tuesday evening, whereat a Boys Brigade was organized.

It is expected that at least two companies will be formed, enough joining last night to make that number. The officers elected were;

Warden—Rev. W. Major.

Sub-Warden and drill instructor—Quartermaster Sergt. J. W. Edwards.

Capt.—Geo. Hillier.
1st Lieut.—Harry Flowers.
2nd Lieut.—H. Chambers.
Col. Sergt.—Robt. Pilling.
1st Sergt.—Roy Pilling.
2nd Sergt.—Roy Cranfield.
3rd Sergt.—Jack Wise.

The objects in the organization of the Brigade are those of teaching sobriety, piety and reverence.

The enthusiasm exhibited by all present was most encouraging, as this church had a similar organization once before, but which became moribund. The Brigade is open to all boys over 12 years of age.

A False Report

Yesterday very sensational reports were generally current everywhere throughout the city, to the effect that a terrible fatality had occurred at Stony Creek, which connects Sucker and Ketchenum lakes. The rumors said that Mr. Thos. Parker, the well known bicycle repair man and gunsmith, corner of Queen and Hunter streets, had been shot whilst out hunting at Stony Creek. The reports went the limit, even giving particulars as to time, place and full circumstances connected with the alleged fatality. It was even currently reported that Mr. Parker's father-in-law had gone to bring home the body. As The Times makes a point of getting truth first and sensation only when circumstances warrant, we kept the Buckhorn telegraph wires hot last night, and were informed that there is no truth in what would have been a calamity regretted by a very large portion of the community, with whom Mr. Parker was a general favorite. We trust that Mr. Parker may return with the lawful weight of venison and handle many a gun before so dreadful an accident comes his way.

DON'T DOSE THE STOMACH

Hyomei Cures Catarrh by Breathing Aromatic Healing Air.

You cannot afford to risk permanent loss of health by taking strong drugs into the stomach in the vain hope of curing catarrh of the nose and throat. The only true way of curing catarrhal troubles is by the use of Hyomei, which is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit.

Hyomei is not a secret remedy, and its formula is given to all reputable physicians. Its base is the famous eucalyptus oil. This is combined with other healing, aromatic gums and balsams, so that when using Hyomei, the air you breathe is filled with germ-killing, health-giving, curative powers. It kills all catarrhal germs and restores the mucous membrance of the nose, throat and lungs to a perfectly healthy condition.

The complete Hyomei outfit, consisting of a neat pocket inhaler, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei, costs but $1.00, and extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents, making it the most economical method of curing catarrh, as well as the most reliable.

If you cannot obtain Hyomei of your dealer, it will be forwarded by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price. Write today for consultation blank that will entitle you to services of our medical department without charge. The R. T. Booth Company, Hyomei Building, Ithaca, N. Y.

EXQUISITE COMPLEXION

Quickly Acquired if the System is Regulated by Dr. Hamilton's Pills

The power of Dr. Hamilton's Pills over the complexion is marvellous. As if by magic all blemishes, humors and impbs disappear. A clear, ruddy glow is quickly manifest on the cheeks, and looks that delight the eye come to stay. It is by purifying and enriching the blood, and thereby building up the constitution, that Dr. Hamilton's Pills accomplish so much in a short time.

"I can highly recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills for the complexion, writes Miss E. M. Porter, of Clear View, Ia. Before using this medicine I had a very pallid, murky complexion, and there was no redness or color in my cheeks. But Dr. Hamilton's Pills changed this and my looks have been much improved."

In every case of dull, sallow complexion, wherever, the skin is blotchy and rough, Dr. Hamilton Pills quickly prove their merit. You'll look better, feel vastly improved by relying on this great medicine, which is prompt in effect. Price 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1, at all dealers, or by mail, from N. C. Mr. Eastwood Home Again

Mr. Vin. Eastwood has returned from his annual hunt at Ketchebeum Lake. By last Monday morning the party had been successful in killing [illegible] deer, but after that the weather they had only hunted three days. The remainder of the party will return on the 14th.

Death in Nicholls Hospital

The death occurred at Nicholls Hospital yesterday morning of Sarah Hunter, daughter of Mr. Robert Hunter, and wife of Mr. William Head, jr., lot 13, concession 3, North Monaghan. The deceased, who was 25 years of age, is survived by a husband and three children. She had been ill for some time with appendicitis. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon, at two o'clock, to Little Lake cemetery.

Choral Society Practice

The Peterboro Choral Society had another successful practice last night. There was a good attendance of the soprano, tenor and contralto sections, but the basses were numerically weak. Two new part songs were taken up—Dr. Garret's "Good Night Farewell," and Pinsuti's "Tell Me, Fidele." The work of the Society is developing increased interest and enthusiasm.

Mr. W. Quinn's New Appointment

It was rumored yesterday that Mr. W. Quinn, lately employed by the Crown Land's Department, Toronto, as Woodranger, has been appointed Superintendent of the Trent Dredge, now engaged in deepening the Otonabee, below Hunter street bridge.

Mr. Quinn, in his new position, will probably hurry along the work and effect great improvements in our local navigation.

Local Branch of Canal to Close

The section of the Trent Canal between Lakefield and Peterboro will be closed for the season on Monday next, Nov. 13th. The traffic on the canal during the present season has been exceedingly heavy, and has continued right up to the present time. The date of closing was, owing to Mr. McCullam's happy forethought, postponed from that which was originally intended in order to allow of the continuance of the late fall traffic.

A HARSH MEASURE

Ald. Begley's Motion to Keep All Dogs Chained Up

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Alderman Begley is now out with a motion that will not prove acceptable to a large number of our citizens and that seems, from every point of view to be a harsh injustice.

The alderman may know what his motives are for fathering such a motion at this particular time of year: it is not for me to impute any motives.

He claims as his reason for wanting to keep all dogs off the streets that they destroy lawns and merchants' goods. I grant that a few lawns may be slightly injured; as regards the merchants' goods, they should not leave goods that will be sold to customers where dogs can get at them. It is very easy to keep dogs out of the shops.

For every dollar's worth of lawn that is injured by dogs, hundreds of dog owners get hundred of dollars' worth of pleasure and household protection that would not be theirs if even keep a dog that must pine for months tethered by a chain. The very idea of such inhumanity and cruelty is revolting to the mind of any decent man or woman. Perhaps the city father would like an amendment tacked to his act, by which dogs must be kept for six months in a tird cage.

It seems to me that it is, or should be, ultra vires for the city to collect a tax from a dog owner and then forbid him to use the dog as is customary and human.

Does the alderman look eagerly forward, his eyes glistening with anticipated pleasure, to the time when he can walk along the streets and, from back yards, hear the piteous cries from dogs tied up, and possibly without water in hot weather? Does he hail with joy the glorious opportunity that burglars will have when citizens get rid of these faithful guardians of the household? Does he long to see little children, whilst out getting fresh air, left at the mercy of such gentry, whilst their four-footed defender is left tied and whining in the woodshed? Does he gloat over his coming delight when men, who take their pets along on walks or drives, must go alone?

All the harm that the dogs do to lawns or elsewhere is fully compensated for by the pleasure and protection given by man's most faithful friend, who shows his love to his dog by paying the city license for keeping him.

Yours truly,
DOG OWNER.

THE YANKEE CONSUL

New Opera House to Open With One of Best Plays on the American Stage

All lovers of the drama and opera in this city, and they are many, will hail with delight the news, as foretold in The Times, that the fine new opera house will officially be opened on November 15th, with the laughable and catchy sparkling musical comedy "The Yankee Consul."

Too much praise cannot be extended to Mr. Rupert Bradburn for the way in which he has invariably kept faith with Peterboro's theater-goers, and also for the manner in which he and his assistants have pushed the fine new home of the drama to completion.

It is now us to the public of this city, to recognize that they appreciate this opportunity of hearing a first-class company, by one of the best companies, now on the road, by turning out en masse at the opening night.

Albany Club Entertains Col. Everest

Col. J. G. Everest, General Travelling Passenger Agent of the vast Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway system was in the city last night. The Detroit Free Press says of him: He is in Chicago, is one of the most widely known railway magnates of the United States. His genial features are familiar to all the leading men of the western metropolis, particularly those who transact business on Adams and Washington streets. Col. Everest last night, was a guest of the Albany Club, and was voted by the members of this leading social club as a jolly good fellow.

Mr. Pandash Interviews Vice-Royalty

Mr. Johnston Pandash, son of Chief Pandash, of the Mississagua Indians, Blaystin, has just returned from Ottawa. His object in making the trip to the capital, was to present to the Indian Department some claims which the tribe had to make. Mr. Pandash says that in this, he was successful, and that his trip was productive of good results. He had a number of interviews with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the officials in the Indian Department, to whom he presented his claims, which will receive prompt and probable favorable attention.

Disturbances in Vienna

New York, November 9. — A special despatch to The Sun from Vienna states that the agitation for universal suffrage continues to cause anxiety to the Government. There was a disturbance at the university here between rival students, and several demonstrations were made yesterday, and rioting was renewed. At Prague the Socialists barricaded suburban streets and fired on the soldiers, who stormed the defences and captured them. There were many casualties. It is said that the Socialists have distributed a thousand revolvers among their adherents. The Government has sent 2,500 additional troops to assist in preserving order.

GETS A DEER AT LAST

Mr. Thos. Brown, a Springville Butchcher Now Has a Deer

A very live deer was in this city yesterday. The deer was not full grown, being only a beautiful soft-eyed and timid fawn, standing scarcely more than two and a half feet in height, was quartered over night in the stables of the Munro House.

The pretty little animal, which has now become quite tame, and comes at the call of those it knows, to eat bread or tobacco from one's hand, was caught last spring by Mr. J. W. Hales of Apsley, Burleigh township, upon his farm. It was at that time scarcely over 18 inches in height. It rapidly grew tame, and was allowed perfect liberty about the premises. Mr. Hales drove down Tuesday from his home and intends presenting the animal to Mr. Thomas Brown of Springville.

He states that upon the whole the hunting parties located in his vicinity have been enjoying good luck, and very considerable success, notwithstanding the somewhat inclement state of the weather. Congratulate a few days ago were quite numerous with regard to the loss of dogs, but they have since, with very few exceptions, been recovered.

Mr. Brown's friends in Springville, are now congratulating him upon having a real live "deer" of his own, and trust he may soon replace it by a really truly "Dear."

BOYS BRIGADE

All Saint's Church Organizes Two Companies, Under Encouraging Auspices

A meeting was held in All Saints' Sunday school room, Tuesday evening, whereat a Boys Brigade was organized.

It is expected that at least two companies will be formed, enough joining last night to make that number. The officers elected were;

Warden—Rev. W. Major.

Sub-Warden and drill instructor—Quartermaster Sergt. J. W. Edwards.

Capt.—Geo. Hillier.
1st Lieut.—Harry Flowers.
2nd Lieut.—H. Chambers.
Col. Sergt.—Robt. Pilling.
1st Sergt.—Roy Pilling.
2nd Sergt.—Roy Cranfield.
3rd Sergt.—Jack Wise.

The objects in the organization of the brigade are those of teaching sobriety, piety and reverence.

The enthusiasm exhibited by all present was most encouraging, as the church had a similar organization once before, but which became moribund. The Brigade is open to all boys over 12 years of age.

A False Report

Yesterday very sensational reports were generally current everywhere throughout the city, to the effect that a terrible fatality had occurred at Stony Creek, which connects Sucker and Ketcheeum lakes. The rumors said that Mr. Thos. Parker, the well known bicycle repair man and gunsmith, corner of Queen and Hunter streets, had been shot whilst out hunting at Stony Creek. The reports went the limit, even giving particulars as to time, place and full circumstances connected with the alleged fatality. It was even currently reported that Mr. Parker's father-in-law had gone to bring home the body. As The Times makes a point of getting truth first and sensation only when circumstances warrant, we kept the Buckhorn telephone wires hot last night, and were informed that there is no truth in what would have been a calamity suffered by a very large portion of the community, with whom Mr. Parker was a general favorite. We trust that Mr. Parker may return with his lawful weight of venison and hands many a gun before so dreadful an accident comes his way.

Hyomei Cures Catarrh by Breathing Aromatic Healing Air.

You cannot afford to risk permanent loss of health by taking strong drugs into the stomach in the vain hope of curing catarrh of the nose and throat. The only true way of curing catarrhal troubles is by the use of Hyomei, which is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit.

Hyomei is not a secret remedy, and its formula is given to all reputable physicians. Its base is the famous eucalyptus oil. This is combined with other healing, aromatic gums and balsams, so that when using Hyomei, the air you breathe is filled with germ-killing, health-giving, curative powers. It kills all catarrhal germs and restores the mucous membrance of the nose, throat and lungs to a perfectly healthy condition.

The complete Hyomei outfit, consisting of a neat pocket inhaler, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei, costs but $1.00, and extra bottles can be obtained for 50 cents, making it the most economical method of curing catarrh, as well as the most reliable.

If you cannot obtain Hyomei of your dealer, it will be forwarded by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price. Write today for consultation blank that will entitle you to services of our medical department without charge. The R. T. Booth Company, Hyomei Building, Ithaca, N. Y.

CHANDOS CHEESE NOT AFFECTED

Strong Letter From Dr. Bell, of Apsley

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM

No Milk Supplied From Infected Homes

To the Editor of The Times:

Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me to explain one statement in your article last week in regard to the cheese in Glenelda factory.

When I first discovered the existence of small-pox in Chandos township, I placed the cheese on hand in above named factory in quarantine as from information received I believed it had been made from infected milk. It has remained in quarantine since, as owing to the amount of work entailed in trying to arrest the spread of the disease already scattered over a large part of the township, neither I or the board had time to give it our attention and we also awaited the Provincial Inspector for advice.

At a meeting on Saturday a committee composed of two members of the Board, one of our inspectors were appointed to go up on Monday and make a careful investigation into all facts and report to Board on Monday night. The committee and myself met the officers of the factory at Purdys Mills, they had previously obtained interviews with a number of the people, and I find full reports from my inspector who has had charge of the infected district. The officers of the factory then gave us the following declaration signed in our presence. In view of the evidence the Board felt they had no right to retain the cheese, an opinion in which I agreed, and I therefore released it.

Glenelda Cheese Factory, November 8th, 1905.

We the undersigned, solemnly affirm that the statement hereafter made are the truth:

1. That Andrew Post has not sent any milk this season to the above named factory.

2. That Aaron Post has not sent any milk since the 3rd week in August to the factory.

3. That we have examined into the cases of D. Ferril and E. Forbes and find them willing to make affidavit that no infected persons had anything to do with the milk sent to factory.

4. We firmly believe that the said cheese is free from any infection and is pure, and we would have no hesitation to use the said cheese by our families, and that we are willing to make oath to above statements.

(Signed)

P. V. GRUNTER, President.
LEONARD WARD, Cheesemaker.
JOHN SIMPSON, Milk Drawer.

I may add the factory books were placed at our disposal, and that D. Ferrel mentioned above, was from home until after I had closed factory, and Forbes the same. Otherwise your report is correct. There has been about 40 cases. All are well in hand, infected district shut tight and we have six inspectors posted on the roads to enforce quarantine.

I am yours, etc.,
ALEX. BELL, M.D., M.H.O.,
Apsley, Nov. 8th, 1905.

THE YANKEE CONSUL

Peterboro the First City Under 30,000 People to See This Play

Mr. W. D. Nealand, business manager of "The Yankee Consul" Company, which opens a new opera house here next Wednesday, was in the city yesterday, and gave The Times a friendly call. Mr. Nealand is a knocker from the word "Go," and is one of the most experienced theatrical men now on the road.

He stated that in the company that Mr. Bradburn has been successful in securing for his opening night, there are 74 members.

Mr. Nealand spoke most enthusiastically regarding the coming play, and especially of the beauty chorus. In this chorus 51 beautiful young ladies, most artistically arrayed, appear and universally call forth wild applause. The costumes used in this play are specially designed and of the finest material. The beauty chorus change costumes three times during their act.

The company, which plays in Kingston the preceding night, travel in a special train, which carries two huge cars of special scenery.

When the "Yankee Consul" combination arrives in a city where they play, the first order given, at their theater is, "Remove everything belonging to the house, both scenes and property, off the stage;" then they do the rest.

Peterboro is the first town or city under 30,000 population that this splendid play has been presented in.

A special feature of the company is that they carry a specially augmented orchestra with them.

We predict that a crowded audience will greatly enjoy the "Yankee Consul" next Wednesday.

Lahiine Found Guilty

St. John's Que., Nov. 9.—The jury in the case of Lahiine, the Finlander, charged with the murder of Hendrikes, after being locked up all night, brought in a verdict of murder this morning. Judge Lemieux addressed a few words to the jury, and adjourned the court till two o'clock this afternoon.

NEW SHOE STORE

Mr. R. Westlake Now Occupying His Handsome Premises

Mr. R. Westcott, 122 George street, has now got his fine new boot and shoe store in full running order, and is furnishing foot gear for a good proportion of Peterboro's public.

The store is one of the best on our business thoroughfare, and is of good breadth. Since this shop was recently occupied by Mr. Johnson a handy store, great improvements have been effected.

The whole establishment has been repainted and decorated from floor to ceiling included.

The floor is covered with a handsome linoleum of modern tints and artistic colorings. The walls and ceiling have been covered with a most artistic and beautifully adapted wall paper of latest design.

The whole north side of the store is lined from show window to rear with suitable shelving, which is now filled with boots and shoes from Canada's most noted manufacturers. Mr. Westcott intends making a specialty of fine shoes, and has already placed a large order with Jno. Ellis & Co. of Montreal, for a specially designed lot of ladies and gentlemen's fine quality shoes.

A recess in the south side of the store is now used to store his excess stock of goods.

A number of handsome wicker chairs for trying on purposes present a very neat appearance.

Mr. Westcott is a thoroughly practical shoeman having served a long apprenticeship in this city and consequently known to most of Peterboro's best class of customers.

Mr. Westcott's window is very tastefully arranged, displaying an assortment of fine shoes indicative of the goods on sale within.

OBITUARY

Death of Dr. Thos. Sullivan, a Former Resident of This City

Word was received here yesterday of the death of Dr. Thomas Sullivan, of Springfield, Minn. Dr. Sullivan was an old Peterboro boy, who located in the West some years ago, leaving numerous friends here, who will sincerely regret his decease. Besides his immediate family, he leaves two sisters, Mrs. John Clancy and Mrs. M. McGaddell, both of this city, to mourn his loss. Mr. Leo Clancy, a nephew of the deceased, left at once to attend the funeral which will take place at Springfield.

The Sailors Rebel, and Troops Mutiny

Massacre Said to Have Occurred at Cronstadt ---City Reported in Flames---Fighting All Night---Artillery and Cavalry Join Rebels

St. Petersburg, Nov. 10.—A force of Ulhlan cavalry sent to Cronstadt from Peterhof is reported to have joined the insurgents. It is also reported that the artillerymen of the fortress have joined the insurgents.

London, Nov. 10.—A despatch to a news agency from St. Petersburg says that the sailors of the Russian squadron at Cronstadt mutined last night, overpowered their officers, and landed and attacked the shops, public buildings, and spirit stores.

The troops were called out and fighting ensued, during which machine guns were used and many persons were killed or wounded. In addition a number of houses were set on fire. The fighting lasted all day long.

Cronstadt, Russia, Nov. 10.—The troops have have mutinied and are ravaging the city.

Firing is going on in the streets. The inhabitants are panic-stricken, and are fleeing from the town.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 10.—It is reported that a massacre occurred at Cronstadt last night, and that the mutinty, using machine guns, fired on the people. The city is reported to be in flames. Telephone communication with St. Petersburg is interrupted, but the telegraph lines are working.

The British Embassy here has requested General Trepoff to protect the British subjects at Cronstadt.

CAN SEE THE FLAMES.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 10.—Intense excitement prevails here, owing to the alarming news from Cronstadt. According to reports a mutiny of sailors occurred during the night, and was followed by a regular battle with the troops, during which machine guns were used. The workmen sided with the sailors, and hundreds were killed or wounded. Later the torch was used, and the town is now in flames. It is reported that the fire can be seen from the windows of the Emperor's Palace at Peterhof. The inhabitants of Cronstadt are in a panic. The lights in St. Petersburg have stopped running, and telephone and telegraph communication has been severed. It is not possible now to verify the reports or secure details of the happenings.

TREPOFF HAS RESIGNED.

London, Nov. 10.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from St. Petersburg says that the chamberlain of the Governor-General confirms the report of the resignation of General Trepoff.

BURNED THEM ALIVE.

Odessa, Nov. 10.—Authentic accounts received here from various points in Bessarabia show that the anti-Jewish outbreaks there followed the same lines as at Odessa, varying only in the number of victims. At Kishineff the disturbances were preceded by inflammatory speeches, gendarmes and city officials near the Governor's house asserting that the Jews attempted to take the life of the local bishop and intended to loot the treasury. The mob then incited against the bloody work. Carrying ikons and portraits of the Emperor, the mob proceeded to the Jewish quarters and devasted and pillaged unhindered. Attempts at self-defence were quelled by the troops. Ninety per cent. of the killed and wounded were victims of bayonets and rifle bullets. The looting was accompanied by atrocities similar to those witnessed at Odessa and continued for two days. They stopped so soon as the Governor received an order from St. Petersburg. Seventy Jews were killed and one hundred and twenty were wounded. Order is now restored.

BURNED IN HAYRICK.

A mob at Ismails, Bessarabia, burned alive, eleven Jews who had hid dan in a hayrick.

The town of Kalarash, Bessarabia, was entirely devasted and burned. Fifty-nine Jews were killed or perished in the flames, and two hundred fled to neighboring villages, where peasants beat a number of them to death with cudgels and burned three Jews after drenching them with petroleum.

THE CZAR SURRENDERS.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 10.—Both Count Witte and the Emperor have made another surrender. General Trepoff has been relieved from the powerful position of Governor-General of St. Petersburg and Assistant Minister of the Interior, and Russia's Premier has agreed to immediate universal suffrage. Count Witte, while fully aware of the intense opposition to Gen. Trepoff's retention in office, has never questioned the absolute of the general's co-operation in the introduction of the new regime. Nevertheless, he recognized that only Trepoff's removal would appease the popular wrath.

ASSESSMENT KICKS

The Following Allowances Have so Far Been Made on Assessments

There is much and general kicking against this year's assessment. The Court of Revision is now in session. There are 11 appeals against varied kinds of alleged overcharges.

The court which is composed of Sheriff Hall and Messrs. Harry Rush, sr., and Wm. Langford, began business at eight o'clock Wednesday night in the council chamber.

The following appeals were granted or dealt as stated:

The Bell Telephone Company.—$2,000 on Assessment Business.

B. C. Yelland—Reduction of $150 on land, which is $50 each of three lots.

REMARKABLE MAN DEAD

For Many Years His Abode Was a Hollow Oak Tree

London, November 10.—At the workhouse in Windsor there has recently died a remarkable character in the person of Wm. Tongle (better known as "Navvy"), who for many years lived in the hollow of an oak tree in Windsor Forest.

Born at the Nursery Cottage, Windsor Great Park, nearly eighty years ago, his great ambition was to be a royal keeper and in time his father, who was the head nurseryman, obtained for him the position of extra keeper during the bird breeding season.

After his father's death "Navvy" took up his abode in a hollow oak tree between Cranborne Tower and the Feimish Farm, and in a short time became well known to everybody living near the forest by reason of his eccentricities. Many of the gentry supplied him regularly with food and his larder was always well stocked.

He always raised his hat respectfully when he met a carriage and Queen Victoria when driving through the park used to take notice of the old man. In the winter he slept inside his tree, but during the summer months he took his rest beneath the overhanging branches.

UNION PRINTERS' NEW PERIL

Independent Firm Posts Open Shop Rules; Forces 24 Men Out

Chicago, November 10. — The first lockout of union printers since the Chicago Typothetae firms declared for the open shop occurred yesterday. The action is looked upon by the officials of Typographical Union No. 16 as threatening the security of more than 25 "eight hour day" contracts signed by employers.

The firm of Stromberg, Allen & Co., 324 Clark street, one of the largest "independent" shops, forced its twenty-four union compositors out at noon. An "open shop" notice was posted and the men immediately left their work.

That the lockout constituted a breach of contract is the contention of the strike leaders. According to the officers of the union a verbal agreement in the presence of witnesses was entered into with the firm on September 14, providing for the "closed shop" and the eight hour day, beginning January 1, 1906.

The union also asserts that a conspiracy exists to shatter all the "eight hour" contracts which have been secured in the fight for the shorter work day. Behind the plan, it is alleged, are the Chicago Typothetae, the Employers' Association, the National Manufacturers' Association, and the various railroads.

Smoking Room in Carnegie Library

St. Catharines, Nov. 9.—At a meeting of the Public Library Board last evening, Lieut.-Col. Carlisle introduced a resolution that one room in the basement of the new Carnegie Library be fitted up as a smoking and reading room for men. Checkers and other games also to be provided. This resolution was voted down on a tie vote, several members taking the ground that the RIGHT by such action would be encouraging the use of tobacco, and it was also feared that the smoke fumes would ascend into the general reading room and offend the nostrils of ladies. A proposal to allow the hall on the top storey which is now lying idle for the use of various literary societies and the Board of Trade was likewise voted down.

FRANCE NEVER SO STRONG AS NOW

Republic Endures While Its Alley Does Not

CONTRAST WITH RUSSIA

Former Grows in Strength Under Universal Suffrage

Paris, November 10.—Parliament has risen after all its routine and business characterized by a considerable number of interpellations being announced. It also was characterized by the voting of the amnesty bill in favor of persons condemned by the high court. That means Paul Deroulede, who alone remained abroad, all of his fellow-nationalists having been pardoned or having accomplished their sentence.

As Premier Rouvier pointed out, the vote of such a bill shows not only the great strength of the government, but also the profound political tranquility of the country. This is why the demand for a revision of the constitution brought in by Gaublier de Clagny was wanting in apropos. The chamber of deputies refused to vote urgency for this proposition, which probably will not even be formulated. Besides, the constitution M. de Clagny wanted to reform has given proofs of its solidity. It has lasted twice as long as any preceding constitution in the last century.

DURATION OF THE REPUBLIC.

The duration of empires and monarchies varied in France in the nineteenth century between fifteen and eighteen years, and the present republic has entered upon its thirty-sixth year. This has not prevented certain people from obstinately trying to transform it into Caesarism by transferring the election of the president from parliament to the people.

When one sees whither the government of a single man has brought unfortunate Russia, and when one compares this empire in dissolution, which is breaking into fragments, with republican France, one is forced to find that the moment is badly chosen to give us a Caesar, the more so that President Loubet, elected by a parliament, terminates his magistracy amidst the respect of Europe and the enthusiastic acclamations of the peoples amid whom he passed in his rapid tourney in Spain and Portugal. The success of President Loubet was considerable, and we must remember that it is France which benefits by this success.

CONTRAST WITH RUSSIA.

When the French Republic and the Muscovite Empire allied themselves to confine the growing ambition of the German Colossus no one ever could have foreseen that of these two powers the one which would be the first victim of anarchy would be Russia.

We are now going to enter upon a period of parliamentary activity. The chamber of deputies is going to examine the budget for the coming year, and afterwards [illegible] the law separating church and state, which its commission proposes should be accepted just as it was passed by the chamber of deputies.

MRS. R. R. HALL WINS

A Close Game for Ladies' Championship of Golf Club

On Wednesday afternoon, despite the very inclement weather, and during a considerable fall of snow, an interesting battle was fought on the local golf links.

This game was an important one, involving the ladies' championship of Peterboro.

Owing to the terrible weather, the attendance was smaller than the importance of such a game would warrant; still great excitement was created among those devotees of the game, who braved the elements to see a good close game of golf.

The candidates for this championship had dwindled down to the point where it lay between Mesdames P. Campbell and R. R. Hall.

Mrs. Hall won out in the last hole after a hardly contested game, and is now the champion.

C. W. WRIGHT INJURED

Employee of W. Hamilton Mf'g. Co. Hurt by Falling Boiler

Yesterday morning Mr. C. W. Wright, a boiler maker, employed by the Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company, was the victim of a very painful accident while at work yesterday morning. A boiler head fell on his foot breaking one of the small bones and bruising the member severely. The [illegible] ambulance conveyed Mr. Wright to his home at the corner of Sophia and Mark streets, Fifth Ward. The injuries, though painful, are not serious.

"Evening Lights"

Scarboro, Nov. 9.—Harry Secor, of the east known in this section as the "Evening Lights," was yesterday committed for trial by Magistrate Rutherford on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of his two-year-old daughter, Sara). Adeline, in July last. Secor, it is charged, would not allow medical attendance for the child, who was suffering from diphtheria.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CARIBO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 270 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $200,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $20,000.00 to $40,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividends and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.50 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 60 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1904 produced $18,511.50 per hour, every hour, day and night, Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $30,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock as they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

LOCAL CHEESE BUSINESS

Peterboro Paid Out $328,667 During the Season Just Closed

People in this city who at intervals enter a grocery store to purchase a pound or two of cheese, have little conception of the importance of this local industry.

The season was closed by the Cheese Board meeting of Wednesday afternoon, held in the Ontario Bank Chambers, of which full particulars appeared in yesterday's issue.

It will doubtless be a surprise to many to learn that during this season just closed, no less than 55,000 boxes of cheese were sold. The average weight of each box is 85 pounds, so that during this year, 4,715,000 pounds were made in factories on this board, and sold in this city.

The average price of cheese for the season on the Peterboro Board, has been 10 2-3 cents, or, in other words, during the cheese-making season of 1905, no less a sum than $328,666.65 has been paid to the patrons of the cheese factories on this board for the product of the dairies.

This year the price of cheese has been quite satisfactory, and next year there will be a largely increased number of farmers who will go into dairying.

There were twelve board meetings during this year, and the ruling prices ranged from 9 5-8c. up to 12 7-16c.

ARMY TO BREAK STRIKES

Unemployed Men to be Recruited for Battles

Chicago, November 10.—A "standing army" of unemployed men, recruited through bureaus in all of the large cities under the direction of employers' associations and held in readiness to be transported in two or three days' time to the scene of any labor disturbance, is a strategical project for the breaking of big strikes which assumed definite shape yesterday in Chicago.

The plan, which originated with the local Employers' association, will be presented for ratification to the convention of the Citizens' Industrial association next week in St. Louis.

As the central feature of the plan the employers purpose to establish a national employment bureau to serve to serve as a "clearing house" for the various branch bureaus in every city of any industrial importance.

"If the system now proposed had been in operation during the recent teamsters' strike," said Thomas B. O'Connell, assistant secretary of the Employers' association, "the merchants of Chicago could have have broken the strike in one-half the time and with a proportionately large financial saving. A nucleus for the plan already exists in the local employment bureaus at Cleveland, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago.

IRON ORE LAND SOLD

Railway Company Buys Property in Algoma District

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., November 10. —McKenzie & Mann, owners of the Canadian Northern road, have purchased a quarter interest in the Moose Mountain Mining Company's property, north of Sudbury, in the Algoma district, for $1,000,000. The sellers are J. C. Hutchins and J. G. Spry, of Chicago, and Chase S. Osborn, of this city. The greater part of the ore on the property is of Bessemer grade.

The purchasers are to build a line of road to Georgian Bay, where a big ore dock is to be erected. The line eventually will reach James Bay. Tentative plans also have been drawn for a plant for the manufacture of rails and structural steel on the bay.

The new road guarantees a rate so that freight will reach all lake ports at $1 a ton. The transaction marks the highest amount paid on a piece of undeveloped property in the history of the mining business of America, and solves the Bessemer ore problem for Ontario, as hereafter the manufacturers there will not be forced to buy their ore in this country.

TO PENETRATE THIBET

Dr. Sven Hedin to Make Fifth Trip to That Country

Stockholm, November 10.—Lord Curzon has promised an armed Indian escort through Tibet to Dr. Sven Hedin, the distinguished explorer, who has just left for Tibet via Constantinople, Almeria, Persia, Baluchistan and Northern India.

Dr. Hedin also proposes to explore the bases of Eastern Persia, and will, through King Oscar, request the Shah to provide him with an escort.

His main object is to discover the source of the Rivers Indus and Brahmapootra, and to survey the great Tibetan lakes. This is the intrepid traveler's fifth voyage of exploration to the unknown parts of Asia.

Mourners There But No Funeral

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 9.—A Milwaukee despatch says the mother of Mate Chas. Simmons, who was lost with the steamer Kaliyuga, bodies from which have come ashore near Southampton, Ont., was informed that her son's body had been recovered, and was on the way home. Friends and pall-bearers, who gathered for the funeral on Sunday, were finally informed that the report was a blunder, as the body had not been found. At the time all flags on vessels in the harbor were at half-mast. The shock has had a very serious effect on the mother, and fears are entertained for her recovery. Simmons was to have been married on his return from the trip married on his return from the trip on which he was lost.

TIREDNESS MEANS DANGER

Indicates Faulty Blood and Worn Out Nerves—Build Up or Total Collapse Will Surely Follow

When you're tired all day, bothered by trifles, exhausted with nervousness, be sure there is something wrong.

You need bracing up, need more nourishment in the blood, need a powerful medicine to vitalize the nerves and distribute force and staying power to all over-worked organs.

The most marvelous success is Ferrozone, a nourishing tonic so scientific as to be the admiration of every physician. Ferrozone performs wonders for people in poor health; acts directly on the blood, enriching it with strength and new life that is at once dispatched to all parts of the body. Ferrozone feeds the nerves and vital energies, supplies force, determination and joyous, buoyant spirits.

A case where there was lassitude and lack of strength is told by Mr. David Brown, of post-office box No. 39, Boston, Ont.: "About a year ago my health commenced to fail. My hands and feet seemed always cold. I felt worn-out and exhausted, weak as a little child. My face twitched. My limbs and arms commenced to lose their sense of feeling and finally my left side was perfectly numb. All my color left. My appetite ran down. Ferrozone was the first to give me any help. I improved with it very quickly. It toned up the blood and started circulation, so that the numbness gradually disappeared. My condition was perfectly cured by Ferrozone, and I have been well ever since. (Signed) "David Brown."

SPECIAL NOTICE.—To get satisfactory results be sure you get Ferrozone only. Fifty cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.

UNION LABELED

PETERBORO, NOVEMBER 11 1905

ALL TOGETHER AGAINST THE INDEMNITY "GRAB."

The attitude assumed by Mr. Aylesworth during his campaign in North York toward the ministerial pension question, whether it be sincere or merely a display of political strategy, ought to give an impetus to the popular movement against this outrageous abuse of Parliamentary power as well as the indemnity "grab." When a candidate Minister feels it prudent to take such a position before his constituents regardless of the fact that it will put him in an awkward position before his new colleagues, it is clear enough that the Government is already seriously shaken on the question.

The general public disgust at this exhibition of private greed in which the Parliamentarians of both parties joined, has been far greater than the party leaders expected, says the Montreal Star. They looked for protests; but it is not likely that they anticipated the universal and persistent public condemnation of the "log-rolling" conspiracy with which it has been visited. They thought that the people might be annoyed; but that they would soon forget it. Happily, they have been disappointed in the memory of the people for once; and there is a more active spirit of hostility to the indemnity "grab" and the pension scandal today than there was on the morrow of their perpetration.

If this spirit keeps alive and vocal, it may force the Parliamentary conspirators to disgorge. Everywhere individual members are feeling the weight of its condemnation; and there will come up to the next session many a member who knows full well that he has put his seat seriously in jeopardy by his acquiescence in this deed by which money has been taken from the public chest and dropped into his private purse. There are not a few members who stand to lose the nomination by their party because of their cowardice or their more active complicity in the affair; and others may go to the polls, there to meet punishment by the people.

All this will create a feeling in favor of putting the "tainted money" back. Even the mercenary member will see that it is not wise to risk his hold on $1,500 a year in order to reach out after an additional thousand. As for the decent member, he is probably heartily sick of the whole transaction by now, and will be delighted at an opportunity to free himself from the toils of the conspiracy and to vote the whole thing into oblivion. Mr. Aylesworth may be the champion of popular disgust, or he may be the bearer of the Ministerial "white flag;" but, in either case, his action should be a signal to the people to keep up the agitation and to expect that at the next session Parliament will come to its senses again.

All the factories in Russia are closed except those that make whips and red flags.

GO SLOW.

Commenting on the stand taken by Mayor McLellan upon the subject of municipal ownership, in the New York civic campaign, The Evening Post, a paper far-famed for its sturdy independence, says:

"On the subject of municipal ownership, the Mayor's speech contained more sound sense than we have had from any other candidate. His general principle that the Government should keep its hands off any business which can be well done privately, is simply the principle which has run through all our history. It is precisely the same as that enunciated by President Roosevelt in his speech at Raleigh. We are too much governed rather than too little. The work already put upon our governments is proving a serious strain upon both their efficiency and their character. When it is proposed that any public utility should be municipalized a very clear case has got to be made out. It is not a matter to be decided in a hurrah, but only after looking before and after like reasonable men, and especially counting the cost thereof."

STRIKING AGAINST—WHAT?

A strike occurred in Toronto which is of unusual interest, because of the reason that induced the men to quit work. They are stonecutters, and they went on strike because the employers have bought and set up a stone-planing machine. They work by hand, and they object to the introduction of the machine.

The stonecutters may rest assured that if machinery can plane stone well enough to cause them to go on strike in protest against the introduction of a machine, they can only win against it for the time being, as the tailors won against the sewing machine in 1847. If a machine can plane stone, stone will be planed by machine, just as type is set, as clothes are stitched, as shoes are made, as bricks are pressed, as boards are planed—yet by looking about them they will find comfort, for they will see the probability that more stone will be used in building than was possible under the old order of things—that the machines will take over the simple work, will cheapen it and multiply the demand for it, and, consequently, increase the call for such skilled work as can only be done by hand. This should be the result if observation in other directions holds good here.

Hull Fixy Move C. P. R. Shops

Ottawa, November 9.—Hull may have shops of the Canadian Pacific Railway, for there was a conference on that subject recently between Premier Mayor Fontaine and Assistant Superintendent Osborne of the company. The conference was a result of the action entered in the Superior Court, Hull, by the Hull corporation to recover from the company arrears of taxes on property occupied by buildings of the Gatineau branch of the C. P. R. in Hull. It is said that the company, through Mr. Osborne, promises to build shops in Hull, at least as large as the Ottawa Northern and Western, under Mr. H. J. Beemer, agreed to erect in return for exemption from taxation. The company, it is understood, also intends to proceed with a separate Central station in Ottawa, without waiting for the Grand Trunk to carry out its plans.

Disturbances in Vienna

New York, November 9. — A special despatch to The Sun from Vienna states that the agitation for universal suffrage continues to cause anxiety to the Government. There was a disturbance at the university here between rival students, and several demonstrations were made yesterday, and rioting was renewed. At Prague the Socialists barricaded suburban streets and fired on the soldiers, who stormed the defences and captured them. There were many casualties. It is said that the Socialists have distributed a thousand revolvers among their adherents. The Government has sent 5,000 additional troops to assist in preserving order.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

COAL.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

QUARTZ.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7 50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 or 1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

The maximum mining claims generally are 160 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain from the mining recorder a lease of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a certain amount in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent. collected on the output in excess of $10,000.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

He was surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been afflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians, taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicines the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, palms of the hands scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I cheerfully can recommend you, treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish." W. A TANGLED WEB

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

Author of "Beaton's Bargain," "His Perfect Trust," "By Another Name," "Her Heart's Idol," "Half a Truth," "His Rival."

"I am sure Mark Winton does not write like a man who had inherited money," she said, when she had finished the letter; "and I don't suppose he is inconsolable for the loss of his uncle—they did not love each other much in old times."

"Dear Helen, do read this letter," interrupted Nora; "it is, I see, from Lady Dorrington. I know it will be unpleasant, but do not try to hide anything from me."

"It looks formidable," said Mrs. L'Estrange, "perhaps you had better read it with me." Nora came behind her step-mother, and read as follows:

"Dear Mrs. L'Estrange,—I address myself to you rather than Nora, because I naturally consider you the more responsible of the two for the present disastrous state of affairs.

"I can scarcely say how deeply hurt, and, I may say exasperated, I feel by your, and Nora's, want of consideration and good faith toward both Clifford and myself. You especially were fully aware (at least I made no effort to conceal it) of my wish that Clifford should marry Mrs. Ruthven—a woman whom I like personally, and whose fortune was of the last importance to my brother. He, too—so far as I could see—was pleased with the idea, and quite sufficiently attached to the lady to make things smooth and feasible. With this admirable arrangement Nora chose, for the indulgence of idle vanity in the first place, I believe, to interfere, by getting up a foolish flirtation with her cousin, and drawing him on in the most deliberate manner, and with your knowledge, till my brother—the most reckless of men—was fully committed, and is now unable to extricate himself. Had Nora any true sense of honor and duty, she would have checked Clifford, have consulted me, have done anything rather than drag us all into a position of such difficulty and disgrace, for I see that Mrs. Ruthven is determined to take some steps, which will, no doubt, cover us with confusion.

"I shall only add, that if you and Miss L'Estrange think for a moment her union with Clifford Marsden will secure her happiness, you are profoundly mistaken. He will never make a good husband to any one; he will never be true to any woman. Mrs. Ruthven knows the world, she knows men; she could and comfort in the substantial advantages of her position; but Nora, if at all the girl I believed her to be, would fret herself to death. However, I am probably giving her credit for more feeling than she possesses. Young and old seem alike indurated by the greed for material things, which grasps at wealth and luxury by any means, however unworthy. She may accomplish this marriage, but she will never be acknowledged as a sister-in-law by

"Yours,

"I. DORRINGTON."

Nora, white as a sheet, took the offensive letter and perused it in silence.

"Lady Dorrington must have been out of her mind when she wrote that," cried Mrs. L'Estrange indignantly. "She little knows the true state of the case."

"It is very cruel and unjust," said Nora, in low, unsteady tones. "It is too bad to be accused of dishonorable scheming to win a man from whom I would give the world to be free."

"My dear Nora, do not allow your anger against Lady Dorrington to make you unjust to poor Clifford," exclaimed Mrs. L'Estrange, startled by the suppressed passion in her voice. "There is no reason to doubt him."

"It is neither doubt nor anger, Helen. I am averse to marry Mr. Marsden. It was instinct at first—it is—I don't know what it is now."

"My dear child, this is dreadful! I never anticipated anything half so bad," said Mrs. L'Estrange, aghast at this revelation. "What can you do? You can not break with him now, and yet to marry with such a feeling is horrible. What can you do?"

"I don't know." Nora's lip trembled as she spoke. "I seem acting badly and falsely. I am so sorry for Clifford, he deserves better treatment from me. I will show him this letter. I will point out the folly of marrying me. Why did he ever take a fancy to me."

"It is more than a fancy, Nora. I am very, very sorry for Clifford."

Nora's only reply was a burst of tears.

"Oh! I must tell him," she said. "I will show him this letter, and tell him. I do not deserve that he should quarrel with his only sister for my sake."

Mrs. L'Estrange did not reply. She was too puzzled and distressed to see the fair fabric of joy and happiness that she had seen grow up crumble to dust at a touch.

Nora dried her tears.

"I am weak and selfish, Helen. But I do want to act rightly. Do you think that Clifford is quite true, or that he is impulsive enough to misrepresent a thing he wishes for very much?"

"I don't quite understand you. But I am sure Clifford Marsden is an honorable gentleman, who would never knowingly deceive any one."

"Oh! I suppose so—I suppose so," despondingly.

"How shall I answer this horrid letter?" asked Mrs. L'Estrange.

"Do not answer it for a day or two, not till I have shown it to Clifford. It is possible things may arrange themselves."

* * * * *

Angry though she was at the unwarrantable assertions in Lady Dorrington's hasty, ill-judged letter, it gave Nora a gleam of hope, or rather it offered her an opportunity of suggesting to Marsden the expediency of breaking off their engagement. This would be to her an infinite relief. It is true that her freedom might cause pain, but not happiness, the world available were up Winton again, save, perhaps, for a brief formal farewell; but, at least, she would not be forced into a marriage which she dreaded more and more as the days rolled by. If she could only prove Marsden's integrity! Was he really under the impression that Mark Winton, the Mark she knew, had been Helen's lover, or had he misrepresented the facts?

Time was flying fast. In less than six weeks—unless her intended effort to extricate herself succeeded—she would be Marsden's wife. It was extraordinary—it was terrible—the reluctance with which she contemplated what many would consider so fair a prospect.

It was the second day after the receipt of Lady Dorrington's letter that Marsden returned from Eversleigh.

He was charmed to find Nora alone as she usually did her best to include her step-mother in their interviews. Marsden looked bright and joyous, as became a bridegroom elect. He had had a prosperous journey, and all things were coming round to his wishes. Fortune smiled upon him; he had but to play boldly, and he would break the bank of ill-luck which had hitherto raked in all his stakes.

After he had greeted Nora with his usual warmth, he noticed that she was white and cold and tremulous, and he drew her to the light, looking into her face with eager questioning eyes, while he held her hands firmly though gently.

The November Bohemian.

Did it ever occur to you what would happen if all the ministers throughout the country went on a strike? Now suppose that you were in love with a nice little girl and wanted very much to get married, what would you do? How would you go about to find a solution for this difficult problem? If you want to know how it was done in one instance, read "The Mid-Century Ministerial Strike," by Frank M. Bicknell, in the November Bohemian.

But this is not the only good story in this number. It is full to the brim and running over with other stories just as bright and clever, while sandwiched in now and then is a poem well worth reading. You will especially enjoy reading "The Sorceress," by Edwin Carlile Litsey, and "The Wise Stork," by—Leon Meade. "An Old Sweetheart," by May Irene Copinger, is a pretty little love tale of the Indian summer of the heart. But we don't want to tell you what is in The Bohemian. Just purchase a copy at the news stand and see what is in it for yourself. You won't regret it.

Gold Bug Stock

Has been withdrawn from the market by the Company. There is none of it for sale except a small block on which I have an option. This stock I am placing at 35 cents per share. 100 shares will cost you $35.00. In my judgment it will sell for 60 cents per share on the open market inside of 90 days. The papers of Oregon say that the rich find of ore in the Gold Bug mine is the greatest sensation known in the State in many months. Hon. George A. Newman, Assistant adjutant General of Iowa, has just been to Sumpter, visited the Gold Bug, bought heavily of the stock, and on his return tells me it has the finest ore and is the best looking property he saw any place in the West.

I give Bank references, the very best. I sell every share of this stock on honor. If you want 100 shares send $35.00 to the Mechanics' Savings Bank, Des Moines, telling them to turn the money over to me when I deliver the stock, to be sent to you. If you want 1,000 shares send $350. Everything about the Gold Bug is legitimate. It is now one of the richest mines of the North-West. We think that the first dividends will be paid in January or February, 1906, and you will see this stock selling at $1.00 per share on the open market in less than one year. Five strong veins, much of the ore literally sprinkled with free gold. Let me tell you about it more in detail. Address,

CALCASIEU PARISH

LOUISIANA, U. S. A.

The richest oil region in the world. Quality the finest ever discovered in the South or West. An opportunity for the investing public to get in on the ground floor of a proposition that will bear the strictest investigation.

Calcasieu parish and more especially lands north-west of Lake Charles, Louisiana, U.S.A., are considered by Oil Experts and Geologists to be the seat of primary deposits of the GREATEST OIL BEARING LANDS IN THE WORLD.

Derricks are springing up as if by magic and drills working day and night are sinking deeper and deeper into the oil beds buried in MOTHER EARTH.

There are wells in this parish that are producing from 1,000 to 50,000 barrels a day, and the price is now 65 cents a barrel.

Capital Stock and Holdings

The Union Oil and Sulphur Company, of Sioux Falls, S. D., U. S. A., was organized on the 10th of June, 1905, with a capital stock of $750,000.00, represented by an equal number of shares of the par value each of $1.00; it owns in fee simple 240 acres, and has 467 acres leased, making it one of the strongest companies in the United States.

Location of Property

It lies along side the Kansas City Southern Railroad, is only one mile from the Houstan River, and is within three miles of the GREAT SULPHUR MINE.

To Further Develop the Field

This company are now offering to the public some of their stock at the low price of Forty (40) cents a share, this is ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE STOCK, this company is absolutely out of DEBT, and all subscriptions go towards the development of the property.

The stock of this company has been placed in the hands of the firm of

FOREST AND STREAM PUB. CO.
346 Broadway, New York.

I offer, subject to prior sale, 50,000 shares of the Capital Stock of The

Oxarna Gold Mining Company

at the "Ground Floor" price of TEN CENTS A SHARE, (none has been offered for less), par value $1.00, fully paid and non-assessable.

The OXARNA GOLD MINING COMPANY is capitalized at $1,000,000.00, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1.00 each. The Oxarna Stock was originally all in the treasury, no preferred or promotion stock having been issued by this Company, and up to the present time only 350,500 shares of their stock have been issued.

The OXARNA COMPANY own by United States Patent and Deed, 142 Acres of highly mineralized land in the Famous Thunder and Custer Mountain, Idaho districts, and over $12,000,000.00 net has been realized by the Mines in our immediate vicinity. One of the Mines contiguous to our property on the north has produced $3,000,000.00 and five veins of this rich ore parallel on one of our claims, and by about 2,000 feet of shafts, tunnels, drifts and upraises the OXARNA COMPANY have uncovered over $1,000,000.00 worth of ore, and they have a large amount of ore in the ore bins and on the dump that averages over $27.00 a ton, and they expect to be in position to Mill not less than 100 tons of ore every day in a very short time, but if they only Mill 50 tons a day in less than one year they can pay 100 per cent. on the par value of the stock out standing in dividends, for they expect to have less than 400,000 shares of the stock on the market when they are fully financed.

The Oxarna Company have purchased a Mill all fully equipped and ready for business, that originally cost about $15,000.00, and they owe a balance of $5,000.00 on this Mill that will be due in three months, and in order to raise this amount quickly I am privileged to make this most liberal offer, for the stock is easily worth par today, for the time is rapidly approaching when the Company will be on a paying basis and the stock will become immensely remunerative in the near future.

Subject to prior sales I offer the above allotment on the following terms: 4 per cent. discount will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order, or subscriptions will be accepted on the installment plan, 1-4 of the amount with the order and a like amount in 30, 60 and 90 days. Make all orders payable to the undersigned or remit through the NATIONAL BANK of Delphos, and they will forward stock subject to your order.

Personally I advise you to get all of this stock that you can pay for during the next three months, for it is an exceedingly good investment. For further particulars call on or address,

Dr. Hamilton Cures Rheumatism

You Use His Mandrake and Butter milk Pills—He Guarantees Lasting Cure.

Rheumatism begins and ends in the blood which at no time is ever free from poison. But if the kidneys are healthy, they will filter out the wastes and poisons.

In case of rheumatism, the kidneys are not doing their work. As a result poisons crystalize around the joints and cause pain almost akin to torture.

There can be no cure, no permanent relief until the kidneys are stimulated. First get them into working order. For this purpose Dr. Hamilton's Pills excel all other remedies: they heal and strengthen the kidneys as no other poisons depart from the blood and all medicine can do. Once the kidneys are renewed by Dr. Hamilton's Pills the trace of rheumatism disappears.

No Case is Too Chronic to Yield to the Marvellous Influence of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"I spent nearly three years experimenting with rheumatic remedies," writes Geo. K. Sunbury, of Portland. "I had almost given up hope, when I tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they completely cured me. No remedy could be better."

You will never regret using Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Get a supply today from your druggist, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1. By mail to any address if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.

Important Real Estate Deal

Mr. Coleman Blewitt, real estate agent, was in Lakefield on Wednesday closing an important deal between Mr. Johnston of Smith, and Mr. Bert Wood of Peterboro, the latter having bought Mr. Johnston's farm. The deal was an important one as the price was near $7,000.

Trooper Coates Decorated

Trooper F. A. Coates, a member, of the South African Constabulary, who is now living in Peterboro, but who went to South Africa from Port Hope, has received from the King two bars in addition to the medal and two bars received from the late Queen at the time of their return from the war. The two bars bear the inscriptions: "South Africa, 1901."

Last of the Dummer Trouble

George Gallagher, one of the quartette of Dummer young men who did the shooting on the highway on the night of the Hill tragedy, will appear before Magistrate Edmison this morning on the charge of disturbing the peace. Hugh Murray, of Hamilton, the Grand Secretary, have issued a special appeal on behalf of the Mason's semi-centennial fund organized by Past Grand Master Judge Harding, of Lindsay, at the Grand Lodge session in Brockville last year.

MR. LEARY HOME

The Popular Alderman Has Been Selling Horses Out West

Yesterday Alderman Leary "was hard" busy extending "The glad hand" to his many friends in the city having returned Wednesday night from an extended tour in the far West.

Mr. Leary, two weeks ago, as noted in The Times, shipped a consignment of horses, and yesterday told a Times representative he had come off very well in his speculation.

The first shipment went to Rat Portage, where the railway construction contractors are operating. Mr. Leary said that recently there had been a big drop in the price of railway ties and there were not so many lumbering firms in that line of business this fall. This had some effect on the demand for horses.

The alderman is now in correspondence with Mr. W. H. Symes, of Fort William, in reference to establishing a permanent mining station at that town. As soon as he completes satisfactory arrangements with Mr. Symes, he says he will start buying again and ship as soon as he has a car load or so.

3000 YEARS OLD

Local Tobacconist Exhibiting a Perfect Mastodon Molar

Mr McDonough, the George street tobacconist, has on exhibition in his window a curiosity that yesterday drew much attention for passers-by.

This curious memo of by-gone ages is a perfectly preserved tooth of the long since extinct mastodon. The tooth was found in Alaska, imbedded in the solid ice of an Arctic glacier, along with other bones belonging to the huge elephantine animal, where it had lain since the world was young.

The tooth is about nine inches long, from ends of the several roots to the still glittering white enamel of the grinding surface. It is about eight inches wide and over two inches thick at the corrugated surface, and weighs fully seven pounds. A solid mass of perfect ivory. The general aspect of this tooth shows, although in so perfect a state of preservation, from its centuries of cold storage, its age by cracks and wrinkles, similar to those seen in very old oil paintings.

The history of this tooth is that it was found in its icy preservative by a band of wandering Esquimaux. A trapper in Alaska, some 50 years ago, bought it from these wandering nomads for a few old tin cans that had held preserved provisions. The trapper gave it to the late Mr. Poole Eastland of this city, and on his death, Mrs. Eastland gave it to a gentleman who let Mr. McDonough have it, as a personal matter. The venerable grinder, which in its present place of display, is described as "The first tobacco chewer," and who knows but what this is correct, as those ante-diluvian creatures lived entirely on grass, grains and leaves.

FLEW FROM BED

Sucker Lake Hunter Gets a Midnight Scare

A story reached the city yesterday from one of the hunting parties not a thousand miles from Sucker Lake.

A joker of the party, knowing a certain local hunter to be very tired, determined to play a joke on him. The hunters had returned to camp played out, as he had dragged a deer about a mile through the woods.

As the hunter was getting his night cap (inwardly) the joker took the liver of a deer slain two days before and placed it in the hunter's bed. The hunter crept between his blankets and before noticing his cold and clammy bed fellow, was snoring.

About 2 a.m. he was awakened by two hounds, occupying his feet, furiously scratching at the blankets enfolding him.

"Get out you dogs, what do you want in like manner he roared. Still the dogs insisted on uncovering the liver they smelt. So persistent were the dogs at trying to get beneath his blankets, he ran his hand down and felt the liver. "Good Lord! There's a big snake in my bed," yelled the hunter, and with one bound he was outside the tent. A second nightcap was necessary to establish tranquility in his nervous system.

CHURCH IMPROVEMENT

George Street Methodist Church to be Greatly Improved, Will Move Their Organ

As is well known, the George street Methodist church is one of Peterboro's most progressive and, from a religious standpoint, aggressive institutions in the city. They keep up with the times. This is again demonstrated by their spending considerably over $2,000 on their already fine organ, and other portions of the church.

The D. W. Karn Company, of Woodstock, are reconstructing it. The organ will be brought forward three feet. The console with pneumatic action will be brought forward, so that the organist can better direct the choir. The pulpit platform will be enlarged and brought forward to enable the choir loft to be kept at its present dimensions. The front of the platform will be a handsome design in hardwood. The change will add much to the effectiveness of the organ, and will, at the same time, improve the appearance of the church.

The work will be completed about the new year. The lady members of the choir will, at the opening and thereafterward, appear in their new surplice gowns—and without hats or bonnets—a change suggested by the trustees.

A LOYAL BRITON

Mr. J. J. Turner Celebrates the King's Birthday by Liberal Use of Bunting

Mr. J. J. Turner, the well known local sail manufacturer, yesterday in tangible form, celebrated the 64th birthday of our Sovereign.

Across the street from his spacious factory and shop, was strung a most artistically decorated banner. In the center of this was an oil painting, an excellent likeness of the King. On one side of the banner were the words "God Save the King," whilst on the other was the legend "Long may he reign."

The large building itself was appropriately decorated. A large British ensign floated to the breeze, and from the top of the flag pole, to each corner of the factory were streamers and rows of flags fluttering gaily.

Mr. Turner is a true son of England and his loyalty is not only of the lip kind.

STOMACH CURE

An Easy Way from Standpoint of Convenience.

The so-called cures for indigestion are almost as numerous as the victims themselves, and scarcely a day passes without the hopes of thousands of sufferers being raised by the discovery of some novel method of cure for this prevalent disease.

Until a combination of unusual results, heretofore but little known in this country, was made in Mi-o-na tablets, no certain cure for indigestion had been found, and it is therefore hardly to be wondered at that our leading druggist, who has the Peterboro agency, is selling large quantities of Mi-o-na.

Mi-o-na is a guaranteed cure for all diseases of the stomach excepting cancer. If you have pains or distress after eating, headache, belching of gases, sour taste in the mouth, dizziness, heartburn, specks before the eyes, furred tongue, sleeplessness, backache, debility or weakness, it shows that the stomach needs to be strengthened with Mi-o-na.

Just one little tablet out of a 50 cent box before meals for a few days, and you will soon regain perfect health and strength.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The E. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

SIX BILLIARD TABLES

Mr. Pappas Has Purchased Six New Tables for His Parlors

That Mr. Pappas, who recently bought out the cigar and billiard business of Mr. Jas. Dolan, is making things hum, is now in evidence.

As noted in The Times of Monday, Mr. Pappas went to Toronto that day to procure three new tables. He was made so satisfactory an offer for all his old tables, by Messrs. S. May & Co., the great Toronto Billiard Table Manufacturers, that he decided to buy six, instead of three, new ones. These consist of five pool and one billiard tables, and will be shipped at once. Mr. Pappas has now concluded to tear down the partition between the two adjoining establishments. This will be done at once and will give him one of the finest billiard parlors in Canada. All the fixtures will then be absolutely new. He will thus have some ten or twelve tables for accommodation of his customers. Mr. Pappas, when in Toronto also sold all his old cigar store show cases and fixtures. These will be replaced by new and up-to-date arrangements.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured.

with Local Applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials free.

Flags Flew Yesterday

King Edward VIII.'s birthday was loyally observed in this city yesterday. Bunting and flags flew over all public buildings and many schools and business places had the good old Union Jack floating its mission of peace or defiance to the world. The large Canadian flag flying over Peterboro's civic building should be retired to hospital for a season. It looks like the battle flag carried by a regiment which had gone through the fight of Balaclava. A short season held with an expert needlewoman would turn out Peterboro's flag in a condition more worthy of this progressive city.

T. A. S. Win at 45's

The T.A.S. caste board experts, on Wednesday night, were too strong for in the window of Mr. John Lynch's the Knights of Columbus. At the former 45's contest the Knights won out, but did not have much margin to boast about. On Wednesday, the series, at the wind-up stood 122-105 in favor of the Coldwater Advocates. A handsome picture of the Queen with her grandchildren. The trophy of the fight has been for some time drug store, Hunter street, is well worth the struggle just closed, which gives the T.A.S. ownership.

CONVICTS WARDENS OF A PENAL COLONY

About 15,000 Natives of India and Burma Imprisoned in South Sea Island.

(Special Cable).

Calcutta, Nov. 11.—The British warship Prosperine, of the East Indies squadron, has just returned from the Andaman Islands, and, being the first warship which had been seen in the harbor for seven years, her visit caused great excitement. These islands lie about 250 miles in a southwesterly direction from Rangoon, and, unknown to most people, comprise a huge convict settlement for natives from India and Burma, some 15,000 being quartered there at the present time.

The system of guarding the prisoners is very clever. The warders are all convicts who have been on the island some time, and have behaved themselves, and risen to this rank. They are each put in charge of gangs, differing from themselves—for example, a Hindu warder would be in charge of a Burmese gang. This is found to rank very well, no trouble at all being experienced and scarcely any cases of escape have been known.

The prisoners are exceptionally well treated, the best characters in some cases being appointed to salaried positions, and it is only the very worst behaved who are actually kept confined in the jails.

Each convict wears around his neck a piece of wood, and stamped on it is his number, date of conviction and release, and the article of law under which he was convicted. The warders only wear a small brass tally with their numbers on.

The Andaman Commission, consisting of about forty persons, headed by Mr. Merk, Chief Commissioner, are in charge of the convicts, being accompanied by the Liverpool Regiment, and a detachment of Indian troops comprising the rest of Fort Blair.

The marship's visit lasted five days and was much enjoyed, a tennis tournament, dance and visits to various places of interest being arranged for the officers, while a football match, among the navy and a concert were indulged in by the sailors.

CZAR AND GRAND DUKE HAD ANGRY WORDS

Autocrat Says He Will Not Recognize Validity of Cyril's Marriage.

(Special Cable.)

St. Petersburg, November 11.— The Grand Duke Cyril, who has been deprived of his military rank and expelled from Russia had a stormy interview with his cousin, the Czar.

When the Czar learned that the Grand Duke had secretly married the Grand Duchess Melita, the divorced wife of his Majesty's brother-in-law, the Grand Duke of Hesse, he summoned him to St. Petersburg for an explanation.

The Grand Duke obeyed the summons and admitted that a marriage had taken place.

On hearing this the Czar reproached him for having disregarded his wishes in the matter and said it was impossible for him to recognize the validity of the marriage. He concluded with the word: "The Grand Duchess Melita is not your wife at all."

The Grand Duke Cyril replied with heat and there was a stormy scene. He took the next train back to Germany, and the following day the Czar's proclamation announcing his expulsion was published.

The Grand Duke arrived in Berlin early yesterday morning and was met at the station by the Grand Duchess Melita. They proceeded together to Coburg, where the Grand Duke intends to purchase an estate.

ENGLISH APPLES SCARCE.

Twenty-five Cents Each Paid for Pippins in London.

(Special Cable).

London, Nov. 11.—Cox's orange pippins, at a shilling each, seems an extraordinary high price, but this is what they fetched at Covent Garden yesterday. They were not particularly large ones, but they were perfect.

English apples are so scarce that they will fetch almost any price. A dozen from a show last week sold for fifteen shillings, while those suitable for dessert may sometimes even at 6d. each. This, too, at a time of year when fruit is not scarce.

There are quantities of grapes from 6d. to 1s. 6d. a pound, and pears, though somewhat dear, are very plentiful. Even the Canadian pippin-apples could find a ready market and cheap.

It is the English apple which is scarce; of foreign there are enough and to spare.

MISSIONARIES EXPOSE CRUELTIES IN CONGO

Appeal to British Government to Take Steps to Suppress Them.

London, Nov. 1.—At a meeting of the General Committee of the Baptist Missionary Society yesterday a resolution was adopted giving expression to their feelings of horror and indignation at the continued cruelties and lawless oppression exercised upon the peoples of the Congo State by representatives of the Congo Government and the various concessionaire companies.

The resolution goes on to say that they would have taken their present action at a much earlier date, but they deemed it wiser to await the report of the special commissioners; but they can delay no longer, especially in view of the fact that the evidence of missionaries and others relative to these atrocities presented to the special commissioners establishes beyond question the truthfulness of the charges, leaving no doubt that many of the worst features of African slavery are rife in large tracts of the Congo State, resulting in the depopulation of many districts, consequent upon the oppressive and cruel treatment of the natives by State servants, native State soldiers and the representatives of concessionaire companies.

The General Committee appeals to His Majesty's Government to take such action, under the powers of the Berlin treaty, as may bring to a speedy termination the present regime of oppression, coercion and cruelty which now exists in so many parts of the Congo State.

TWO GIRLS KILLED AT OWN REQUEST

Murderer Loose Nerve to Slay Himself and Surrenders to Police.

Berlin, Nov. 11.—The two daughters of a merchant named Haar, of Brunswick, have just been shot and killed at their own request by a bank clerk named Brunke, 19 years of age, in extraordinary circumstances.

Brunke gave piano lessons to the younger girl, who was 20 years old, and the pair fell in love. The girl's parents, however, objected to their marriage, on the ground of Brunke's youth and poverty.

A few days ago the elder sister heard from her fiance in St. Petersburg that he was unable to marry her, whereupon all three decided to die.

The girls took seats on chairs, and Brunke fired, shooting his sweetheart twice through the heart. He then turned the weapon on the elder sister, who was killed instantly.

His courage failing, Brunke, surrendered himself to the police.

POLITENESS UNAPPRECIATED

London, Nov. 11.—A notice asking the public to speak loudly and distinctly has been posted in the post office in Borough High street. It is stated that politeness has led the men doing business with the office to address the young women clerks in soft and gentle tones.

HONESTY INSISTED ON.

London, Nov. 11.—The Barrow Magistrates have sanctioned a Sunday concert in the Town Hall, on the understanding that it will not be called "sacred."

ROMANCE OF LOVE HAS TRAGIC CLOSE

Honeymoon of Couple Wed After Forty Years Cut Short by Death.

(Special Cable).

London, Nov. 11.

The romance of two faithful lovers at Epping Green, who waited for each other for forty years, has just been brought to a tragic close two weeks after the long-delayed wedding.

Forty years ago the belle of Epping Green was Mary Ann Adams, the daughter of a rich farmer. There were two suitors for her hand. One, to whom she was devoted, was a smart young militia-man named Nat Ricketts. Her father, however, objected to the match, for Ricketts, despite, his bright, gay uniform, was only a poor farm laborer. So Mary Ann had to marry her other lover, George Newman, the son of a neighboring farmer.

Evidently the marriage was not a success, for after little more than a year Newman left his wife at Epping Green, with a cottage and a small allowance, and settled at Rye Hill.

This all happened in the early sixties, but through all the intervening years Mrs. Newman's heart remained true to her old love, and when a short time ago Mr. Newman died his widow and the once smart militiaman were able to be married at last.

So the old people, now aged 70, and 70 years respectively, met last in their donkey cart for the Lindsey street chapel at Epping.

It was only three miles away, but the donkey was also affected by the passing of years, and took three hours to accomplish the journey. Still, after waiting forty years, three hours does not matter much, and the faithful old couple were duly married amid the congratulations of their friends.

Unhappily, their married life was not destined to be a long one, for yesterday the body of Mrs. Ricketts was found in a pond at the back of the cottage. A pail was found close to her hand, and it is supposed that she was getting water and missed her footing in the dark.

SEA SERPENT BOBS UP.

This Time He is Seen Off the Coast of England.

(Special Cable).

London, Nov. 11.—The sea serpent has arrived, although somewhat late in the season.

It was seen off the Norfolk coast yesterday by the crew of a damaged vessel, which put into Great Yarmouth.

They first sighted it two miles away, and believed it to be a mass of wreckage. They soon found that the object was moving, and when it raised a gigantic head out of the water they became convinced of its identity.

"The serpent," the seamen added, in describing the sight, "was of ingodsome length and soon dived out of sight.

BONNET DIAMOND MERCHANT

London, Nov. 11.—A diamond merchant assured the Shoreditch County Court yesterday that he never kept books; that his business was over $500,000 annually, and that he "could walk into Hatton Garden now and get credit for $1,250,000."

THIRTY SONGS IN THREE HOURS.

London, Nov. 11.—A singer yesterday got a case in which he was concerned at the Southwark County Court expedited on the ground that he had to sing thirty songs into a gramophone that afternoon, beginning at 1 and ending at 5, in time for an evening engagement.

GALLANT CAPTAIN REWARDED

London, Nov. 11.—Captain Apfeld, of the Red Star Liner Finland, is the recipient of the Belgian Life Saving Society's first-class gold medal for gallantry at sea. Captain Apfeld was created a chevalier of the Order of Leopold for gallantry displayed on the occasion of the sinking of the Red Star Liner Waesland in a fog off Holyhead, when out of some 300 persons under his charge only two were drowned.

VILLAGE OF PAGANS IS VICAR'S VERDICT

Resigns Charge Owing to the Spiritual Apathy of His Parishioners.

(Spect. l Cable).

London, Nov. 11.

"Pagan Hook" is the name now enjoyed by the quiet little village of Hook, which lies some three miles from Kingston-on-Thames.

So lost in indifference is this village that the vicar, the Rev. W. M. Dingwall, has thrown up the cure of the parish in despair.

"I have worked hard for nearly three years," said the vicar yesterday, "and it seems largely in vain. I have spoken to them personally, and I have implored them from the pulpit, but they will not come to church.

"No effort, either spiritual or material; no concert, whether high-class or extremely 'popular'; no branch of church activity that I have been able to devise or carry on will induce the people of Hook to come to church.

"There is a population of about 1700, but only about 300 attend church, and many of these are not Hook people.

"The fact is, the village is spiritually asleep. They do not go to Nonconformist places of worship, nor do they go golfing or motoring. They have simply gone to sleep, and they do not give a thought to spiritual things."

The vicar has now left for the West Indies on a holiday voyage.

Some of the more enlightened of the inhabitants of "Pagan Hook" are taking around a large memorial paper, asking Christian and pagan alike to sign an earnest entreaty to the reverend gentleman to return to them.

MAD KING'S GEMS SOLD FOR A SONG

Magnificent Jewels Once Owned by Louis of Bavaria Are Sold at Auction.

(Special Cable.)

London, November 11.—Small prices ruled at the sale yesterday of the jewels of the late King Louis of Bavaria at the auction rooms of Messrs. Knight, Frank and Rutley, Conduit Street, W.

Magnificent as the "Mad King's" jewels were, the total sum realised was only $3,705.

A Meibein pendant of sapphires and emeralds and a necklet of similar design brought in only $250 although at the outset the auctioneer suggested an opening bid of $500.

A beautiful court suite composed of a necklet chased in gold, floriated ornament set with large sapphires surrounded with brilliants and united by diamond fleur-de-lyra, was sold for $1,-650, after an opening bid of $500. The auctioneer characterised this as the cheapest lot of the day.

A tiara designed as three roses of red enamel, one having a cabochon sapphire in centre, was sold for $730, while a gold Latin cross, with fine enamels of the Saviour, the Madonna, St. John and cherubims, realised $280.

The closing item was a wonderful chased gold bracelet designed as a symbolic memorial of Wagner, and having a beautiful cameo of Goldo's "Aurora," surrounded by large sapphires set in the centre. After lengthened bidding it sold for $420.

STUDENTS FOR ERIE.

Dublin, Nov. 11.—For stealing blank forms of money orders from the Kildare post office, where his mother was postmistress, and cashing them, filled up, at branch offices in Dublin, a Trinity College student named Bowes W. Cuthbert was sentenced yesterday to six months' imprisonment.

FASHION FAVORS CORAL TRINKETS

Sudden Demand for Rare Pale Pink Varieties Sends the Prices Upward.

London, Nov. 11.—Nearly every woman owns a string of coral beads, and it will be good news to them that fashion has decreed that this winter they will be fashionable.

The pale pink is the most popular, and a perfectly tested natural coral necklet of medium sized beads costs as much as $400.

Darker coral is cheaper, and the coral color, a deep rose-pink, can be obtained for less than $10.

White coral is very popular, and a necklet or chain costs from $25 upward, while the same sum will purchase a necklace of white beads, artificially tinted to resemble the pale shell-pink, which is very rare, a perfect row of beads taking as long as twenty years to collect.

One reason for the sudden revival of coral ornaments is that coral is the only jewellery, except pearls, which harmonizes and contrasts perfectly with this season's fashionable color—purple, light or dark.

A string of shell-pink coral, worn with a mauve costume, looks very dainty, and earrings, brooches, hatpins and hundreds of other ornamental trifles are being made in the hitherto neglected coral.

FIRST TURBINE CUNARDER.

The Carmania to Make Her Maiden Voyage Next Month.

(Special Cable.)

Liverpool, Nov. 11.— The maiden voyage of the Carmania, the first Cunarder to be fitted with turbine engines, which takes place early in December will render it possible to make an exact comparison between turbine and reciprocating engines.

Hitherto such a comparison has been impossible, since two vessels of the same size, one with the old type of engine and one with the new, have not been available.

But the Carmania is to be sister ship to the Caronia, which is fitted with the older type of engine and comparisons between the two will be eagerly awaited. Should they prove the superiority of the turbine, the new engine will probably be fitted to all future boats of the line.

Her gross tonnage will be 21,000 tons, she will be fitted with triple screws, and will be capable of carrying 2,500 people.

PRAISE FOR TOMMY ATKINS.

Lord Wolseley Says He is the Finest Fellow in the World.

(Special Cable.)

London, Nov. 11.—Lord Wolseley pays the following tribute to the British soldier in a letter acknowledging the receipt of the "History of the Cheshire Regiment" from F. Simpson, of Chester:

"I hope the English people may never forget the endurance and self-sacrificing loyalty that has always been an instinct of the British soldier, whom I believe to be the finest fellow in the world.

"Well led by English gentlemen, there is nothing he could not do—certainly nothing that he is not prepared to attempt.

GIANT BEETLE AT LONDON ZOO.

London, Nov. 11.—A fine specimen of the Goliath beetle, the largest of living insects, arrived at the Zoological Gardens yesterday. It is three inches long, two inches broad, and when its wings are spread it looks as large as a lark.

MILL WITHOUT A CHIMNEY.

Liverpool, Nov. 11.—The Acme spinning mill at Pendlebury, Manchester, containing 50,000 spindles which was started yesterday, is worked by electricity, and is the first spinning mill in England to adopt such motive power. There is no chimney attached to the [illegible]

CUBA ON THE PATHWAY TO PROGRESS SINCE FREEDOM DAWNED UPON HER

Her Finances are Satisfactory, the Sanitary Condition of Her Capital Excellent, the Political Situation Good and She Needs No Navy or Army to Guard Her Shores.

SINCE Cuba became a free and independent nation, in June, 1901, the world has heard but little of that troublous and fascinating island, where for thirty years, almost without cessation, bloodshed went on, year in and year out, until, with the assistance of the United States, Spanish rule was abolished and Cuba Libre was born.

Since that time until recently, when a sharp conflict took place between the police and a section of malcontent electors in connection with the forthcoming elections, the newspapers of Europe have published but the briefest scraps of news about Cuba, and these at long intervals. No better proof could be adduced of the fact that American intervention has been successful, and that since the new republic was established the inhabitants of the beautiful western island have been working out their own salvation and repairing the ravages of a generation of fighting.

When the Spaniards were expelled the greater part of the island was devastitated, business was, and had been for long, at a standstill; railways, harbors and docks were neglected and disused; sugar and tobacco plantations were overgrown with weeds and practically non-productive; while law and government were virtually meaningless words. But in four years much has been done quietly and systematically to change all this.

SOUND POLITICS.

To begin with the political aspect. When Senator Estrada Palma—who after some indecision has been persuaded by his friends to seek re-election—was made first President, and came from Washington, where for years he had carried on the work of the Revolutionary Committee abroad, he found the island split up into numberless sections and factions. There were the real Cuban patriots, the men, who had been fighting all their lives for freedom; the Spanish party, consisting of the few who had prospered under Spanish rule; the American party, who favored annexation to the United States; the natives, and the foreigners. Yet Senor Palma was unanimously elected, and soon evolved order out of the political chaos.

Al these discordant voices have now been turned into two keys, and party government has been established on a sound basis. There are now but two parties—the Moderates, or Conservatives, of which the President is the nominal head; and the Opposition, or Liberals, who are in a strong minority. It is probable that the elections will result in the return of the Presidential party and the re-appointment of Senor Palma to the head of affairs.

The Constitution is the same as that of the United States, with a President, a Vice-President, a House of Representatives, a Senate and a Cabinet consisting of six Ministers. So much for the political situation, which is perfectly satisfactory.

NO ARMY AND NO NAVY.

There is no army and no navy, the proximity and benevolent friendship of the United States, with the Monroe doctrine, rendering these methods of defence unnecessary. For the maintenance of internal order there is a splendid police force, officered by men of good family, all of whom were leaders and fighters in the revolution; and another body, analogous to the gendarmery of France, of the famous Guardia Civil of Spain, called the Guardia Rural, and consisting of men who fought in the revolution. Justice is in the hands of capable judges and lawyers, and the legal system is working without a hitch.

As regards the financial position, nothing could be more satisfactory. When the war between the United States and Spain ended, it was found necessary for Cuba to raise a loan for the purpose of suppressing and setting up in life the men who had fought for freedom for so many years.

American financiers were eager to provide the $35,000,000, which it was estimated would be required to pay off the first half of the full indebtedness. Messrs. Speyer, of New York, underwrote the loan, which is now quoted well above par on the New York and London Exchanges. The Cuban Government decided to postpone the borrowing of the other half because, finding at the end of the first four years of the Republic's existence that they had a large surplus in the treasury, they could see their way to liquidating their debts to the soldiers with this surplus and an issue of internal bonds.

Thereupon, certain disappointed representatives of American financiers who had planned to obtain concessions for the carrying out of sanitary works in the island began a campaign against Cuba based upon the alleged insanitary state of sanitation there.

SANITATION AND TRADE.

What truth there was in these allegations may be judged from the statement of the British Minister in Havana, who in his last report says: "Thanks to the efforts of the sanitary authorities, not a single case of yellow fever has developed in the island during the last three years, though a few cases were imported in 1901. Smallpox has also been practically eradicated." On the American mainland, on the other hand, yellow fever has been rampant for months, especially at New Orleans, where 2,000 cases had been reported down to last week.

Several important railway extensions have been carried out, the most notable being the Central Railway, which was constructed by the enterprise—one might almost say the audacity—of the famous Canadian engineer, Van Horne.

When the island was liberated from Spanish rule a decree was immediately passed to the effect that no concessions for railway construction or any other kind of exploitation should be granted to foreigners. But Van Horne, who was on the spot with enormous quantities of railway material, was not discouraged by this. He set to work to buy the line bit by bit as he obtained control of the land. He trusts ultimately to the railway's proving its usefulness in the near future to obtain what he wanted from the Cuban Government, and events are rapidly proving him right.

The trade of the island, which during the war with Spain fell to practically nothing, has risen by leaps and bounds. To the manufacture of sugar, once a staple industry in Cuba, has been applied the most up-to-date and efficient machinery, second to none in the world. The tobacco-growing industry has also increased hugely, and the output of both these commodities for this year will exceed all previous inland are indeed of the very brightest.

BRIDEGROOM FAINTS.

A Too Tight Collar Responsible for Interrupting Wedding.

(Special Cable.)

Berlin, Nov. 11.—An unexpected interruption of a wedding ceremony occurred in St. Paul's Church at Zwickau yesterday.

The clergyman was just putting the all-important question to the bridal pair when suddenly the bridegroom sank insensible at the feet of his intended bride. A wild shriek from the latter caused a panic. A doctor who was called to the scene succeeded in reviving the young man, and declared that the fainting had been caused simply by too tight a collar.

Two hours later the marriage was solemnized in the same church and by the same clergyman.

PHILOSOPHIC PRISONER.

Paris, Nov. 11.—Mme. Merelli, the alleged accomplice of the defaulting Paris bank clerk, Gallay, is occupying her time while in prison in reading the works of Herbert Spencer, Nietzsche, Kant and other philosophic writers.

EXPENSIVE PARTRIDGES.

London, Nov. 11.—A Norwich laborer named Brown, who was convicted at Reepham, Norfolk, of being in possession of twelve live partridges, was fined the maximum penalty of £1 a bird and costs, amounting to £14 in TOO HARDY FOR BEEF.

London, Nov. 11.—Chicheree agriculturists have developed an exceptionally hardy breed of chicks and quite too valuable, but not for beef, says the Automobile Club Journal, in commenting upon a fine of £20 imposed a few days ago on a London motorist, who ran into a cow at an estimated speed of between thirty-two and forty miles an hour. Neither cow nor motor car was injured.

BELGIAN ART FOR LONDON HALL.

London, Nov. 11.—Pictures of the Belgian school will furnish next year's exhibition at the Guildhall. Gallery I will be given up to the masters of the fifteenth century; Gallery II. will contain the works of artists of the seventeenth century, including Rubens and Van Dyck, and Gallery III. and IV. will contain pictures by modern Belgian painters.

GAS STOPS A MILL.

London, Nov. 11.—Several weavers were rendered unemployed by escaping gas yesterday at the Shuttleworth Mill at Blackburn, and the mill had to be closed for the day.

SPENT NEARLY LIFE IN JAIL.

London, Nov. 11.—John Preston, alias George Gooding, who has spent fifty of the sixty-six years of his life in prison, was sentenced at the Guildhall yesterday to nine months' hard labor for stealing hop cots.

TIREDNESS MEANS DANGER

Indicates Faulty Blood and Worn Out Nerves—Build Up or Total Collapse Will Surely Follow

When you're tired all day, bothered by trifles, exhausted with nervousness, be sure there is something wrong.

You need bracing up, and more nourishment in the blood, need a powerful medicine to vitalize the nerves and distribute force and staying power to all over-worked organs.

The most marvelous success is Ferrozone, a nourishing tonic so scientific as to be the admiration of every physician. Ferrozone performs wonders for people in poor health; acts directly on the blood, enriching it with strength and new life that is at once dispatched to all parts of the body. Ferrozone feeds the nerves and vital energies, supplies force, determination and joyous, buoyant spirits.

A case where there was lassitude and loss of strength is told by Mr. David Brown, of post-office box No. 30, Heaton, Ont.: "About a year ago my health commenced to fail. My hands and feet seemed always cold. I felt worn-out and exhausted, weak as a little child. My face twitched. My limbs and arms commenced to lose their sense of feeling and finally my left side was perfectly numb. All my color left. My appetite ran down. Ferrozone was the first to give me any help. I improved with it very quickly. It toned up the blood and started circulation, so that the numbness gradually disappeared. My condition was perfectly cured by Ferrozone, and I have been well ever since. (Signed) "David Brown."

SPECIAL NOTICE.—To get satisfactory results be sure you get Ferrozone only. Fifty cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.

THE ALBERTA ELECTIONS

The first Provincial election in Alberta has resulted in a victory for the Rutherford Ministry. Making all due allowance for the power and patronage of the government party without scruple, we are free to admit that an swamping a majority must represent also the free expression of the will of a large body of the electors, and if the electors choose to prefer the Rutherford Government, on personal or party grounds, nobody else has a right to complain. The mere party aspects of the contest, in any case, are of little general importance. The people of Canada generally are interested in the question of Provincial rights, and of Federal interference in local elections. It is said that it was difficult to concentrate the attention of the electors on these questions, because of the prejudice against the Canadian Pacific Railway, with which Mr. Bennett was rightly or wrongly identified. If was represented that a victory for the Bennett party would mean a blow to the Grand Trunk Pacific, would injure its credit, and perhaps prevent the enterprise from being carried out.

Whether Alberta is governed by a Ministry calling itself Liberal or by a Ministry calling itself Conservative is a matter of little importance to the people. But it will be unfortunate if the result shall give encouragement for further encroachments on Provincial Rights; for the further interference of Federal politicians in Provincial elections, or for the further use of the Grand Trunk Pacific as an agency for making votes. Experience, however, shows that the champions of local liberties win out in the long run. The Sandfield Macdonald Ministry, which was a creature of the Ministry at Ottawa, was short-lived, and was soon succeeded by a Government that successfully defied Federal interference and encroachment. Either the Rutherford Government or some other local government will eventually take the same position of independence, and it is a matter of no importance for or against which set of politicians that principle is asserted.

In Saskatchewan the prospects of the advocates of Provincial Rights are generally believed to be better, owing to the position and career of Mr. Haultain, and the Liberal support which he has obtained.

THE NEW TITLES

It is hinted that the list of names submitted for birthday honors at the hands of the King was blue-pencilled at censored at Rideau Hall, names stricken out of it and others inserted. This might be readily surmised from a glance at the list itself, even if no admissions were made by anybody in the secret.

It is scarcely in keeping with self-government that the Canadian Ministry should present a list and have that list ignored, some names being erased and others inserted — the judgment of the Ministry invited and yet the advice tendered being partly accepted and partly rejected at will by the Governor-General. It might be better for the Administration to refrain from furnishing any list at all.

REV. DR. CROTHERS MAKES REPLY

He Answers Rev. J. W. McColl, of St. Peter's

ISSUES A CHALLENGE

Rev. Gentleman Speaks of Conditions in Spain

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—A letter appeared in your local contempories of the 7th inst., criticising certain statements made by me in a sermon of the previous Sunday, and also mentioning two other clergymen. The Rev. Mr. Langfeldt I am quite sure is able to fight his own battles and I shall make an effort to defend myself.

From the heading of the letter I expected there would be some curious reference to history, but instead we are treated to a number of assertions without any argument to support them. The letter indeed, as an attempt at argument, answers itself, but as my silence might be misinterpreted I beg to offer a few remarks.

I wish to commend the Rev. W. J. McCool for coming out boldly over his own signature. No man with any self-respect can afford to notice anonymous scribblers, whose impertinence is only equalled by their ignorance.

The Rev. Mr. McColl tries to make it appear that Ireland is much superior morally to England, Wales and Scotland. Now I love Ireland. It is the home of my fathers but I am sure the reverend gentleman must have overlooked the history of the past twenty-five or thirty years. The Agrarian Crimes, The Phoenix Park tragedy, The Reign of Terror, and other crimes that have cast a blot on the country not ever all Ireland, but even the South and West. I was not discussing Ireland, however, but I did compare countries where the Roman Catholic Church has had supreme power, with those countries where liberty of conscience is enjoyed, to the very great advantage and credit of the latter.

The comparison by the Rev. Mr. McColl of England with Spain is interesting. England with a population of thirty-two millions ($2,000,000) in round numbers. Spain with a population of eighteen millions (18,000,000). England with great ports, the haven of the political refugee from all lands. It is not surprising that there should be more paupers than in Spain, still Rev. Mr. McColl gives us no statistics upon which to base a comparison. Were I in Spain the probabilities are this letter would not appear. What would happen I cannot say, but nothing could if the Church had her way, but he should remember that Spain has gone down from being one of the great powers in days of old, to a position akin to bankruptcy, while England has risen in morality, intellectually and materially. The Rev. Mr. McColl then touches on colonization. He refers to India and speaks about famine and pestilence. Is the government of Great Britain responsible for the outbreak of the plague or for the course of the winds? Can it command the sun and the shower? Has not the Imperial Government done wonders in irrigation, road building and other public works to give employment to the people? Would Mr. McColl have India sack under the old regime when France, Spain and Portugal had their trading fleets, with the widow ruthless idol ravages, infanticide and other evils, which have been smart away by British legislation? But the reference to the Philippine Islands is the most unfortunate.

To refresh your correspondent's memory I will quote from the tenth (10th) edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, Volume 31, page 658:—"The history of the Philippine Islands shows that nearly the whole period of 327 years of Spanish dominion was one of continual strife and discord, between the clergy, the military and civil powers and the natives. The perpetual struggle for supremacy between the crown officials and the monastic orders, the immorality of the clergy, the feuds between the respective communities, the constant influx of penniless Spanish adventurers and the venality of the officials towards both laymen and ecclesiastics form instructive reading among the nations." I could say more, but I do not care to rake over rubbish heaps unless compelled. Austria in them benighted years. I now quote from the law. Dr. Whitelaw, Toronto, a traveller of repute, and I believe a member of the Royal Society of Canada. He calls Austria just now, "The storm center of Europe." No ruler in Europe wears a more unwieldy crown than does Francis Joseph."

"Eighty-nine (89) per cent. of the population of Austria and fifty-one (51) per cent. of Hungary are of the Roman Catholic religion."

The Roman Catholic Church has had a grand opportunity, yet ten (10) millions in Austria and nine and one-half (9 1-2) millions in Hungary can neither read nor write. If ignorance be the mother of devotion these people must be very devout. The reference of the reverend gentleman to Mexico and South America are of a similar character. He says the Protestant settlers of the United States slew the aborigines, while the Roman Catholics civilized and christianized the Mexicans and South Americans. If the early settlers of the United States could be more cruel than the early discoverers of Mexico and South America I give them. (See Prescott's Conquest of Mexico), and the latter writer must have forgotten the horrid cruelties of the Inquisition in Mexico and South America. I would refer my fellow-priest to the way of remembrance. I have already taken too much space, I will conclude by referring to the closing part of the letter, when the Rev. W. J. McColl, probably through excitement, descends from the high tone of the former part of his letter, to personal abuse. I now give him an opportunity to verify it. I challenge the Rev. W. J. McColl to print in either of the evening papers the name of a single member of George street Methodist Church who has adversely criticised my utterances of last Sunday evening, and to give proof that I have "lost prestige with my people," or that I need "to rectify any muddle." Either he placed too much dependence in his informant or he had made a too generous demand on his imagination. I await with interest the revelation of the name. I will not accuse Roman Catholics as the reverend gentleman states. I entertain what respect for many Roman Catholics, and have some kind friends among them, but I reserve to myself the right to consider matters of history in my pulpit, even when they may possibly affect my Roman Catholic friends. We live, I am glad to say, in a land of freedom, and now I conclude by suggesting to the Rev. W. J. McColl that he do not excitedly rush into print without considering his authorities and that he express suitable sorrow for this relation of his church to the Massacre of St. Bartholomew's day. The efforts of the Armada. The bloodlab acts of Alva in the Netherlands. The horrid cruelties of the Holy Inquisition and the Gunpowder Plot, and that he adjust himself and his methods to the 20 century. I will then join hand in hand with him in saving men, and will esteem it an honor to propose his name as a member of the Peterboro Ministerial Association.

Yours truly,
W. J. BROTHERS.

Dear Sirs,—As you are aware a party of Americans spent their late vacation at Harwood, Ont., and incidentally played a game of base ball with the team from your city, and incidentally becoming very much enamoured with the product of your brewery while at Harwood.

Could state that just at present we value your beer very much. So much so that we have interested our friend Mr. Tim. A. Ryan in your products, and he would consider it a great favor if you would quote him your jobbing rates, by the gross, packed in sugar barrels (quart bottles) f.o.b. at Peterboro. He would also like you to give him sole agency for Rochester and adjoining territory for your products. Also give us an estimate of freight rates from Peterboro to Rochester, N.Y.

Protest by Newfoundland

St. John's, Nfld., November 9. — The Government of Newfoundland has forwarded to the British Cabinet a formal protest against United States vessels hiring Newfoundlanders outside of the three mile limit, or in Canadian ports, to assist in taking herring in Newfoundland waters, on the ground that this is an evasion of the letter and the spirit of the treaty of 1818, which concedes the in-shore fishery privileges only to actual inhabitants of the United States. The British Government has transmitted the protest to Washington.

A Scene in Tully's Store

Yesterday morning quite a sensational scene was to evidence at Tully's drug store. Mr. Charles Griffin, a gentleman advanced in years, gave the occupants of this popular dispensary a bad scare. He was sitting on a chair when he suddenly collapsed and fell to the floor. It was thought at first that he was dead, but he soon revived and was taken to his home at 257 Stewart street in a cab.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7.50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 1500x1500 feet. The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

Placers.—Placer claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases for dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent. collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

BLOOD DISEASES

If you inherited or contracted any Blood Disease you are never safe unless the virus or poison has been eradicated from the system. At times you see alarming symptoms, but live in hopes no serious results will follow. Have you any of the following symptoms? Sore throat, sores on the tongue or in the mouth, hair falling out, aching pains, itchiness of the skin, sores or blotches on the body, eyes red and smart, dyspeptic stomach, mental weakness, enlarged glands. Don't trust to luck. Don't ruin your system with the old fogy treatment—mercury, potash and patent medicines, which suppress the symptoms for a time only to break out again when happy in domestic life. Don't let quacks experiment on you. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT is guaranteed to cure you. OUR GUARANTEES ARE BACKED BY BANK BONDS that the Blood or Skin disease will never return. Thousands of patients have been already cured by our NEW METHOD TREATMENT for over 20 years, and no return of the disease. No experiment, no risk—not a "patch up," but a positive cure. The worst cases solicited.

The New Method Treatment Cured Him after Drugs, Mercury, Hot Springs, &c., all failed.

Before Treatment — After Treatment

Wm. H. Patterson, of Saginaw, Mich., relates his experience: "I do not like notoriety and especially of this kind, but I feel I owe it to people to let Drs. K. & K. for the good they have done me. I had a serious blood disease, taken 50 cures at once. The only and beneficial result was ulcers formed, running sores broke out, hair became loose, pains in the bones and joints, digestive stomach, sore throat, boils, chills, etc. I tried doctors, for one to say I had to have the looks of one. I visited Hot Springs twice for four months each time. It helped me temporarily, but as soon as I stopped I was as bad as ever. Finally a Doctor friend of mine advised me to see Drs. Kennedy & Kergan. He said he had known of them for over 20 years, and as they made a specialty of these diseases and treated the worst cases by the New Method they ought to be expert in curing them. I was afraid of advertising doctors, but I took his advice. They agreed to treat me under a guarantee or no pay. I investigated their financial standing and found they were perfectly responsible. I commenced the new method Treatment. The eruptions disappeared in two weeks, the bone pains in four weeks and in four months I was entirely cured. Yes, sir, I can recommend the New Method Treatment for Blood and Skin Diseases."

A TANGLED WEB

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

Author of "Beaton's Bargain," "His Perfect Trust," "By Another Name," "Her Heart's Idol," "Half a Truth," "His Rival."

"You have something unpleasant, some bad news for me, Nora?" he said. "Out with it, dearest, I am not afraid."

"Yes! something very unpleasant, a very unjust letter, from Lady Dorrington. If you will let my hands go, I will give it to you."

"Is that all?" in a tone of relief, as he released her. "I fully expected Isabel would be about as disagreeable as could be managed."

Nora took the letter from her pocket and gave it to him. She could hardly stand, so deep was her agitation. She sunk into the chair near which she stood, and watched Marsden while he read.

His face expressed no great emotion; a slightly contemptuous look, an occasional frown, that was all.

"Well! there is nothing very tremendous in this," he cried, turning to his fiancee and leaning his arms on the top of a high chair opposite her; "it is a most improper letter, and I shall insist on Lady Dorrington making the fullest apology to Mrs. L'Estrange and yourself. But she can not forbid the bans, or interfere in any way, so you need not trouble about her preposterous nonsense."

"But, Clifford, I can not help troubling! I am distressed about Mrs. Ruthven. Of course I know very little about her, or how you stand with her, but I did think that time at Evesleigh you intended to marry her, and perhaps she thought so too?"

"My dear girl, you can no more understand a woman such as Mrs. Ruthven than you can read Sanskrit or Amharic. She can't do without lovers, admirers I should say, and as an attentive host I was bound to supply her needs."

"But were there not others who would do as well as you?"

"None would have quite the same effect as the bachelor master of the house. My darling, is it possible that your Honor me by being jealous?"

"No, Clifford, I am not jealous—but—but—I wish—you could, without too much pain, gratify Lady Dorrington and give me up."

"Ah! I see, magnanimity, not jealousy, is your line."

He kept his light tone, but his eyes darkened, and his face grew hard.

"I want—I want you to listen quietly, Clifford," she returned, feeling her mouth parched and scarcely able to utter the words she forced herself to speak. "You will be angry but I feel I ought to tell you all that is in my mind."

"I am always glad to listen to you," said Marsden, giving her back the letter and throwing himself on the sofa.

"Don't you think, Clifford, there is some truth in what your sister says? If you need Mrs. Ruthven's fortune so much, and I suppose Lady Dorrington knows, is it not foolish to increase your difficulties—to—to vex your only near relative, who loves you so much, by marrying a girl who is willing to give you up if it is for your good?"

"It is the magnanimous trick, then? Magnanimity which I suspect does not cost you much," said Marsden bitterly.

"Clifford," said Nora, determined to be brave and honest, feeling her courage reviving with the sincerity of her resolution, "I will be true, though it hurts me horribly to speak the truth to you. You ought not to throw away every consideration of prudence, perhaps duty, for the sake of a girl who does not, can not, love you as you ought to be loved for making such sacrifices. I ought not to have promised what I did. Can you ever forgive me, if I beg of you to give up the idea of marrying me? I should disappoint you, I fear I should?"

"Forgive you!" repeated Marsden quietly. "Never!" His hand, which lay on the sofa cushions, clinched itself tight. "If you persist in breaking with me, if you attempt to beggie me—but you are too wise, too kindly! My sister talks of what she does not understand. I certainly will not attempt to reside at Brudleigh, and there open my house to the county for some time, but I am by no means in the straits she imagines or invents; and even if I were, no amount of fortune, no advantages would atone to me for you—I love you—I want you—and nothing shall separate us."

"But, Clifford, shall you be happy with me, if I can not love you as you do me?"

"Love as I do!" cried Marsden, starting up to take a hasty turn, and throwing himself on the sofa again. "That you never can! Nature forbids it! but you shall be my wife, and give me what tenderness you can!"

Nora began to feel indignant at his tone.

"If you really loved me, you should think of my happiness as well as your own."

"I do! I only care to make you happy! But I don't want any one else to make you happy. Nora! it can not be possible that after your solemn promise to me, you want to draw back? There is something I do not understand here; something more than Isabel's letter."

"Her letter brought on a climax; but I have been uneasy for some time, frightened at the responsibilities I was going to undertake; frightened at my own want of affection for you; though I do like you, and I am miserable at making you unhappy!"

"Then save your misery and my unhappiness! Marry me; marry me willingly—for marry me you must."

"Are you so resolved?" asked Nora, changing color and feeling shrinkingly faint.

"I am; even though I think I have hit on the solution of the riddle," said Marsden, rising and confronting her. "You may not love me; but you love some one else!"

Nora was silent. Falsehood in any shape was abhorrent to her, yet surely in this case truthful love could she confess her weakness! Marsden's eyes, full of deadly rage, were fixed on her. "I am right? You do not reply!" Then, Nora, with a sudden flash of courage, determined that all concealment should be swept away. "You are right, Clifford," she said, coloring crimson, throat and cheeks and ears. "But I thought I had got over it all, that it would trouble me no more; and I do humbly pray you to forgive me for deceiving you, as well as myself."

"Forgive you! of course I forgive you, my sweetest, my darling!" he exclaimed. "I only want you to love me now. If you will but give me the fragments which remain, I am satisfied! I will even bless that solemn rectangular prig Winton, for trampling the divine pearl of your tenderness under his feet, so that it may come to me in any shape."

"Why do you imagine—what makes you think of Mr. Winton?" faltered Nora, vaguely distressed by his tone, and shocked beyond description at the notion of having betrayed herself.

"Who else could it be? Unless, indeed, some very juvenile affair, with a Teutonic baron or graf abroad," he laughed harshly. "I do not mind Winton. He never could love as I do. He has a sort of chilled-shot attachment to your pretty stepmother, which may—"

"There you are mistaken," interruptured Nora quickly. "Which of the two Wintons did you believe her engaged to?"

Marsden turned and looked sharply at her. "You have been exchanging confidences with Mrs. L'Estrange?" he said.

"I have received hers."

"It was Black Mark Winton who was for a while engaged to her; but your friend was attached to her too!" returned Marsden.

"You told me—you implied—he was engaged," murmured Nora.

"Oh, I see. You mean I deceived you? I really can not remember what I said—only what I believed. But that is of no consequence. I want you to understand me, Nora. I will not give you up. I hold you to your promise. Keep it, and I'll

DECLARED ILLEGAL

Court Decides Against Head of Ottawa Fire Department

Ottawa, Nov. 8.—Judge O'Meara gave his decision yesterday in the case of Forde vs. Ottawa, an action to have the payment of Fire Chief Prevost's expenses to the Duluth convention declared illegal. The city gave the chief $100, which he drew in quick order before an injunction could be served. Mr. Justice O'Meara declares that the payment was illegal, the money not being for civic business. It now remains to be seen whether Mr. Forde will follow up and sue the aldermen for the money. Four teen voted for it, and besides the $100 there will be another $100 costs.

LADY FLORENCE DIXIE PASSED AWAY

Death Closes Career of Remarkable English Woman

London, Nov. 8.—Lady Florence Dixie, the well-known writer, explorer and champion of woman's rights, who acted as war correspondent for a London paper during the Boer war, died today at her home, Glen Stuart, Annan, Dumfriesshire, Scotland.

Lady Florence Dixie was born in London on May 24, 1857. She was the youngest daughter of the seventh Marquis of Queensbery. She wrote poems in her childhood under the pseudonym of "Darling," and her writings and poems of her later days are well known. Horses and dogs were her best friends. She was a fine rider and advocated the cross-saddle for women. Though an excellent shot, she decried shooting as an amusement, writing many time against it.

Lady Florence Dixie was a keen champion of women's rights. She was actively opposed to the Land League, though advocating Home Rule for Ireland. Owing largely to her influence, Catshwayo, the captive King of Zululand, was restored to liberty. She travelled extensively and explored the unknown wastes of Patagonia.

CALCASIEU PARISH

LOUISIANA. U. S. A.

The richest oil region in the world. Quality the finest ever discovered in the South or West. An opportunity for the investing public to get in on the ground floor of a proposition that will bear the strictest investigation.

Calcasieu parish and more especially TEXAS North-west of Lake Charles, Louisiana, U.S.A., are considered by Oil Experts and Geologists to be the seat of primary deposits of the GREATEST OIL BEARING LANDS IN THE WORLD.

Derricks are springing up as if by magic and drills working day and night are sinking deeper and deeper into the oil beds buried in MOTHER EARTH.

There are wells in this parish that are producing from 2,000 to 50,000 barrels a day, and the price is now 65 cents a barrel.

Capital Stock and Holdings

The Union Oil and Sulphur Company, of Sioux Falls, S. D., U. S. A., was organized on the 10th of June, 1905, with a capital stock of $750,000.00, represented by an equal number of shares of the par value each of $1.00; it owns in fee simple 240 acres, and has 637 acres leased, making it one of the strongest companies in the United States.

Location of Property

It lies along side the Kansas City Southern Railroad, is only one mile from the Houstan River, and is within three miles of the GREAT SULPHUR MINE.

To Further Develop the Field

This company are now offering to the public some of their stock at the low price of Forty (40) cents a share, this is ABSOLUTELY NON-ASSESSABLE STOCK, this company is absolutely out of DEBT, and all subscriptions go towards the development of the property.

The sale of this STOCK has been placed in the hands of the firm of

THOS. PATERSON & CO.

PETERBOROUGH, ONT.

I offer, subject to prior sale, 52,002 shares of the Capital Stock of The

Oxarna Gold Mining Company

at the "Ground Floor" price of TEN CENTS A SHARE, (none has been offered for less), par value $1 00, fully paid and non-assessable

The OXARNA GOLD MINING COMPANY is capitalized at $1,000,000.00, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1.00 each. The Oxarna Stock was originally all in the treasury, no preferred or promotion stock having been issued by this Company, and up to the present time only 332,500 shares of their stock have been issued.

The OXARNA COMPANY own by United States Patent and Deed, 142 Acres of highly mineralized land in the Famous Thunder and Custer Mountain, Idaho districts, and over $12,000,000.00 net has been realized by the Mines in our immediate vicinity. One of the Mines contiguous to our property on the north has produced $4,000,000.00 and five veins of this rich ore parallel on one of our claims, and by about 2,000 feet of shafts, tunnels drifts and upraises the OXARNA COMPANY have uncovered over $1,000,000.00 worth of ore, and they have a large amount of ore in the ore bins and on the dump that averages over $57.00 a ton, and they expect to be in position to Mill not less than 100 tons of ore every day in a very short time, but if they only Mill 30 tons a day in less than one year they can pay 100 per cent. on the par value of the stock out standing in dividends, for they expect to have less than 600,000 shares of the stock on the market when they are fully financed.

The Oxarna Company have purchased a Mill all fully equipped and ready for business, that originally cost about $15,000.00, and they owe a balance of $5,000.00 on this Mill that will be due in three months, and in order to raise this amount quickly I am privileged to make this most liberal offer, for the stock is easily worth par today, for the time is rapidly approaching when the Company will be on a paying basis and the stock will become immensely remunerative in the near future.

Subject to prior sales I offer the above allotment on the following terms: 4 per cent. discount will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order, or subscriptions will be accepted on the installment plan, 1-4 of the amount with the order and a like amount in 30, 60 and 90 days. Make all orders payable to the undersigned or remit through the NATIONAL BANK of Delphos, and they will forward stock subject to your order.

Personally I advise you to get all of this stock that you can pay for during the next three months, for it is an exceedingly good investment. For further particulars call on or address,

Britain Will Build

World's Most Costly and Mightiest Battleship

The British are about to begin the construction of the largest, heaviest, most powerful and most costly battleship ever built, and intend to have the pennant flying from her mast within sixteen months after the date on which the first keel plates are laid.

This invincible and invulnerable war vessel is to be named Dreadnought, and the British Admiralty has designed her to be capable of equaling her name.

In gunpowder the Dreadnought is designed to be the most formidable warship ever seen, yet her guns will not be numerous. It has become more and more apparent that it is the big guns on a battleship that decide the battle—everything else being equal, of course.

In 1905 the United States and Germany were equal as to battleships of over 10,000 tons. Each had four; the United States had the heaviest ship in the Iowa, of 11,346 tons. Germany's four were uniformly 10,700 tons. Now Germany has eighteen heavy battleships and six building. The United States has twelve, with thirteen building and two projected. The heaviest German battleships today are her 11,000-ton class; the heaviest in the United States is the Connecticut class, 16,000 tons.

The wars of the United States with Spain and Japan with Russia have not been without their lessons to the naval powers, and the tendency is to build larger and heavier battleships, so that they may carry more tremendous batteries. The determination to build these enormous ships was arrived at only after considerable discussion. It was thought by some naval constructors that more units, each of considerable power, were to be desired above a few battleships of the greatest power.

COULD CONTROL OF C.P.R. BE OBTAINED

Sensational Rumors That Americans Are After Our Great Highway

IS AN IMPOSSIBILTY

Would Cost a Sweet Penny to get Hold of Stock Enough to Oust the Canadians

Montreal, November 4. — The stock market was full of rumors yesterday that the Hill-Morgan interests had captured the C. P. R.

A prominent New York wine merchant, for one, is estimated to have had in his possession at least 100,000 shares of Canadian Pacific carried in bankers' offices.

If it were possible for Mr. Hill to secure control of Canadian Pacific he would thereby have come to dominate the railroad situation on this continent to a degree never before dreamed of.

In railroad circles, and more especially in Canadian Pacific circles, it is not believed to be possible for either Mr. Hill or any other American interest to secure control of Canadian Pacific. The reasons that underlie this belief may be outlined as follows:

In addition to about $101,000,000 of common stock there are outstanding over $37,000,000 of preferred stock, which may be increased to $50,000,000 at the will of the directors. It would be absolutely impossible to buy even a very small proportion of this preferred stock at the London market, which is the only market where it is traded in. The Wall Street Journal points out that to buy control through the common stock it would be necessary to secure over $70,000,000 of the stock.

In the case of a stock as narrow as Canadian Pacific has always been, it is extremely improbable that over 50 per cent. of the issue as it stood on July 1, 1904, and about 70 per cent. of the issue as it stands today could have been picked up in the market. Canadian Pacific stock has always been extremely well distributed, over 16,000 security holders having been on the books of the company at the last report.

In addition, it is doubtful that any syndicate of American bankers or railroad men would undertake to control the great Canadian railroad highway. Such a step would mean that immediately all the political, municipal and individual efforts of Canada and its people would be directed against the Canadian Pacific.

THE NEW GOVERNOR

Sergt. Leach Will Probably be Successor to Capt. Lawler

Winnipeg, Nov. 9.—The post-office and several stores at Franklin, Man., were destroyed by fire.

The Northern Bank, with headquarters at Winnipeg, opened its doors for business yesterday.

Messrs Oliver and Cross addressed an audience of 6,000 people in the Thistle Rink, Edmonton last night.

It is understood that Sergt. Leach will succeed the late Capt. Lawler as Governor of the Provincial jail.

Judge Perdue, at the Fall Assizes, charged the grand jury in the election cases against R. E. A. Leach and others. He reviewed the cases at great length.

POKER GAME CAUSES A DUEL

Two Travelling Salesmen Quarrel and Kill Each Other

Tehula, Miss., November 9.—"You're a liar." The words came as the finale of a poker game in which Jake Glenn, of Greenwood, Miss., denied the accusation of W. A. Spratlin, of Memphis, that he had been cheating.

Half an hour later both men were dead—shot in a street duel with 44 caliber pistols.

The men were drummers. Spratlin was about 50 years old, while Glenn was about 25. They met in a leisure hour at Tehula and sat down to a quiet game of poker. Luck went against Spratlin, and he accused his companion of cheating. Glenn denied the accusation, and the bitter words that led to the shooting followed.

Glenn went to a hardware store and purchased a pistol. Spratlin went for his weapon to his room. They met on the street in front of the Wilson house, and Glenn again asked Spratlin to recall his epithets. His tone was void of menace, but his manner was determined. In reply, Spratlin, who had his weapon drawn, opened fire. He sent four bullets through Glenn's body, causing death in two minutes. Glenn drew his pistol after he was down and fired two shots, either of which would have proven fatal to Spratlin. Spratlin died twenty minutes later.

Exceeds First Estimate

Montreal, November 7.—Wheat deliveries along the Canadian Pacific Railway system indicate that the estimate of the grain crop made early in the fall of 40,000,000 bushels will be far surpassed. Already deliveries exceed 35,000,000 bushels, as compared with 11,500,000 bushels at the same period of last year.

Mourners There But No Funeral

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 9.—A Milwaukee despatch says the mother of Miss Cora Simmons, who was lost with the steamer Kaltuga, bodies from which have come ashore near Southampton, Ont., was informed that her son's body had been recovered and was on the way home. Friends and pall-bearers, who gathered for the funeral on Sunday, were finally informed that the report was a blunder, as the body had not been found. At the time all flags on vessels in the harbor were at half-mast. The shock has had a very serious effect on the mother, and fears are entertained for her recovery. Simmons was to have been married on his return from the trip married on his return from the trip on which he was lost.

No New Trial for Mrs. Chadwick

Cincinnati, Nov. 9.—Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick has lost her last hope for a new trial, unless the Supreme Court of the United States shall consent to allow a rehearing. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday refused her application for a new trial.

Mrs. Chadwick is now in the jail at Cleveland under sentence to the Ohio Penitentiary for ten years, having been indicted and convicted of conspiring to defraud under the national banking law.

A trip around the world in 60 minutes at a mere trifle.

Laughable, interesting and exciting scenes from every land--A trip around the world at almost no cost.

Scores upon scores of people are daily taking advantage of our very liberal and decidedly interesting offer.

Magnificently finished and exquisitely photo-color views in place of the oldtime and antiquated views of the past. A most pleasant and interesting hour to spend journeying around the globe viewing the places of greatest interest, most beautiful scenery, etc., at a mere trifle of cost through our liberal plan. These views illustrate some of the most noted places in the world—mountain scenery both in America and Europe—waterfalls and other famous natural phenomena, some of the world's most famous buildings, places of historical interest and places famous for beautiful architecture or beautiful natural scenery. This set is of the greatest educational value, presenting, as it does, such realistic likenesses of scenes and places that we all should know about. We want every household in this city to have one of these sets. Imagine yourself taken through the Orient, on a trip to California, through the world's Fair to see the splendid scenes as though you were right there on the spot. By a special process, a combination of lithographing and half-tone work, we are able to offer a collection of colored views from every part of the world in the most beautiful, natural and startling life-like color effects, which must be seen to be appreciated. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and beauty of these views. Come and see them. We want each and every household in this city to have a set of these.

The most beautiful scenes from every land, among which are the following:

Yellow Stone Park, U. S. A.; The Swiss Alps; On board a Russian Man-of-War; Scene from a Klondyke Camp; The Famous Ferry Depot, San Francisco; Cathedral from the Grand Canal, Rotterdam; Moulin Rouge, Paris; Street Scene, Mexico City; Emperor Wm. II Inspecting a Regiment; Chickamauga Park; Cotton Plantation Scene; On the Pike at the World's Fair, St. Louis; Holiday Street Scene Parade in Havana, Cuba; Scene Showing a Public Well, Pekin, China; Lookout Mountain; Steamboat Scene on the Mississippi; Garden of Gethsemane, Palestine; Scene Showing the Famous Southern Trestle; Hauling Trains Through Mountains in the South; The National Capitol at Washington, D. C.; The Pantheon at Rome; Victory Monument; Leipsic; Luna Island at Niagara Falls; David's Judgment Seat, Jerusalem; Interior View of President Diaz' Palace, Mexico; Ostrich Farm, Egypt; Royal Gardens, Dresden, Germany; (very beautiful), Palm Garden, Frankfort, Germany; Morro Castle, Havana; Plaza, World's Fair, St. Louis; Bird's Eye View of St. Louis Exposition; The Tomb of Gen. Grant, N. Y., Street Scene of Cairo, Egypt; Street Scene in Venice, Italy; Japanese Royal Garden Scene; Zoological Garden at Berlin, Germany; Ice Cave at Niagara Falls, N. Y., etc., etc., besides dozens of comic, sentimental and interesting views of every nature. These pictures are the genuine Oleo Stereoscopic Views, made especially for this purpose and are executed in a most artistic manner, being a combination process of lithographing and half-tone work enabling a magnificent depth of detail and splendid color reproduction true to life. You cannot enjoy an hour more delightfully than by viewing a set of these beautiful and decidedly interesting pictures.

It wasn't so very long ago that hundreds of thousands of people spent many pleasant hours with the stereoscope, but heretofore they were compelled to pay enormous prices for views, think of it, as high as 50c each for colored pictures. We sold thousands upon thousands of stereoscopic views, in colors, at 50c each in those days, but imagine each and every view had to be colored by hand. In the past few months we have had repeated demands for them, and being able to secure the latest and most beautiful colored views to furnish to the public at a ridiculously low price, we entered into the stereoscope plan on quite a large scale, and have taken immediate advantage of the International Art Association, who have spent an enormous amount of money to get out special color plates and have finally completed their end, namely: To place on the market thousands of magnificent stereoscopic views, the most beautiful, interesting and exciting scenes from every land in the grandest and most exquisite natural colors.

Now we come to our great special offer. Read our plan carefully as it describes the stereoscope and tells how to secure the scope and views at almost no cost to you.

First the stereoscope. The Stereoscope is our world-famous "Aluminum Crystal Lens" Stereoscope. Genuine aluminum hood, bound with dark rich red velvet. Frame is of fine mahogany wood with patent folding handle, folding underneath frame, and sliding bar. The lenses are extra fine quality, selected for clearness and brilliancy, 1¾ inches in diameter, ground from best quality glass and carefully adjusted. This Crystal Lens Aluminum "Scope" has won universal praise from lovers of the beautiful, and as a means of entertainment stands second to nothing.

Diseases of Women

OFTEN DUE TO

Deranged Kidneys

When the Kidneys Are Weak It is Impossible for An Woman to be Happy or Healthy

If the girls and women who are silently suffering with what they suppose is "female trouble," would look to their kidneys they would soon find the source of their ill-health.

The kidneys are very closely allied with the female organs and if the vitality of the kidneys is in any way impaired, great suffering is sure to occur.

No better medicine is known for the kidneys than Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Buttermilk; they stimulate and strengthen the kidneys and thereby assist the other organs to do nature's work. Instant benefit and certain cure are guaranteed in every case.

Sufferer, don't wait, begin treatment with Dr. Hamilton's Pills at once and they will cure you as they did Mrs. A. B. Coburn, a well-known resident of the town of Portland. Read her experience:

"For two years past I have been sickly and weak. My color was dull and sallow, and I felt exhausted and weary, as if all my strength were being eaten up with some hidden trouble. I heard of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and decided to use them. The change in a few days was surprising. They regulated my kidneys and bowels and cured all my suffering; to-day I am perfectly well."

Every woman can take Dr. Hamilton's Pills with safety and benefit. Their occasional use keeps the system in healthy, well regulated order. No medicine more gentle or more prompt in results. Now is the time to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box or five boxes for $1, at all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn. U.S.A. and Kingston, Ont.

Stop the Cigarette Habit

Chicago's Chief of Police is a law unto himself. He has begun a crusade against cigarette smoking by boys and is not only stopping boys on the street and pulling cigars and cigarettes out of their mouths, but is advising other people to do the same. Why cannot our local police take a hint from this and stop boys and callow youth from injuring their health and minds by puffing these coffin nails. One of the saddest sights of our streets is a young boy, proudly sucking a foul smelling cigarette, and looking round for admiration over his self-destruction!

—Mr. Andrew Johnston, of Smith, has sold his nine farm to Mr. B. Wood of Peterboro. The deal was put through by Mr. C. Blewett, real estate agent of Peterboro, the price being in the neighborhood of $7,000. Mr. Wood will take possession next March.—Lakefield News.

—A Lindsay man took a smart revenge on his sweetheart after a quarrel recently. She had returned to him all the letters and gifts received from him during their courtship. He, not to be outdone, sent her a half dozen boxes of face powder, and with them a note explaining that he had probably carried that much away on his coat collar.

—A wild cat that got loose in a G.T.R. baggage car between Owen Sound and Stratford on November 1st, made things lively for the occupants, among whom was Messenger Wm. Mathieson, formerly of Havelock. The cat was a monster used by a collar manufacturer for advertising purposes. Mr. Mathieson secured a revolver, but the owner of the feline did not want it shot, and the door of the car was opened and the animal allowed to escape.

Square Timber Unearthed

Yesterday while men engaged in laying a sewer pipe into a house at 441 Charlotte street, at a distance of about four feet below the surface of the street, found a huge piece of square timber running diagonally across the street. The timber which is very long, measures nearly two feet by 1.6 in and is in a good state of preservation. How the timber got there is a conundrum. It probably belonged to a former bridge or culvert laid many years ago.

THE RIVER DREDGED

DREDGE TRENT NOW WORKING BELOW HUNTER STREET BRIDGE

Boats Will Soon Be Able to Land and Carry Away Goods Belonging to the American Cereal Company's Works

Boats will soon be able to land and carry away goods belonging to the American Cereal Company's Works.

As noted in yesterday's issue, Mr. Quinn has recently been appointed to the superintendency of work now being done, in the Otonabee by the dredge Trent.

Mr. Merrick, C.E., assistant engineer-in-charge for this district, of Dominion Government Works, was in town this week and formally took over the Trent from the Department of Railways and Canals for the purpose of doing certain dredging in the Otonabee River.

It might be explained that the Department of Public Works and not dredge on the canal waters. To avoid any difficulty arising from this the Department of Railways and Canals is requisitioned by the former department, and thus places the dredge Trent own at the disposal of the Public Works Depart.

Mr. Merrick made a careful survey of the work front from the C.P.R. bridge to Hunter street bridge, and laid out the necessary work for which Mr. C. H. Rubb, M.P., of West Peterboro, secured the appropriation of $5,000. Yesterday citizens crossing the Hunter street bridge, could and did notice the visible improvement in the river channel, being effected by the Trent.

The dredge worked from down stream, and huge piles of stone and gravel, taken from the river's bottom, are being dumped up along the C.P.R. spur line, just south of the Hunter street bridge. It is easily observable, by the difference of the river's surface, down and below where the dredge is working. Aside this compact little piece of floating machinery, the river's surface flows smoothly, whilst below where the gravel and stones have been excavated, the river flows in a broken manner, rip lets and eddying waves, showing the shallow water as it passes the obstructing rocks and other impediments.

A channel, ten feet deep, and thirty wide, has already been dredged from this bridge to a considerable distance down, notwithstanding the fact that the dredge has only that the dredge has really only been working three days. If the dredge Trent keeps up its present pace for the next ten months it shall have accomplished a large portion of the undertaking. As has been before intimated in these columns, it is the intention of the Department, upon the recommendation of Mr. Rubb, to have the entire river dredged from the American Cereal Company's mills to the C.P.R. bridge, so that barges and boats of all kinds may use that portion of the river for dockage purposes.

COFFEE SLUGGING

A Smooth Artful Worker

Coffee with some people produces partial congestion of the liver and that in turn makes headaches and various diseases.

But if heavier doses of the drug are taken the victim will feel a temporary relief while the effects of the drug lasts.

So with many.

So with a man knocked down with a blow. Hit him again until unconscious and he doesn't realize the pain, the protest nature sets up against hurt. It is a sure road to more and more serious trouble to drag more to try and escape the penalty. The pay day is sure and Mother Nature must be paid in full. An experience in illustration comes from Pa.

"For a long time I have been a great sufferer from headaches and nervousness; would wake early in the morning in such pain that I thought it would be a privilege to die. At times it would be a violent sick headache, at others severe nervous headache.

"I often consulted my physician but he could give me no relief—medicines did me no permanent good.

"In the meantime I had learned that two or three cups of strong coffee, would relieve my attack or lessen its severity; also, that when I did without coffee the headache was sure to come on.

"I got worse and worse and was so nervous that the least noise drove me wild. I told the doctor about this one day, and he at once said 'You ought never to drink coffee!'

"At the same time he advised me to try Postum Food Coffee, saying it was used in his family. I quit the old kind of coffee at once, and began on Postum, which proved to be, when made right, a most palatable and delicious beverage. At once began to improve and now I need only to say that during the years I have used it I have been completely restored—my headaches are gone, my nerves are steady, the constipation that used to trouble me, no longer does so. I have increased in weight and my brain is clear and quick."

Mastodon or Mammoth?

Mr. Burnham, who yesterday inserted the enormous mass of ivory on exhibition in "Mac's" tobacco store window, George street, pronounced it the tooth of a mammoth elephant, not that of a mastodon, as noted in the explanatory card accompanying this unique curiosity. The opinion of so deeply read a gentleman as Mr. Burnham cannot be gainsaid. This, however, does not detract from the value of the tooth as a curiosity, as both animals were practically synchronous and lived over 3000 years ago. Great interest is being taken in the exhibit.

ATHLETIC WORLD

BY OUR SPORTING EDITOR

THE TURF.

As much interest was caused among local sportsmen by the recent successful attempt made by Dan Patch to break the Canadian pacing record, in Toronto. This wonderful pacer succeeded at Toronto in lowering all previous records, doing the mile in 1.59. This race against time was won on a half-mile track.

Now he has done even better than this on a mile track at Memphis, Tenn. The Buffalo Horse World of latest issue, received yesterday, says:

"After a struggle lasting for several years, Dan Patch, the great son of Joe Patchen succeeded in having a record of 1.59 1-4 placed to his credit at his side, placed opposite his name at Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 3. Dan Patch has made this time before, notably at the recent Lexington meeting, but on all previous occasions he went in fast, but had a poor performance and did not go to his credit.

"At Memphis Dan Patch was sent to beat 2.00 and his performance was therefore a winning one and will stand as a record.

"The timers of the mile were Murray Howe, Ben White and Ed. Geers and all three watches held by the official timers recorded the same figures, 1.59 1-4.

"The fractional time was .30, .59 1-2, 1.29, 1.59 1-4.

"Accompanied by two runners one behind him and one at the side, Dan Patch scored once and then, turning only a short distance up the track the big pacer came thundering by and Hersey gave the nod that he was ready.

"'Go,' yelled Starter Howe and on the instant a dozen watches in the timers' stand clicked.

"It took 15 seconds for the pacer and his pace-makers to get to the eighth pole and an even 30 to reach the quarter.

"Then the pace-maker let out a link and the second quarter was reeled off in .29 1-2. "If he can hold it, he'll win, was the comment of the experts, and hold it he did—for another quarter at least, reaching the three-quarter pole in 1.29.

"Finishing out the last quarter Dan Patch came with all the gameness which has made him the world's greatest pacer, but he could not quite hold the wonderful clip he reached through the middle quarters and it took him .30 1-4 to finish out the last long 440 yards.

"A round of applause went up from the grand stand when the figures were flashed from the timers' stand and the public knew that the mark of Star Pointer, which had stood for so long, had at last been equaled.

In order to assure the "regularity" of the meeting Friday two races were decided during the afternoon. The first one was a crawling match between a couple of two-year-old pacers, which was eventually won by Hal Billy, driven by Fisher.

"The other race was a mile dash which was won by Frank A.

"The champion will make one or more other attempts to beat 1.59 1-4 within the next week and with good weather conditions he is expected to succeed.

* * *

Dr. Archer, a prominent gentleman of Port Perry, Ont., will campaign the good pacer Minnie A. through the ice racing circuit this winter. Last winter the mare was only by Blackbird and Orillia Bell two exceptionally fast pacers, and in good hands, ought to be a racing queen in the slow classes this season.

* * *

Mr. Eddie Andrews, a clever knight of the sulky, of this city, will take in the Canadian ice races this winter with a good stable. He intends locating at either Toronto, Lindsay or Peterboro for a few weeks to condition his horses properly. He has a green trotter which will be heard from in the $1,000 stake at Ottawa.

EXTRA!

OBITUARY

Funeral of Mr. Edward Pym

A large funeral, under auspices of the Orange Order was held in Port Hope yesterday afternoon. Mr. Edward Pym, an old and widely respected conductor of the G.T.R., who died in Hamilton, was interred in the Union cemetery. The late Mr. Pym, leaves to mourn his loss, a wife and large family, all of whom are grown up. Several Peterboro citizens went down to attend the funeral.

Death of Chas. Dunn

The death occurred late last night of Mr. Chas. Dunn, who has been an employe of the Auburn Woolen Mills for many years. Deceased had been ailing for some weeks and his death was not wholly unexpected. He leaves a wife and family. His mother and several brothers and sisters also survive him.

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 370 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 18,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $300,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 20 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $20,000.00 to $50,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividend and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.00 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 10 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1904 produced $18,511.56 per hour, every hour, day and night. Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $32,600.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER.

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock as they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

Gold Bug Stock

Has been withdrawn from the market by the Company. There is none of it for sale except a small block on which I have an option. This stock I am placing at 20 cents per share. 100 shares will cost you $20.00. In my judgment it will sell for 60 cents per share on the open market inside of 90 days. The papers of Oregon say that the rich find of ore in the Gold Bug mine is the greatest sensation known in the State in many months. Hon. George A. Newman, Assistant adjutant General of Iowa, has just been to Sumpter, visited the Gold Bug, bought heavily of the stock, and on his return tells me it has the finest ore and is the best looking property he saw any place in the West.

I give Bank references, the very best. I sell every share of this stock on honor. If you want 100 shares send $20.00 to the Mechanics' Savings Bank, Des Moines, telling them to turn the money over to me when I deliver the stock, to be sent to you. If you want 1,000 shares send $200. Everything about the Gold Bug is legitimate. It is now one of the richest mines of the North-West. We think that the first dividends will be paid in January or February, 1906, and you will see this stock selling at $1.00 per share on the open market in less than one year. Five strong veins, much of the ore literally sprinkled with free gold. Let me tell you about it more in detail. Address,

Vigorous Reply to Rev. W. J. McCall

Rev. E. A. Langfeldt Writes a Dignified Letter ---In Catholic Countries Public Morality is Not Up to Standard of Protestant Communities.

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Sir,—Although Rev. Dr. Crothers will be quite able to attend to Rev. W. J. McColl's statement made in local evening papers, I am glad to have the opportunity of getting into touch with the reverend writer, who has dropped the "silent contempt" and has at last entered into the arena for public discussion. Apparently the gentlemen on St. Peter's hill are annoyed and stirred up, and have taken to writing and interpreting history to suit themselves. Being used to having their utterances accepted as gospel by their own people they imagine that the Protestants are likewise enamored by their sayings and no argument is needed to convince them. At any rate, liberty of conscience permits me to investigate and to believe independent of priestly interpretation.

The reverend gentleman makes this statement: "If he (i. e. Dr. Crothers) wishes to compare them (Roman Catholic countries) from a moral point of view, he need not go outside the British Isles, as it can easily be shown that Ireland, morally, is much superior to England, Scotland and Wales." Naturally as a Roman Catholic priest he looks to the faithful daughter of the R. C. Church, Ireland, to prove this statement. But then he does not prove it; he merely makes a statement without proof, as he has made denials without proof. At any rate we want something better than his statement. The public, I suppose, is acquainted with Mr. Michael McCarthy's books which exhaustively deals with the "Church, priest and people" in Ireland. If not, I would recommend them to read, learn, mark and inwardly digest these books in order to appreciate the influence of the Holy Roman Church in Ireland. Very likely, however, this Mr. McCarthy will be looked upon by Reverend W. J. McColl as being an outcast and a "liar," because he happens to be a Roman Catholic of independent thought and of courage to speak the truth, even when it hurts the Roman Church. Yet in spite of the want of appreciation of the man from that quarter, his books are widely read and he, as a man, is appreciated by all intelligent and independent people, and he stands today in full communion with the Roman Church, as does also Father Crowley, who revealed the state of affairs in the Roman Church in Chicago.

I fully appreciate my position as relating to Rev. W. J. McColl; my words are wasted as he does not believe, therefore, I must store his mind with quotations from his co-religionists. I take Mr. McCarthy's book, "Priest and People in Ireland," and quote from it in order to show the moral superiority (?) of Ireland. I do it at the risk of having heaped upon Mr. McCarthy and myself the wrath of the Holy Roman Church:

Page 1.—"I observe that in all those countries where a high degree of prosperity exists, where manliness of character is predominant, whether in North Europe or North America, there is one universal cause wanting, which is present with us in Catholic Ireland, and that is priestcraft. Priestcraft is not rife in any of those countries. And where the religion professed in some of those countries is the Roman Catholic religion, I find that the priest had been deprived of all secular power, both in education and politics. The present friend of events in Roman Catholic France in MOTOROUS. In Paris chapels and convents are to let." Commissions in the Army are by War Office Regulation, given to students educated at secular schools in preference to those educated at clerical schools.

"It appears to me then, that the priest in power is a universal cause, omnipresent in Roman Catholic Ireland, but which is wanting in all those other prosperous countries. All the other causes to which our wretchedness is at various times ascribed—drink crime, politics and so forth—are present in those countries, but priestcraft is notable by its absence. I am forced to the conclusion, then, that it is fully for us, Roman Catholic Irishmen, to deceive ourselves by attributing Catholic Ireland's degeneracy to causes which are but secondary and are found not incompatible with progress and prosperity elsewhere. It is sacerdotal interference, and domination in Catholic Ireland beginning in the infant school and ending with the legacies for masses after death, that will be found to be the true and universal cause of that universal degeneracy which we so commiserate ourselves."

Page 70.—"A Roman Catholic American speaking the other day in Dublin said: 'I have not seen a clean church since I came to Ireland.' He had been at mass in many Dublin churches and the dirt and discomfort of them amazed him."

Page 209.—"Picture to yourself the condition of the poor Catholic men and women and children of Ireland—the tens of thousands of them in the Catholic quarters of Dublin, in the swamps of Connaught, in the morasses of Munster—into whose minds the light of truth may never enter, and remember that we better class Catholics have been coerced by the priests into delegating all responsibilities for our poor brothers and sisters to the priests' organization in Ireland. Upon the rich priests with their sham crosses, and upon them alone, rests all responsibility for the condition of the Irish Roman Catholic poor, whose helpless and contentious misery in the midst of peace and plenty is discussed and wondered at all over the world."

Page 213.—"Our general morality is deteriorating as well as our sexual morals, while we thus continue to stray farther and farther away from the simple virtues of Christ. We make a meaner display before the world now than at any anterior period of our history."

Page 213.—"But have we any real weight in Parliament? Are our members, representing, as they do, the priest-educated intelligence of Ireland, respected or powerful? On the contrary, nay it not be safely said of them, without any uncharity, or any reflection on their personal characters, or any fear of genuine contradiction from any reputable quarter, that they stand for the lowest watermark of intellect and capacity ever recorded by the public men of Ireland in the councils of the nation."

To show the esteem in which the priesthood is held by the better classes, I quote from page 188.—"The sons of professional men hardly ever become priests, the sons of the gentry never. Even the sons of well-to-do shop-keepers and farmers will not become priests."

This and much more portrays to the world the moral and material condition of Roman Catholic Ireland, that country for which, according to Rev W. J. McColl, the Roman Church has done so much to give it its present "prestige."

I must not trespass any longer upon your space except that I wish to say that if the reverend gentleman wishes to hear something of South America and other countries under the auspices of the Roman Church, I am prepared to give him statistics. Mr. McCarthy's writings are widely circulated, the book to which I referred has had its fourth edition, and his statements have never been attacked. The habit of Rev. W. J. McColl of merely decrying things or as he expresses himself, "to give him in his throat the lie," might be language worthy of the reverend gentleman, but there is no argument in it. Abuse is the weapon of a man conscious of a weak case. Yours,

E. A. LANGFELDT.

A SAD CASE

Police Searching for a Boy Who Claims Bad Treatment.

Yesterday morning a local citizen walking along Aylmer street met a boy. This is neither unusual nor extraordinary, but this particular boy attracted the citizen's prompt and sympathetic attention.

To quote the citizen's own words, "The boy looked sick, half starved, and did not have enough clothes on him to wad a gun."

He at once stopped the boy and enquired into his history. The lad said he was nearly starved. Upon hearing this, the citizen took him into the Montreal House and purchased him a square meal.

The lad said he had been working for an Otonabee farmer, who abused and kicked him severely. He also said the farmer kept him nearly starved. The police, whom the citizen promptly notified, at once tried to find the boy to ascertain full and truthful particulars as to his treatment in Otonabee. If found, and the story proved to be true, the boy will possibly be advised to prosecute.

COBOURG'S GOAL

A New and Handsome Building to Replace Present Crowded Antique

Cobourg Post: Warden McLean evidently intends to lose no time providing a new gaol for the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham. On Wednesday, Mr. R. W. Bruce Smith, Provincial Inspector of Prisons, was in town on the invitation of the warden and inspected a number of sites the counties has secured options on. While a new and modern gaol would be quite an addition to our already handsome public buildings, it may not prove a boom to the town of Cobourg. We understand there is a desire in some quarters to have the new building sufficiently large enough to provide space for the counties' offices, council chamber, etc. If such a plan was carried out the town of Cobourg would lose a revenue of $1456, the sum now paid by the counties yearly for rent of offices. Nothing definite as regards a site has been done, but the fact that Warden McLean has called an early session of the council (November 30th) is evidence that the counties intend to proceed with the erection of a new building at once.

The Battle Ground of Modern Thought.

The Chicago Record-Herald has conceived the unique idea of assigning a page of its Monday edition to the public for the free discussion of important questions of the day. Under the head "The Battle Ground of Modern Thought," an opportunity is offered to the public for the same discussion of all problems engaging the attention of the American people. Writers of ability present their views on subjects not generally treated in the daily press, and Record-Herald readers generally are invited to join the debate. The fairest, most forceful and original contributions are published. The following are a few of the subjects which have been discussed since this department was first established:

"Is Blacklisting Within the Law?"

"Trusts and the Proper Way to Regulate Them."

"Great Peril That Besets Pagan China."

"Liquor Trade and Its Evil Consequences."

"Are Free Books Wanted in Public Schools?"

"Inhumanity to Animals."

"New Struggles for the Negro."

The Record-Herald disclaims any responsibilities for the dogmas upheld, the theories advanced or the panacea advocated. It reserves the right only to remove entirely to keep out personalities and rancor and to see that good temper and candor characterize the discussions.

ATHLETIC WORLD

BY OUR SPORTING EDITOR

HOCKEY.

Over 50 enthusiastic players, and lovers of Canada's national winter game, on Wednesday night, assembled in the spacious parlors of the Oriental Hotel, in their annual organization meeting.

If Wednesday night's meeting was any index of the interest hockey will hold in the public mind of Peterboro, this season, the locals will have all the encouragement they could desire.

Throughout the whole meeting there was absolute unanimity of opinion; not a voice was heard saying anything that would tend, in any way, to embarrass the game or players.

Mr. A. A. Hollingsworth, who has so ably for the past two years, occupied the position of president, retired. He assured those present, that although not holding any office in future, his friendship and sympathies would ever be with the club.

Mr. Hollingsworth's successor, Mr. Ernie Weaver, it is needless to say, is the right man in his predecessor's retirement. For the place, and a wiser choice could not have been made.

The secretary-treasurer, Mr. C. G. Graham, then presented his annual report, which was most satisfactory, showing that last season the receipts of the club were $2,704.41 and the expenditures $2289 less, the latter amount being the credit balance now on hand. Last year about $1,800 was received as proceeds from games, and at the close of the season there were sufficient funds on hand to purchase trophies for the players, of which fact all the friends of the team were pleased to learn. The assets of the club at the present time are over $400, consisting of $250 in stock in the Peterboro Hockey Club, Limited, and team equipment.

The election of officers took place and resulted as follows:

Patrons and Patronesses—Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Morrow, Mr. and Mrs. W. Denham, Mr. and Mrs. H. LeBrun, Mr. and Mrs. E. Eardley-Wilmot, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. John Crane.

Hon. President — A. A. Hollingsworth.

President—W. E. Wasson.

First Vice-President—W. Crowley.

Second Vice-Pres.—F. A. Clarke.

Sec.-Treas.—C. G. Graham.

Executive Committee—Jas. McCabe, Geo. Lynch, Harry Morgan, Dr. Wightman, R. M. Glover.

Auditors—W. J. Green, Ross Jamieson.

Delegates to O.H.A. meeting—C. G. Graham and A. W. Macpherson.

SHERBROOK STREET SEWER

Work Now Done from C. G. R. Co. Works to Park Street.

There is a large gang of men now engaged in putting in the Sherbrooke street sewer pipes. These large pipes are now laid and covered up, from the Canadian General Electric Works as far as Park street. The sewer will extend along Park street as far as Charlotte street. In turning from Sherbrooke to Park street, it will be necessary to tear up the street railway track, to enable the pipes to be laid. This will probably only interfere with the Street Car Company's service for about 24 hours.

The sewer will then be run along Park street.

To See it is to Want it.

Every person who sees the picture, "Queen Alexandra, Her Grandchildren, and Dogs," at once exclaims "Where can I get a copy?" "Isn't it a beauty?" etc., etc. It certainly is a beauty, far ahead of anything we have yet seen in the premium picture line, and the publishers of the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal deserve credit for it. The few copies already received in this section are greatly admired. It is a decided change from pictures of former years. It goes, we understand, absolutely free to all who pay for a year's subscription to the Family Herald and Weekly Star. The paper and picture at that price is a marvel of cheapness. A picture dealer would easily ask two dollars for the picture alone.

Hot Biscuits, Griddle-Cakes, Pies Puddings.

The food that made the fathers strong is sometimes unfit for the children under the new conditions that our changing civilization is constantly bringing in. One of Mr. Bryan's neighbors in the great state of Nebraska writes:

"I was raised in the South, where hot biscuits, griddle-cakes, pies and puddings are eaten at almost every meal, and by the time I located in Nebraska I found myself a sufferer from indigestion and its attendant ills—distress and pains after meals, an almost constant headache, dull, heavy sluggishness by day and sleeplessness at night, loss of flesh, impaired memory, etc., etc.

"I was rapidly becoming incapacitated for business, when a valued friend suggested a change in my diet, the abandonment of heavy, rich stuff and the use of Grape-Nuts food. I followed the good advice and shall always be thankful that I did so.

"Whatever may be the experience of others, the beneficial effects of the change were apparent in my case almost immediately. My stomach, which had rejected other food for so long, took to Grape-Nuts most kindly; in a day or two my headache was gone, I began to sleep healthfully and before a week was out the scales showed that my lost weight was coming back. My memory was restored with the renewed vigor that I felt in body and mind. For three years now Grape-Nuts food has kept me in prime condition, and I propose it shall for the rest of my days.

"And by the way, my 21-2 year old baby is as fond of Grape-Nuts as I am, always insists on having it. It keeps her as healthy and hearty as they make them." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. There's a reason.

Many Persons Have Catarrh of Kidneys, Or Catarrh of Bladder and Don't Know It.

President Newhof and War Correspondent Richards Were Promptly Cured By Pe-ru-na.

PRES. C. B. NEWHOF, Suffered From Catarrh of Bladder.

Mr. C. B. Newhof, 10 Delamare street, Albany, N. Y., President Montefiore Club, writes:

"Since my advanced age I find that I have been frequently troubled with urinary ailments. The bladder seemed irritated, and my physician said that it was catarrh caused by a protracted cold which would be difficult to overcome on account of my advanced years. I took Peruna, hardly daring to believe that I would be helped, but I found to my relief that I soon began to mend. The irritation gradually subsided and the urinary difficulties passed away. I have enjoyed excellent health now for the past seven months. I enjoy my meals, sleep soundly, and am as well as I was twenty years ago. I give all praise to Peruna."—C. B. Newhof.

Suffered From Catarrh of Kidneys. Threatened With Nervous Collapse. Cured by Pe-ru-na.

Mr. F. B. Richards, 609 E Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., War Correspondent, writes: "Exactly six years ago I was ordered to Cuba as staff correspondent of the New York Sun. I was in charge of a Sun Dispatch boat through the Spanish American War. The effect of the tropical climate and the nervous strain showed plainly on my return to the states. Lassitude, depression to the verge of melancholia, and incessant kidney trouble made me practically an invalid. This undesirable condition continued, despite the best of treatment.

Finally a brother newspaper man, who like myself had served in the war, induced me to give a faithful trial to Peruna. I did so. In a short time the lassitude left me, my kidneys resumed a healty condition, and a complete cure was effected. I cannot too strongly recommend Peruna to those suffering with kidney trouble. To-day I am able to work as hard as at any time in my life, and the examiner for a leading insurance company pronounced me an "A risk."

In Poor Health Over Four Years. Pe-ru-na Only Remedy of Real Benefit.

Mr. John Nimmo, 215 Lippincott St., Toronto, Can., a prominent merchant of that city and also a member of the Masonic order, writes:

"I have been in poor health generally for over four years. When I caught a bad cold last winter it settled in the bladder and kidneys, causing serious trouble. I took two greatly advertised kidney remedies without getting the desired results. Peruna is the only remedy which was really of any benefit to me. I have not had a trace of kidney trouble nor a cold in my system."

Pe-ru-na Contains No Narcotics.

One reason why Peruna has found permanent use in so many homes is that it contains no narcotics of any kind. Peruna is perfectly harmless. It can be used any length of time without acquiring a drug habit. Peruna does not produce temporary results. It is permanent in its effect.

It has no bad effect upon the system, and gradually eliminates catarrh by removing the cause of catarrh. There are a multitude of homes where Peruna has been used off and on for twenty years. Such a thing could not be possible if Peruna contained any drugs of a narcotic nature.

When Commons Will Meet

Ottawa, November 9. — There have been no new developments to indicate when the House of Commons will meet. In all probability everything depends on what progress the Tariff Commission makes in the next month. Even if the Government should decide to adhere to the original policy of revising the tariff at the next session, the house will meet not later than February 15 or 20. There would be some preliminary business to dispose of, including the adoption of the address in reply to the speech from the Throne, and the tariff schedules would not be pressed for before early in March.

New Switch Board Connected Yesterday

Peterboro, by Successful and Quick Work, Now Has the Most Perfect Switch Board in Canada Working Satisfactorily.

Yesterday one of the quickest, most intelligently managed and generally satisfactory telephone switch-board changes that Canada ever saw, took place in the local Bell Telephone Company's office on George St.

To in any way adequately appreciate the magnitude of yesterday's job, the reader should know that every subscriber's telephone is connected by two wires to the back of the switch board, where the various connections desired are made.

In this city there are 714 working telephones; this means that for actual connection of subscribers, there are 1428 live wires running into the back of the switch board. In addition to this comparatively small matter to attend to when changing the whole system from one switch board to another, there are scores of other details, in connection with each and every subscriber's set of wires, that had to be, and were handled without a single telephone in the city being disconnected, losing time, or having a word of conversation interrupted.

Every subscriber's phone has a lightning arrester attached to his wires as they enter the switchboard.

To fully comprehend the almost miraculous deed wrought between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. yesterday one should see the seemingly numberless maze of wires handled so accurately and quickly.

At 11 o'clock yesterday morning, the 714 subscribers, or those who desired to, were talking to one another through the old switch-board, and by supper time yesterday evening, the old board had been stripped of its wires, and removed to another room, out of the way, whilst the subscribers were talking over the new and handsome new switch board.

Mr. Heath, the local manager of the company with his progressive courtesy and pluck showed the Times man through the office, and patiently tried to knock a few ideas concerning the new board into the long-suffering human brain and head of our representative.

THE NEW BOARD.

The new board, which is the most complete and perfect now in existence, leaving every new device known to long-haired science, incorporated in it, is a handsome cherry structure, containing eight sections, and so arranged that other sections of equal standard capacity can be added from time to time.

Judging by the state of telephone matters in this city, and the ever increasing popularity of the Bell Telephone Company's service, it will not be long before even the new switch-board will have to be augmented.

NEW WRINKLES.

A few of the advantages possessed by the new board are as follows:

On and after this date, when one wants to call the central office, one has not to touch the bell handle of your instrument; the moment you lift the receiver from your hook, the central is notified. To show more clearly some of the new devices in connection with the board placed yesterday, we will describe what takes place the moment your receiver leaves the hook. 1st, a "Hot Lamp," at the section containing the calling subscriber's number flashes forth a warning; not only this but a white disc shows a hole in the black portion of the board, corresponding to the caller's number. The moment the operator "plugs in," connecting the calling wire the called wire, and a similar white disc comes a hole corresponding with the caller's number. Thus the operator, without "plugging in," can tell at a glance when and how long the instruments are connected. When the two speakers end their talk, and hang up their receivers the white discs automatically disappear. Another new "wrinkle" is that in case a subscriber after talking, or by accident leaves his receiver hanged down, a "buzzer" loudly warns the subscriber, reminding him of his omission.

The board is divided into six local and three long distance sections. In the new board every operator makes any desired connection asked for on the board, not requiring as on the old board, to call in the service of another operator when the numbers to be connected are a long distance apart, in different sections; this will save subscribers considerable time.

For people having two or three phones on the one line, a great amount of trouble will now be saved. Under the old system, in such cases, when one of the phones were called by the central office, each telephone would ring; the different phones being distinguished by varied number of rings, say one ring for one phone and three for another. With the select party signal attachment of the new board, only the particular telephone bell wanted will ring.

The operators were yesterday supplied with a head attachment, very light and simple, which combines the hearing apparatus, as of old, with a portable transmitter; this saves the operator a lot of trouble and tiring stooping.

A full set of batteries was yesterday installed, with a motor for charging them. All phones will now use the storage batteries located in the central, instead of having individual batteries. The new system including motor of 1 1-2 horse power, bank of storage batteries, pole changer, power panel, by which all electric energy and power will be supplied, is perhaps the most compact and perfect in existence.

Mr. J. Hardwin, of Montreal, the Bell Company's electrical manager, with Mr. Dean, local manager, Mr. Geo. Jackson, the local telephone expert, assisted by a staff of eight men, worked like beavers all day yesterday, and by six o'clock, with large sheets, cut the thin copper wires connecting, by cables, the two switch boards.

For weeks past, to avoid any trouble to subscribers, whilst finally changing the switch boards, and working altogether through the new one, the hundreds of wires, of the old board, THAT THOUGH APART, TO WIRE CABLES had been connected with corresponding numbers on the new, at a given signal yesterday evening, men armed with sickers, finally divorced the two boards temporarily connected by cables.

This morning the company will begin their work of changing the long-distance telephones of the town, and putting in the most modern plans. These now using the older instrument, the Blake transmitter, will retain such instruments. There will be no appreciable delay caused whilst making these changes. We congratulate Mr. Dean on his splendid work of yesterday.

DON'T RING THE BELL.

Telephone users can save themselves a deal of time and trouble after this, by remembering that it is unnecessary to ring for central. Simply take the receiver off the hook, place it at your ear, and get busy.

OTHER TOWNS INVITED

Co-operation Wanted When Tariff Commission Sits Here

It has been decided by the Board of Trade to invite the co-operation of the Boards of Trade of a number of the towns in this district in connection with the coming sitting of the Royal Tariff Commission to this city, and Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, secretary of the local Board has written letters to the Boards at Cobourg, Port Hope, Deseronto, Belleville, Campbellford, Lindsay, Barrie, Orillia and Trenton. The letter is as follows:—

Peterboro, Nov. 10, 1905.

Secretary Board of Trade—

Dear Sir,—Re Tariff Commission.—It has been arranged through the influence of Mr. R. L. Hall, M.P., that the Commission will sit in our city at an early date, as in a letter recently received by him from Mr. John Dunn, secretary of the Commission, he particularly advises that the attention of our Board of Trade should be called to the importance of having representations made respecting those particular items of the Tariff, in which our members and our local imports and export merchants are most interested. The fact that some of the items in the tariff are satisfactory does not imply that no representation should be made with reference to them, as representations may have been made in other quarters which it would be necessary and advisable to refute. We would suggest that your Board, along with the others near Peterboro interested in this matter should consolidate and have your representatives wait on the Commissioners here in order to strengthen our cases for our mutual benefit. Will you kindly advise me if this proposition meets with your views and will be entertained by your Board? If so I will write you as to date of meeting, etc. In order to do an export trade, transportation must be considered as well as the tariff, and we would therefore suggest that your Board should embody, in your representations, views of opening of Trent Valley Canal, in conjunction with the tariff question.

It is absolutely necessary that strong evidence and clear and concise statements of facts in all cases should be properly presented to the commission.

Would it not be further advisable to interest your Member of Parliament and have him attend the Commission, with your representatives?

An early reply will oblige.

Yours faithfully,
T. Q. QUARTERMAINE,
Secretary.

Police Court

OFFICIALS
Chief of Police, G.A. Reed
Magistrate, D.W. Dunlop

A Lakefield drunk raised a row at the G.T.R. station. It cost him $4.50.

Henry Brown, the aged cooper, who learned his trade, and incidentally his love for the glass that disconcerts a man's thinking machine from his legs and brains, was up before His Worship Saturday morning. The magistrate, on being told by the prisoner, that he, the prisoner, was on a educational tour, for lack of funds, to procure the necessary passward, for Belleville, allowed Henry to proceed, giving him a marked hint that Peterboro was not gathering bequests or medals to present him, should he extend his present visit.

Yesterday afternoon P. C. Adams placed a Swede, in the cooler for having imbibed beyond his carrying capacity. Up to going to press the Swede had not recovered sufficient of his wits to give his name or any particulars. He spent last night, with his head resting on a carpet satchel, and his feet on a jute bag presumably full of clothing. He will appear this morning at 10 o'clock.

RUGBY

Peterboro Defeated Brockville by a Score of 17 to 11

The local Rugby players on Saturday added still another branch to the laurels of victory they are already the possessors. The Peterboro team seems invincible. On Saturday, before a tremendous audience at Brockville, they showed the St. Lawrence rugbite punchers a few points on the game, and carried away the team's scalp at their belts. The game at the final call of time stood 17—11 in favor of Peterboro.

Prince Arthur of Connaught May Return From Japan Via Canada

London, November 12.—Prince Arthur of Connaught will likely be the next royal visitor to Canada. He is proceeding to Japan as the King's deputy to invest the Mikado with the Order of the Garter, and has expressed a wish to return home via the Canadian Pacific route.

Steamer in Dangerous Plight

The crew is suffering great privations in the extreme cold.

WORLD'S PEACE AGAIN DISTURBED

The Congo Question Now Becomes Very Acute

BRITAIN AND GERMANY

May Come to Blows Over This Great Problem

Berlin, November 12.—In consequence of the strained relations existing between Great Britain and Germany, the "Congo question" has become acute, and may create a danger to the world's peace more serious than that afforded by Morocco, according to a well informed Berlin diplomatist.

The Cape-to-Cairo Railway has already passed Victoria Falls in the Matabeli, but England no longer wishes to continue the line through German East Africa and must decide for the Congo Free State, according to this authority. He adds that the alleged atrocities of King Leopold of Belgium in the Congo territory, will be taken as a pretext for an Anglo-French bargain, giving France the northern part of the Congo and England the eastern part. The German Emperor, it is believed, will not be disposed genuinely to observe this arrangement, which leaves Germany out of the consideration.

The British and French governments have prepared a vast amount of testimony to demonstrate that the present regime in the Congo territory cannot continue.

At the Congo congress, which will shortly be assembled, the Fatherland will do its utmost to check the proposed Anglo-French move.

STARVED HIMSELF TO DEATH

Mounted Police Forced Feed on Doukhobor Without Avail

Ottawa, November 11.—The Mounted Police Department has received from Inspector Genereux, at Prince Albert, a report in the case of the Doukhobor named Alex I. Panamaroff. This man was committed to gaol for wandering all over the country, deliberately starving himself to death. Food in the shape of milk, soup, a pound and a quarter of peanuts and one apple daily was forced upon him, but he eventually died of starvation.

WHEAT RECORDS BROKEN

Nearly 30,000,000 Bushels Have Already Been Shipped

Montreal, November 11. The deliveries of wheat at the elevators in the North-West, along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, continue to be much in excess of previous years; in fact, more wheat has been marketed during the past ten weeks, that is, from September 1 to date, than was marketed during the whole of the twelve months ending August 31, 1905. The figures are: September 1 to date, 27,854 bushels, corresponding period last year, 13,560,000 bushels, twelve months ending August 31, 26,500,000 bushels.

No less than 19,120 cars equivalent to one big train 120 miles in length, have been despatched from the elevators in the North-West eastward to Port William, as compared with 9,000 cars during the corresponding period of 1904.

WOMAN LEADS IN GOLD CHASE

Party Leaves Salt Lake in Search for Mysterious "Lost Mine"

OPERATED BY HUSBAND

Property Said to Contain Enough Gold to Pay the National Debt

Chicago, November 11.—A dispatch to the Record-Herald from Salt Lake City, Utah, says:

Led by a woman, a party organized to search for a "lost mine," said to contain enough gold to pay the national debt, left this city yesterday for the Uintah Indian reservation. The search is for the famous "Rhodes Lost Mine," and the widow of Caleb Rhodes, its discoverer, declares her husband told her on his deathbed the secret of its location. It is regarded as certain that such a mine exists.

For many years Caleb Rhodes lived luxuriously from the proceeds of secret trips to extract from the mine some of its fabulous golden treasure. How he discovered it never was learned. Each time he went away empty handed and returned with a quantity of gold. When he needed more he disappeared again. No one ever was able to follow him or learn of the location of his treasure trove. Mrs. Rhodes is confident that she can lead the searchers to the spot, and show them the most valuable gold mine ever discovered on this continent.

The opening of the Uintah reservation makes it possible for Mrs. Rhodes to go to the mine and obtain a government patent on the claim. In the party are Thomas Rhodes, brother of the discoverer; Joseph R. Sharp, a mine foreman, and Dr. A. W. Dowde, of Sunnyside.

Rhodes' stories of his mine are corroborated by F. C. Hathenbruck, of Provo, who declares he has been to the spot, having been taken there blindfolded several years ago by Rhodes.

IMPERIAL SERVICE MEDALS

Thirteen Canadians Recognized for Long and Meritorious Service

Ottawa, November 13.—A cablegram to the Governor-General announces that imperial service medals have been conferred upon the following-named persons upon retirement from employment under the government after long and meritorious service: Patrick Sargent and Charles Calrens, letter carriers, Toronto; Patrick Clarke and Antoine Isaie Bissonnette, letter-carriers, Montreal; Thomas B. S. Austin, letter-carrier, Hamilton; Edward Kenny, farm instructor, St. Vincent de Paul, Montreal; Honore Robillard, light-keeper, Isle Perrot; Pierre Boulaise, light-keeper, Lak Island, Que.; Edouard Simard, light-keeper, Montee du Lac, Que.; A. Custer, lockmaster Williamsburg Canal; James Todd, lockmaster, Rideau Canal; Richard Higgins and C. B. Hare, lockmasters, Welland Canal. About four hundred recommendations were sent in.

DARROCH IS PRESIDENT

Annual Meeting of O. H. A. Held in Toronto Saturday

A very large number of delegates attended Saturday's meeting of the O.H.A., held in the Temple Building, Toronto.

Great interest and enthusiasm was observable everywhere, and a bright prospect for Canadian hockey is now assured.

The retiring president, Mr. John Ross Robertson, occupied the chair.

The election of officers, particularly that for the presidency, was warmly contested, but Mr. D. L. Darroch was from Dr. Clarke.

The complete list of officers is as follows:

President—D. L. Darroch, Collingwood.

1st. Vice-President—J. C. Makins, Stratford.

2nd Vice-President—F. D. Woodsworth.

Secretary—W. A. Hewitt, (acclamation).

Treasurer—A. W. MacPherson, (acclamation).

Executive Committee—Messrs. L. Dodf, Welland; H. D. Jamieson, Barrie; D. J. Turner, Midland; H. J. Bigue, Toronto.

Mr. Hewitt, the secretary, was voted an honorarium of $100, and Mr. McPherson, the treasurer, $50.

A vote of thanks to the retiring president, Mr. John Ross Robertson, was carried unanimously.

An interesting discussion took place on the proposed amendments to the constitution.

Mr. John Ross Robertson, the retiring president of the association, gave his annual address, which elevated (as) thoughtful and intelligent preparation. He expressed the pleasure his six years connection with the association had given him.

After stating that he was moved by mingled feelings of gain and pleasure at retiring in favor of another man, Mr. Robertson said in reference to a game that specially interested this city:

It gives me great pleasure to record—and it must be a source of satisfaction to you to know of—the large number of games and players in the season of 1904-5. There were subdivided to the senior series in three groups, ten clubs, in the twelve intermediate districts, forty-eight clubs, and in the junior, with ten sections, thirty clubs—in all eighty-eight. About 320 games were played with 4,000 players on the ice. In this great series of games there was but one protested game—Stratford at Woodstock—to be played after the stated time in the first round.

Notable areas in the senior finals between Smith's Falls and the Marlboros. The Toronto team, with a load of five goals, went to Smith's Falls, and left the ice at half-time, realizing that they were unable to continue because of the rough treatment by their opponents.

Smith's Falls records that five of the Marlboros were on the ice at the close of the first half, and could have finished, and that at least four should have come back and finished the game. The Marlboros offered—and did send—two men on the ice, a goalkeeper and a forward, but this was of course, manifestly senseless.

The Marlboros claimed that their other three men were not in fit condition from injuries received, and so the result was reported by the referee to the Executive. The game was one in which for the first time in the history of the O.H.A. sufficient players claimed to be injured, so as to make a burlesque of the game if the remaining players went on the ice.

The fact is that the whole game was characterized by a roughness that it is to be hoped will never again occur in any game of this name. The Referee's report rather agreed with the claims of the Marlboros, and declared the Falls men as deliberately and brutally rough.

The Executive ordered the two to settle the championship in a sudden death game at Peterboro or Kingston, the Marlboros having the choice. The game was played at Peterboro, and the Marlboros won by a score of 9 to 3.

Mr. Robertson advocated the use of stop-watches at matches. He next referred to rough play at matches, instancing the game at Orangeville, coupled with that team's default to Markham.

He also spoke of the changing of goal keepers. This year any one interfering with such officials will be put off.

A proposal has been made to shorten the time of the periods and to have four instead of two. In other words to play games in four quarters instead of two halves, with five minutes between the quarters instead of ten between the halves. It is argued that hockey is such a fast game that a man cannot hold out at top speed for thirty minutes, and this claim is not an unreasonable one.

Mr. Robertson does not approve of raising the annual subscription from $5 to $10.

The secretary's report showed that in 1905, 23 teams entered as compared with 26 this year.

The treasurer, Mr. MacPherson, in his report, said in part;

At the end of last year we had a balance to our credit in the Imperial Bank of Canada, Toronto, Head Office Savings Department, of $1,103.72. After paying all our expenses I am able to report to-day a cash balance in this bank at the end of another year of $1,205.92, an increase of nearly $100 over last year. This year we were particularly fortunate in having a large increase in the receipts from final games. But had it not been for the third senior game at Peterboro, we would be showing a decrease of $100, instead of an increase.

THE LOST FOUND

Peterboro the Scene of a Sensational Discovery Worthy of a Novelist's Plot

Readers of contemporary fiction are well acquainted with cases in novels, when, in a fit of temporary aberration, or from the result of a blow, the hero of leading character of the plot disappears to be discovered later on in full possession of his faculties, and generally as successful claimant to an estate.

Peterboro has recently been the scene of a case somewhat similar. Some weeks ago the local police were in receipt of a communication which reads as follows:

POLICE DEPARTMENT.
Missing.

Eugene W. Lewis; 30 to 40 years old, looks younger; 5 feet 8; weight about 150; light complexion, blue eyes, light brown hair, smooth face, upper teeth gone, lower set poor quality, stands erect and paces off quick when walking. Had on a dark suit and light top coat, sort of a greenish shade, black felt hat. He disappeared from his stopping place October 19th. This man comes from a family of good standing and when he left he had quite a sum of money. Please keep a sharp lookout for the man, and if located notify.

Geo. W. Sylvester, City Marshal.
Portland, Me., November 3, 1905.

On Saturday an officer of the Portland police force arrived in this city in answer to a reply resulting from investigations made by the local chief of police.

Chief Round, working on the description conveyed by the above letter, had located the missing man, as a farm hand working in North Monaghan.

The Portland detective, accompanied by Chief Round on Saturday afternoon drove out to a certain farm in North Monaghan.

A very short interview with the man located by the local police, proved that he was the missing man. He accompanied the officer to town, and arrived here about five o'clock Saturday evening.

As noted in the letter, given above, the gentleman noted, is of good parentage and belongs to a prominent family of Portland, Me. It is suspected that to a condition of temporary aberration of mind, he "left home and after aimlessly wandering about, found employment as indicated.

He and the Portland detective leave for their home this morning.

Bad State of Charlotte St. W.

Charlotte street west, owing to many sewer connections made with houses recently constructed, is absolutely impassible by horses or vehicles. The street should be levelled off, before the snow falls, or residents along it will not have access to their houses this winter. They will have to get their wood, coal and provisions, etc., carried across lots from the next street.

An Ottawa Church Robbed

Ottawa, November 12.—It was discovered on Thursday night that burglars had broken into St. Matthew's church during the night. The poor box was broken open and robbed, the communion wine was drunk, and the surplices thrown about the basement. The thieves secured an entrance by forcing in a basement window.

Commission to Hear Would-Be Suicides

Tom L. Johnston, Mayor of Toledo, Appoints a Board to Sympathise With People Who are Tired of Life--Ehthuses Over Prospects.

New York, Nov. 12.—A Cleveland despatch to the World says:

To stay the hands of the self-destroyers, and to render all possible aid to the despondent, is the object of the Anti-Suicide Commission, appointed by Mayor Tom L. Johnson. Frederic C. Howe, State Commissioner, William H. Greenwood, former probate officer of the juvenile court, and the Rev. Harris R. Copley, member of the Board of Public Service, comprise the commission.

Every person in Cleveland who is contemplating suicide is invited to write a letter to the commission and tell him or her troubles. For those dependent from non-employment the commission will endeavor to obtain employment, while the needs and wants of others seeking aid will be looked after.

MAYOR IS ENTHUSIASTIC.

"It is the grandest work ever attempted here," said Mayor Johnson. "The commission's primary object is to prevent suicides. Suicides and attempted suicides are not always free of insanity, though the fact of self-destruction always suggests it. The increased number of such deaths recently must be considered along with the increase of population and the strenuous efforts necessary to maintain existence today.

"The foreign element, which is growing rapidly, must also be remembered. Immigrants become homesick when the romantic ideas of America brought with them from the old country are dissipated. I think it is safe to say that 60 per cent. of the suicides here belong to the foreign element. Alcoholism is generally the basis of a large percentage of insanity, but I should not connect it to that extent with suicide.

SHOW THE BRIGHTER SIDE.

"This commission will investigate these conditions and wherever possible will render such assistance as we will make the victim of melancholia see the brighter side of life. Each of these men has much experience in sociological work and is well fitted for this particular."

RAILWAY STRIKE TO FORCE REFORMS

Austrian Workers Take This Means of Enforcing Demands for Universal Suffrage

REVOLUTION IS PLANNED

Men will not Abandon Plan to Tie up Traffic Until Government Yields

Vienna, November 13.—Following the example of their Russian brethren, the Austrian railway workers are now preparing for a general strike, as a means of enforcing their demands for universal suffrage. The demand for higher wages is only a pretext, according to the Socialist leader, Pernerstorfer, who stated that the entire system of state railways will probably be tied up within a week. "The movement which began with a demand for a twenty per cent. increase of wages on the Bohemia railways," said the Socialist leader, "has now spread over all Austria. The wage question has been relegated to the background, however, and the men will not abandon their plan to paralyze traffic until the government yields definitely on the question of franchise reform. The strike will be carried out so as to interfere as little as possible with passenger traffic, as the leaders do not desire to incur the displeasure of the general public. The carrying of freight, however will be stopped practically, and as the Austrian factories just now are unusually busy with export orders, the effect upon them will be most serious.

"We must strain every nerve to secure the passage of the universal suffrage bill at the pending session of the Reichsrath, in order that the next election may be held on the new basis.

Premier Gautsch von Frankenthurn wants to postpone all suffrage legislation until the new Reichsrath is elected in 1906, but the whole population of Austria demands that it be rescued from the privileged classes, which now control parliament. The court clique is opposed to our just aspirations, but we will fight it with all legal weapons."

REV. MR. ALLEN GONE

Death of the Venerable Arch Deacon Allen of Millbrook

St. John's church flag, hanging at half-mast Saturday morning, foretold the sad news, for some time since feared, that the Venerable Archdeacon Allen of Millbrook, had passed to his long and well earned rest.

The deceased clergyman, was rector of Cavan, and was one of the most widely known, and most generally respected and loved men in this section of the county. The late Mr. Allen had reached the ripe old age of 84 years, and had been gradually failing for some time past.

He was born in Sligo, Ireland, and came to Canada when a young man. He was ordained in 1847, and began his life's work in the ministry next year.

Previous to his settling in Cavan, he was for a year rector at Portsmouth, near Kingston, and for many years rural dean of Durham.

For 34 years the Venerable Archdeacon was rector of Cavan. The churches under his charge included St. Thomas at Millbrook; St. John's at Ida; Trinity at Fields' Line; Christ at Hallsboro, and St. Paul's Mariposa Chapel. He was one of the three rectors of Cavan and his successor Rev. Samuel Armour, who in 1867 resigned the parish of Peterboro to go to Cavan. For 34 years the deceased travelled from one end of his district to the other visiting his people. There are few families in the neighborhood that remember any other rector than the Venerable Archdeacon.

Succeeding generations of most Cavan families were christened, confirmed for confirmation, married or buried, by this strong christain worker. He was made Archdeacon of Peterboro some years ago, succeeding Archdeacon Wilson, of Grafton.

The late Venerable Archdeacon Allen was the degree of B.A., in 1861; M.A., in 1868, and was given the D.C.L. (Honoris Causa) in 1902 by Trinity University. About four years ago he celebrated his Jubilee, having been 50 years in the ministry.

Rev. W. C. Allen, son of the late Venerable Archdeacon, was appointed rector of Cavan, only a few days ago.

During his curacy in this city, during the years 1877 to 1878, he made many warm friends here.

A wife and family of eight sons are left to mourn the Venerable Archdeacon's loss. Three of the sons are Rev. W. C., of Millbrook, rector of Cavan; John, who is married and lives on a farm near the village, and Harry who resides at home.

The funeral will take place to-morrow.

PETERBORO STREETS

Taxpayers Spending Money for Material and Then Paying for Hauling It Away

On Saturday afternoon, an employe of the city, called a Times representative's attention to what seems, to the inexperienced judgment in the practical details of such work, as a great mistake in the grading of our city streets.

The employe showed him how the staff rested to bed material on our streets, in worse than useless. The material proposed to cover and improve the streets is a mixture of sand and frozen stones, presumably gravel. This mixture it was claimed by a man who has spent the greater part of his life on road work, simply makes mud, that the corporation has within a few weeks, to pay men to scrape off and cart away as mud.

The employe, who is nothing, if not practical, says the city should lay on the streets, crushed stone and gravel, with a slight mixture of sand. After the wheels of busy traffic have ground down such a combination of road dressing, a hard and permanent good roadway remains.

With the superabundant sand used now, a few weeks' traffic turns the street dressing into a semi-liquid mud.

If as stated, the city is paying, enormous sums for inferior material to be turned into mud, and then has to pay for hauling the same away, a radical change should be made at once. What in our steam roller, brought out of the tax payers money used for?

FELL IN THE SEWER

A Man Falls Into an Eight Foot Deep Trench

Two evenings ago as a local citizen at nine o'clock, was carrying home a gaily fair-sized jag, he stumbled and fell WITHIN two feet of killing a hundred sons of Italy and toil, who was working eight feet below the surface of the crossing at Park and Simcoe streets.

As our readers are aware, sewer pipes are being laid along these two streets. To avoid interruption with the local street car service to the C.L.K. Company's grounds, work was prosecuted at night.

A Dinsmore resident of the second ward, after working hard unloading salmon up town, had proceeded to pass the scenes of these civic operations. At the time of his arrival at the crossing mentioned, a walk behind street car was standing right inside the yawning gulf, dug to accommodate the sewer pipes.

Whether blinded by the street car lights or by the inward fires, he did not see the open sewer and plunged to headlong. As he fell the eight feet, he narrowly missed colliding with a swarthy Italian. The Italian did not know what had just missed him, was it a stray meteorite or was the sewer caving in? Recognizing that it was an involuntary exit from the Dinsmore citizen he got mad and said several things; among other things uttered, was heard "Where the H— are you going to?" "Wanta ride an mans?" As it usual in accidents by falling from a small state, the citizen, in his eight foot fall, only sustained a slight bruise on his forehead, and was first out of the trench quicker than he descended.

SET FIRE TO JAIL.

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—The prisoners in the jail at Kirkhaven, Beauharnois, rebelled in a body last night, and demanded their freedom. On their request being refused, the prisoners set fire to the jail. Troops were hurried by the cars, and fired a volley into the quarters of whom twenty-one were killed and many wounded.

HEALTH FOR WOMEN

Mrs. Emma Daigle of Moncton, N B., Sends an Open Letter to All Sufferers.

Most women are tired when they wake up. Housework drags along with great difficulty. Nervousness is always present, headaches seldom depart, tears are ever ready to flow.

But there is a cure, a true specific for women's ills that restored a prominent lady in Moncton, Mrs. Daigle, who tells the following experience:

"About a year ago I had a serious sickness, sort of a general breakdown. My digestion failed entirely and I was able to eat but very little. I took violent stomach pains and suffered terribly from headaches. My doctor said it was "nerve exhaustion" and I might never be well. My troubles increased, for as I grew weaker I became subject to neuralgia and rheumatism. Sleep finally forsook me and I almost lost heart. Different medicines didn't help. Doctors couldn't do me any good. I was desperate when I heard of Ferrozone. The first box convinced me it was just what I needed. It toned up my stomach, gave me a splendid appetite and then my recovery seemed easier. Ferrozone increased my weight several pounds, has restored my nerves, given me a good color and strength such as I never had before. For the weak and sickly I can truthfully recommend Ferrozone." (Signed) Emma Daigle.

REMEMBER: No mere stimulant or alcoholic concoction can take the loss of the nerve and blood nourishment contained in Ferrozone. This true tonic always does what is claimed for it. Sold everywhere in 50c boxes or six for $2.50. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

PETERBORO, NOVEMBER 13 1905

A DANGEROUS PRECEDENT

At a meeting of Conservatives of Lennox and the three ridings of Hastings it was resolved that, "while we "do not advocate the adoption of the "spoils system, yet we do respectfully urge upon the Government that "when our members represent that any "office-holder in their ridings has forfeited his right to retain office, that "such representation should be acted "upon by the Government without requiring further evidence, and that "the responsibility rests upon our "members and ourselves." This resolution is laying down with precision a course exactly opposite to the right one.

The Ministry is responsible for the civil service, and members of the Legislature are responsible only in so far as they support the Ministry, says The News. The party Associations are certainly no part of the government of the country. If it is intended that local appointments and dismissals shall be regulated by local public opinion, it would be much better to adopt the practice of popular election. There are advantages in popular election, and advantages in appointment and dismissal by the Ministry, with Ministerial responsibility. But the plan suggested by the Hastings Conservatives is wholly bad, without a single redeeming feature. The official is to be dismissed without a hearing, his accuser being in most cases somebody who wants the position for himself. Every consideration of justice and of good government is ignored in this proposal. If the Ministry would surrender, it would increase its popularity among the office-seekers, but it would forfeit the confidence of every other citizen of Ontario.

AYLESWORTH ON PENSIONS

The Times is glad to hear Hon. Mr. Aylesworth speak out freely on the question of pensions to public officials and servants. It has so frequently expressed strong views against the entire superannuation abuse, which interested ones seek to force into every branch of the public service, that it rejoices to find its opinions so well voiced by a Minister of the Cabinet. Hon. Mr. Aylesworth in addressing the electors of North York said:

"I want to say on this occasion as a Minister of the Crown, or, speaking as an individual, that personally I am opposed to the whole superannuation system. I can see personally no more reason why a public servant should have a superannuation allowance than any farmer who is working hard all his life, or blacksmith or merchant should have a superannuation allowance. It seems to me that the man who looks forward to a superannuation allowance has before his eyes only a programme of spending from year to year every cent he makes, and no reason for saving or for being economical."

But Hon. Mr. Aylesworth thinks that there may be cases in which the public might well make a grant to a faithful man who had worn out his life in his service and found himself in need. We think his views will commend themselves to a reasonable public. They will bear criticism. We should get rid of the pensions, not only to Cabinet Ministers, but to all civil servants. And we should not be guilty of the folly of trying to engraft on our school system the evil of pensions to teachers. Put in force the good rule of paying full value for services, and then, save as special reward or as charity, let that end the obligation.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Canadians would appear to be considerably interested in insurance scandals in the United States. According to the report of the Dominion Superintendent of Insurance, recently issued, the amount of policies held by Canadians in American companies is $140,-541,566.

The annual meeting of the Toronto Gas Company last week disclosed that while selling gas at 40 cents a thousand feet it pays every year a ten per cent. dividend, allows liberally for all depreciation of property, and put away a heavy reserve. Toronto is not near any gold fields;—why should it have cheaper gas than Peterboro?

The rapid development of Canada is attracting the attention of British public men in a notable degree. During the past summer the number of well known men from the old country who came across for the sole purpose of visiting the Dominion has been particularly noticeable. It was very different in former days.

The salary of the president of the Mutual Life is as great as that of the president and vice-president of the United States, the nine members of the cabinet, the admiral of the navy and the chief of staff of the army combined. Does he measure up to it?

$800 for 24 Acres of Alsike

Mr. C. J. Hancock of the 2d. con. of Smith, last season had 24 acres of alsike, which he threshed this week. The operation took two days, and fifty-seven bags were the net result of the two days' work. The seed was sold to Mr. G. N. Brown, of this city, and Mr. Hancock received the sum of about $800 for his crop, which was about 125 bushels. Fortunately for this respected resident of Smith township, alsike is away up in price this year.

Hunters Return From Jacks' Lake

Dr. Young and W. C. P. Heathcote of Peterboro, and Will Brooks of Young's Point, have returned home. They were hunting with the Stricklland-Hutton party at Jack's Lake, and went out a week ago last Monday and shot four deer. The doctor said yesterday that their luck was only ordinary this year. The weather was hard on the dogs—first frost and snow, then turning mild. However, he said that they all had a good time. Last Tuesday Mr. Strickland sent a fine big buck to Mr. John Marvin. It weighed about 240 pounds.

First Meeting of Bridge Whist Club

The Bridge Whist Club, of this city, met last night for their first session. Miss Pearl Lundy, corner of Aylmer and Dalhousie streets, was hostess, and the six ladies and a similar number of gentlemen present enjoyed a very pleasant evening. The club will take turns as to the entertaining duties of the evening, and it is expected that, in a short time, the members will be able to give golfers to Bogtown.

POLICE COURT NEWS

A gentleman who only carries one arm has, for the past few days been levying contributions, on the strength of a well told "hard luck" story, throughout the city. He is a fake and should have the pass words "six months in the Central," whispered in his ear. The local police have given him a straight tip that a prolonged stay in Peterboro will lead to six months in the Central Prison, Toronto.

Friday night a gentleman stopping in the name of Harry Brown, who hails originally from London, England, the night reclining on the hard side of an elm plank in cell No. 1 at the Hotel des Cops.

Harry, to believe his story, was once a cooper by trade, but of late years, his appearance would indicate a more intimate acquaintance with the contents then the staves of beer and whiskey barrels. Harry has seen 65 summers and as many winters.

He is a bird on Theological argument, and the fuller Harry gets, the more his argumentative abilities limber up.

He applied for and was granted by the chief, lodgings in the "cooler," Thursday night. This would have all passed by without comment or charge. Unfortunately however, yesterday, Harry's fondness for barrel staves, or their contents, got the better of his judgment, and when in a state far from sobriety, he called upon the local officers right in their lair. He was received with open arms and closed cell doors. Harry ran certain matters this morning. Last night, a Times representative tried to awaken the slumbering cooper; but nothing short of a terrestrial cataclysm would have aroused the slumberer. It was computed, that the energy going to waste in his audible and stentorious snores, if reduced to horse power, would drive the wheels of a boiler factory, employing 780 men.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

[1] At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7 50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 1500 feet by 1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

VARICOCELE CURED

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was in order, only he—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than robbers. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy and Kergan, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skilful. He wrote them and got the New Method Treatment for me. My progress was somewhat slow at first during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $18 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $31 and feel like a man. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

The Oxarna Stock was originally all in the treasury, no preferred or promotion stock having been issued by this Company, and up to the present time only 332,500 shares of their stock have been issued.

The OXARNA COMPANY own by United States Patent and Deed, 143 Acres of highly mineralized land in the Famous Thunder and Custer [illegible] districts, and over $10,000.00 worth of work has been done on the Mines in our immediate vicinity. One of the Mines contiguous to our property on the north has produced $3,000,000.00 and five veins of this rich ore parallel on one of our claims, and by about 2,000 feet of shafts, tunnels, drifts and crosscuts the OXARNA COMPANY have uncovered over $1,500,000.00 worth of ore, and they have a large amount of ore in the ore bins and on the dump that averages over $57.00 a ton, and they expect to be in position to Mill not less than 100 tons of ore every day in a very short time, but if they only Mill 50 tons a day in less than one year they can pay 100 per cent. on the par value of the stock out standing in dividends, for they expect to have less than 400,000 shares of the stock on the market when they are fully financed.

The Oxarna Company have purchased a Mill all fully equipped and ready for business, that originally cost about $15,000.00, and they owe a balance of $6,000.00 on this Mill that will be due in three months, and in order to raise this amount quickly I am privileged to make this most liberal offer, for the stock is easily worth par today, for the time is rapidly approaching when the Company will be on a paying basis and the stock will become immensely remunerative in the near future.

Subject to prior sales I offer the above allotment on the following terms: 4 per cent. discount will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order, or subscriptions will be accepted on the installment plan, 1-4 of the amount with the order and a like amount in 30, 60 and 90 days. Make all orders payable to the undersigned or remit through the NATIONAL BANK of Delphos, and they will forward stock subject to your order.

Personally I advise you to get all of this stock that you can pay for during the next three months, for it is an exceedingly good investment. For further particulars call on or address.

gladly devote my life to you. Break it—no, I will not believe that! I'll not think of it! Nora, do not desert me! All the good that's left in me, clings round you. If you shake me off, I know I shall go to the devil, and it will be the worse for you. I [illegible] what I am capable of; I could be damnably cruel."

"Do not suppose you can frighten me," cried Nora, roused to anger by the shadow of a threat. "I care too much for you not to feel infinite pain in disappointing you; but I will not submit to be bullied!"

"Great heavens! You misunderstand me. I do not know what I am saying, Nora! You must not be faithless. Look here, I am utterly dependent on you for my future. I have no hope, no life, apart from you, and I hold you to your promise, as I cling to salvation. On your head be it whatever becomes of me without you! My love! my soul! do not turn from me. I will never give you up! I claim you, whatever happens."

The profound supplication of his voice, the entreaty of his speaking eyes, shook Nora's heart. Had she, indeed, any right to turn from one to whom she seemed so essential?

"Do not decide anything to-day, Clifford," she said in a low voice. She was beginning to feel quite exhausted. "Think over all I have said, and so will I of what you have urged."

"I will do anything you like, save one thing," he interrupted, "but no reflection will change me. I see all this has been too much for you. I will leave you for the present, and in a day or two I trust to find you reconciled to the dreadful alternative of keeping your promise to me."

Nora bent her head in silence, and after looking at her for a minute or two with a glance of mingled anger and admiration, Clifford said with a short laugh:

"Curiously enough, I am summoned to-morrow to see the rival to whom you would [illegible] me over—on business, she says. I wonder if she could invent a bribe big enough to induce me to give you up, Nora?"

He took and kissed her hand, pressing it painfully hard.

"If I did not love you so madly, how I could hate you!" he said between his teeth, and hastily left the room.

CHAPTER XV.

Despite his cool indifference to the opinions and interests of others, Marsden felt that he should be as well pleased that his interview with Mrs. Ruthven was over. It is true that she seemed a mere frivolous, fanciful trifler, much taken up with the outside of things; but instinct rather than any deliberate thought impressed him with the conviction that beneath her pretty exterior was a heart of steel, which would never melt, though you might strike fire from it, and an iron will, tenacious to carry out her purposes, great or small. He knew better than any one else that, a short time ago, he had only to ask and he would have been accepted; and, thinking that such might have been his destiny, he had done his best to prepare and smooth the way. From this, his supreme good luck had delivered him.

Even if he had not fallen headlong in love with Nora L'Estrange, there was much in Mrs. Ruthven which dimly displeased him. She was carefully well-bred, yet her manners had not the indescribable ease or grace of one born in the purple, there was an under-tone of animalism in her tastes and looks; moreover, he shrewdly suspected that fidelity to a husband would be with her very much a matter of accident, though he did her the justice to believe that she would always keep up appearances.

In fact, she was an admirably composed morsel of Paris paste, excellently set and pleasant to the eye, until placed beside a brilliant of the purest water, like Nora.

However, the visit had to be paid, so Marsden made a careful toilet and set out to keep his appointment.

It was some time since they had met, [illegible] Mrs. Ruthven in Paris the previous spring, they had not been so long apart.

Mr. Ruthven was fully dressed in black silk and velvet, with a handkerchief of creamy lace knotted round her neck, and a dainty cap of the same on her thick, short hair. Her costume seemed to indicate that the business in hand was too serious for the easy negligence of a morning gown.

Marsden thought her looking better than he had ever seen her before. The debility and languor of slow convalescence had spiritualized her expression, and given more refinement to her movements. He could even understand how some men might think her charming, a charming toy. There was something unusual too, in the earnestness with which she looked into his eyes, something pained and reproachful in the expression of her own.

"I hope she is not going to make a scene," thought Marsden, as he greeted her cordially.

"You are very good for an unsentimental man, to be so punctual," she said graciously, but gravely.

"I was eager to see with my own eyes how you were progressing," he returned, smiling sweetly upon her. "You know you were cruel enough to reject my prayer for an interview at Chudworth."

"Yes, it was cruel considering how anxious you were about me." Marsden did not quite like her tone. "I want to speak to you about Everleigh; there are one or two little matters you and I can settle better between ourselves than through our lawyers."

"More agreeably, I am sure!"

"Before I go into my own affairs, however, Mr. Marsden, I must congratulate you on your engagement with Miss L'Estrange. I always admired her. Put your face to mine peachable." There was a kind of deadly composure in her manner that struck him as ominous.

"It's coming," he thought, while he said aloud, "You are very good! I am sure Nora has the highest appreciation of you, she has often spoken of you most warmly."

"She will appreciate me much more deeply and justly later on," returned Mrs. Ruthven, with a slight laugh. "Pray when does the marriage take place."

"That is not settled yet."

"And I suppose your fair inexperienced fiancee is desperately in love with you? You have quite distanced Mr. Wroton?"

"Well, I hope so," carelessly, feeling more and more uncomfortable.

"I should think you had, you are rather a fascinating sinner. I had a fancy for you at one time myself." And she glanced quickly at him. A glance fiery enough, half admiration, and half anger.

"Is it possible?" cried Marsden, with an exaggerated air of regret. "And how was I such an idiot as not to see it?"

"That unconsciousness and modesty for which you are celebrated, no doubt preserved you," she returned in a peculiar tone. "However, it is

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 270 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, blacksmith shops, and all necessary tools.

We have spent in development and equipment more than $300,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $150,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to add immediately 50 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $20,000.00 to $50,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividend and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.00 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 50 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionares get their money? From the mines What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1901 produced $16,511.50 per hour, every hour, day and night. Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $30,000.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products, you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth so good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock so they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity.

Yours,
G. L. PORTER.

YOU ARE AILING

Find the Cause for the Weakness and Nervous Dread That Overshadows Your Life.

You can't keep up forever. Sooner or later Nature will rebel against the strain that is imposed on your overworked system. So far, will power and nerve may have tied you over, but the end is probably near at hand.

To-day the common complaint with weak men and women is lack of kidney vitality. Have you here the cause of your ill-health.

Wouldn't it be wise to use a time-tested remedy like Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they cure that "ailing" feeling in one night. Next morning you feel like new—bright, fresh and happy. Appetite improves, dull, sallow color grows ruddy and clear, proving that great good is being done by this scientific medicine.

Thus writes Mrs. D. F. Fowler, from Yarmouth: "I used to feel drowsy and heavy, my color was sallow, and there was nearly a bad taste in my mouth. I had vague pains all through my limbs, and an accepting headache as well.

"After one dose of Dr. Hamilton's Pills there was a sudden change. I felt better, my appetite increased, and that exhaustion and depression gradually left me. Life seemed brighter and happier after I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I strongly recommend such a good medicine."

Mrs. Fowler's letter is a message to you and all others in poor health. You can't do better than follow her advice. Dr. Hamilton's Pills you certainly need; then why not get them now and enjoy the abundant good health they are sure to bring you? Price 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00. At all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

LOCAL INCIDENTS

By The Times Man on the Street

—The new Separate school building was connected with the electric light wires, Saturday afternoon.

—Toronto thinks that Jerumkay Jerum pronounces it like "Germ K. Germ." This g.f.j. might be permitted to suggest "Dennis."

—Mrs. Badge, an inmate of the Protestant Home, claims that 111 years have passed since she first saw the light of day. A venerable age if correct.

"Do you allow any one to expectorate in this conveyance?" "Certainly, madam, certainly! Spit wherever you want to," was the urbane answer, in the cab's best style.

—A Peterboro lady, more famous for her hatsur than her good manners, saw a young man spit in a car the other day. Rising with indignation, she freezingly said to the conductor:

—McCollum Bros., the Water street livery men, yesterday had every conveyance they own here in service. They had to refuse over 40 applicants who came late in the day. This looks like good business, and a progressive town.

—A Cleveland woman has been arrested for trying to win her husband's affection by putting a love potion in his coffee. This g.f.j. would suggest that the best way to accomplish her plan is to put some coffee in his coffee.

—The Times was in receipt of a communication on Saturday from the President of the Canadian Conference of Charities and Corrections, sent from Whitby. The association meets in the Educational Buildings, Toronto on the 15th, 16th and 17th of this month. The convention has arranged for single fare return tickets for all desiring to attend the convention.

A GOOD JOB

Mr. Jas. Graham Completes Contract at 451 and 453 Water Street

On Saturday night, Mr. Jas. Graham, the well known local contractor and builder, put the finishing touches to a contract that he and his men have worked on during the past few months. In this job Mr. Graham had to completely tear down and rebuild, greatly enlarged and modernized the rear portions of that double brick, at 451 and 453 Water street.

This, although equal to building a large single house, was shoved through on account of the front portions being occupied during building operations, faster perhaps than any building of similar size in the city.

Mr. Graham has done a job here that has not only fully met with the approval of the owner, but has gained him many flattering remarks by those who have seen the newly constructed premises. The customers observe a central hotise, being very complete in details, and furnished with its small inside doors, enclosing the stairway. Although brand new, the engineering part works as smoothly and looks as perfect as those in a seasoned building.

Messrs. McGregor and Reid, who inserted the extensive plumbing systems, have also completed a job that will be a standing advertisement to their efficiency and workmanlike manipulation of every detail.

In their contract, they had to insert new enamel sinks, stationary wash-stands, enamel baths, bedroom and other bath room appliances.

Coleman Bros., a bright pair of young Englishmen, who had the painting contract, gave complete satisfaction, and demonstrated the profession of good taste, well used.

Mr. W. Blackwell the architect in charge, stated Saturday that Mr. Graham's whole job, including the sub-contracts, was done in a very satisfactory manner.

The Delineator for December

For colorwork, pressework and general beauty and usefulness, the December Delineator is conspicuous among the Christmas magazines. Eight paintings by J. C. Leyendecker, illustrating and interpreting the Twenty-third Psalm, is the most extensive color feature of the number, but a painting by Alphonse Mucha, accompanying a poem, "The Mother of Bartholdi," by Theodosia Garrison, is fully as notable as an art work. The short fiction of the number comprises stories by Hamlin Garland, John Luther Long, Gilbert Parker and Alice Brown. The opening chapters of a new serial—a woman's club story—"The President of Ques," are given; it is said to be in the nature of a reply to "The Evolution of a Club Woman," which created great interest in the magazine last year. There is also the continuation of "At Spinster Farm," articles on Brass and Copper Utensils in "The Collector's Manual," and the Child at Play in "The Rights of the Child." A series of illustrated papers under the title, "Some Heroines of Shakespere—by their Impersonators," also begins in this number with Eleanor Robson on Juliet. The patterns for children are filled with the spirit of the season, and there is an abundance of matter of house-hold interest.

League of Mercy

The League of Mercy affiliated with the Salvation Army, a society that is doing most commendable work, will give an entertainment next Wednesday night at eight o'clock at the barracks. The members of the league visit the jail, Protestant Home and hospital, and do a great deal to cheer the unfortunate inmates of these institutions. The receipts will go towards a fund that is being raised for the annual Christmas Old People's Banquet.

Fatal Hunting Accident

Belleville, Nov. 12. Norman Skinners of Bancroft, while hunting in the township of Mayo with his brother-in-law, Frank Stirling, was accidentally shot by the latter on Tuesday last. It seems that Skinners was walking some distance ahead of Stirling, when the latter saw a deer. He raised his gun and his thumb slipped from the hammer and the rifle was discharged, the bullet striking young Skinner in the left side. Skinner died on Thursday morning.

MR. C. DUNN'S FUNERAL

One of the Largest Processions in Years Followed the Remains

Yesterday afternoon the respect and friendship held by his many friends, was strongly in evidence, as the funeral cortege, followed the late Mr. Charles Dunn's remains to the place of sepulture.

The late Mr. Dunn, who passed away Friday night, was a life-long resident of this city, and was universally beloved by all who knew him.

The deceased was forty-six years of age and was the son of the late Francis Dunn. He was born in Peterboro. For thirty-one years he was an employee of the Auburn Woolen Co., and at the time of his death was shipping clerk of that company. He was a prominent member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Mr. Dunn had been ill for about six weeks with an abcess on the lungs and during that time was gradually sinking until his death took place Friday night. Mr. Dunn was a former member of the executive of the West Peterboro Conservative Association and a chairman of Ward 4 committee.

He is survived by his wife and four daughters, May, Genevieve, Florence and Margaret. His mother is also left to mourn his death. Mrs. M. J. Hickey, city, is a sister of the deceased, and Mr. Otto Dunn, of Peterboro, Mr. Frank Dunn, of Calgary and Mr. Harry Dunn are brothers.

The funeral, which as intimated, was one of the most largely attended of any seen for a very long time in this city, was attended by representatives of every class of the community, showing thereby the very general regret entertained for Mr. Dunn. It was held from the family residence, north Water street, to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

LIFT LOCK PASSAGES

564 Crafts of all Makes Passed Between This City and Lakefield

There were 564 lockages by boats of all kinds, including steamers and barges, through the lift lock during the past season, from June 7th to Nov. 24.

This is regarded as a very successful and satisfactory season's work, and as evidence of the fact that the lock was a benefit to the trade of this part of the province. When it is remembered that this is only the second year since the portion of the canal from Lakefield to Peterboro was opened, it will be recognized that the growth of traffic has been large.

Passenger business has formed an important part of the traffic, for with the opening of the lock and the canal above a new objective point for excursions was provided, and it has been very popular.

Perhaps the feature of the greatest material benefit, however, is the fact that with the opening of the lock it has become possible to ship practically from Lake Simcoe to Hastings by an all water route.

There is every reason to suppose, moreover, that the traffic of this year will be materially increased next year, as freight increased proportionally towards the latter part of the season.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

—Aldermen Stewart, of Toronto, who has been visiting with Mr. M. O. Tooley, has returned home.

—Mr. W. J. Edmison, Harwood, was in the city on Saturday, a guest of the Oriental House.

—Mr. Walt Metheral, the well-known carriage maker and fireman on Saturday evening received a telegram notifying him of the death, that evening of Mrs. Metheral's uncle, Mr. McElwain, in Toronto.

—Mr. Powers, who succeeds Mr. Ketchum as local representative of the tannery combine, has arrived, and is now awaiting the return of the gentleman who assists him, now out hunting, before beginning work.

Real Anxious to Stay

There is a young man in Peterboro who was accustomed to call on a certain young lady quite regularly. One very stormy night recently he called as usual, and, when it was nearly time for him to leave, the young lady's father came in and asked him if he hadn't better spend the night at the house. The father explained that it was very disagreeable outside, and there was no need for the young man to go home, as they could accommodate him without any inconvenience. The young man seemed ready to accept the hospitality of his friends, and a few minutes later asked the young lady to excuse him for a few minutes. He left the room hurriedly, and after an absence of several minutes came back very much out of breath and very wet. As he entered the room he said: "I thought I'd better stay all night, so I went home after my pajamas."

FRIENDLY WARNING

No Need to be Alarmed About Stomach Troubles if you Use Mi-o-na.

The most frequent affection of the stomach is catarrh, as the delicate membrane which lines the stomach is easily irritated by harmful food or overeating. Keep a strict watch for the first symptoms of stomach trouble. Take this friendly warning in the spirit in which it is given and profit by it.

Shortness of breath, black specks before the eyes, furred tongue, dizziness, belching of gases or sour food, weakness and debility are all signs of catarrh of the stomach. There is no need to be unduly alarmed, for this disease can be cured by Mi-o-na. It is the only remedy that strikes at the root of the evil and actually cures disease.

It does not contain opium in any form, acids, alcohol, or any other harmful drug or chemical. It is a pure remedy that heals the irritated mucous membrane, stimulates the nerve plexus, and aids digestion.

Mi-o-na costs but 50 cents a box.

If you cannot obtain Mi-o-na of your druggist, it will be sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us for advice on your case from a leading stomach specialist which will be sent free. The E. T. Booth Company, Ithaca, N. Y.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Interesting Address, Discription of Christianity in Japan

At yesterday's mornings service in St. John's church, the Rector, Rev. J. C. Davidson, M.A., spoke in feeling terms of the death, of the Ven. Archdeacon Allen, who passed away on Saturday morning, in Millbrook, his parish, which for nearly half a century, he has served so well and acceptably.

Mr. Davidson told the congregation that the whole diocese would feel his loss keenly, and that for himself he had sustained a great personal loss.

Mr. Allen was a most upright and straightforward character, worthy of emulation. His funeral will take place from his late residence in Millbrook.

Rev. C. E. Ryerson, M.A., a missionary, who has carried the Church of England's banner of education and salvation among the heathen of Japan, during the past four years, preached at yesterday morning's service. Rev. Mr. Ryerson gave a most interesting account of Japan and its progressive customs. He drew a very interesting word picture, illustrating the wide difference between conditions as they now exist and what is evidence 50 years ago. Then signs were observable at every cross road, warning the inhabitants that any one, even entertaining a christian missionary, or becoming apostate to the old faith would be put to death at once. He described the terrible immoral lives, even of those nattired in the christain faith, in their own homes.

Over every door, as one walks along one sees over every door, peculiar little images or symbols that are purchased from the Buddist, (pronounced Boodist) priests, to be used as charms to ward away the demons of disease or harm.

At the Harvest service for the first time in St. John's church's history, the ladies of the choir, marched from the vestry arrayed in mortar boards and gowns to their places in the chancel. The ladies in the academical costume, looked very charming.

Mr. Sleeman took the solo part in the anthem, and his fine baritone voice well filled the sacred edifice, which was crowded to the doors.

Merchant Wanted a Babcock

A George street business man in new looking premises he was not sent a Babcock fire extinguisher when his chimney caught fire Thursday night. He was somewhat surprised when discovering his chimney to be on fire, and telephoned the fire hall for a Babcock. As the fire laddie was alone in the station, he very naturally refused to leave the place alone. Fortunately the merchant, by old-fashioned and common sense methods managed to subdue the incipient conflagration.

More Smallpox Cases In Back Country

Dr. Alex Bell Writes the Times That a Second Outbreak of the Dreaded Scourge Has Materialized on Western Boundary of Chandos.

Our readers will remember that a few weeks ago The Times gave some prominence to [illegible] of small-pox that was then raging in Chandos. Our readers will further remember the fact that a cheese factory, supplying its finished product, was under grave suspicion of infection, as milk of cows owned by infected families was sent to this factory for conversion into cheese. We also noted that the post office at Glenaida was also occupied by an infected family.

The public will also remember that an evening contemporary, published in this city, the next evening after our necessarily somewhat sensational report of the dreadful conditions prevailing so near our borders, tried to belittle that report we published by saying that the awful condition in existence had been known of for some days by the Toronto Board of Health. Our esteemed contemporary, did not, in the least, attempt to deny the truth and accuracy of our report concerning the outbreak and prevalence of smallpox in Chandos.

Yesterday The Times was in receipt of uncontradictable intelligence, that, whilst the first outbreak in Chandos, as given in detail by The Times of a former issue was absolutely correct, a second outbreak has now occurred on the western boundary of Chandos. This outbreak is causing much anxiety, as over 12 cases have already developed.

This second outbreak, like the first, and as originally reported by The Times, is traceable to infection brought in from Faraday. Our correspondent, Dr. Alex. Bell, medical health officer, of the united townships of Harcourt and A[illegible]mber, is a gentleman too well known as a scientific member of his noble profession, and too well acquainted personally, with many of our citizens, to hesitate to use the startling news we now publish.

An intelligent man like our correspondent, who ranks high in his profession, will not take exception to our saying that Peterboro should establish a strict quarantine against all goods of people coming from the infected districts of Chandos.

Of course the whole township of Chandos is not, nor should it be, accountable for the portions of it where smallpox is rampant, but there should be no half measures taken to prevent smallpox entering our city.

We can easily comprehend the delicate position in which Dr. Bell is placed. He is a leading official in the infected township, at the same time his honor and integrity as a professional man, and as a humanitarian demanded that he communicate with a paper that carries weight in the crowded wards of our city.

Dr. Bell in ratifying The Times, and thus the public of Peterboro, of the imminent danger threatening our borders, has fulfilled his duties as a citizen of the county, as a medical man, and as a philanthropist.

Dr. Bell writes The Times as follows:

Dear Sir,—I have to inform you that the case of smallpox reported to you from Faraday is not the only one in the township of Harcourt. There are now twelve cases in the township, and I have reason to believe that there will be more. The first case was that of a young man who had been working in the bush at Faraday, and who came home to his father's house in the village of Wilberforce. He was not seen by a doctor until he had been at home for some days, and then the rash was out on him. He was at once isolated, and the house placarded. The next case was that of a young man who had been working in the bush with the first case, and who had been in the house with him. He was isolated at once

All Thin, Pale Women

Can Learn the Cause of Their Nervous, Used-up Condition

With women, ill-health is usually traceable to nerve exhaustion. Feeling run-down and tired most of the time is nature's warning that more nerve-force is required.

You must build up, nourish the body, vitalize the nerves, get more flesh and blood.

It's this abundant nutriment and building material in Ferrozone that enables it to cure so many sick women. It increases the appetite, adds weight and strength, restores lost color and develops a surplus of energy and nerve force that defies sickness of any kind. There is living proof in Mrs. Daniel Ferguson, Jr., of Prescott, Ont. Read her statement:

"A year ago my health failed. I grew thin and exceedingly pale. At night it was difficult to obtain restful sleep. My appetite was variable and indigestion bothered me considerably. I became nervous and suffered from heart palpitation. You could scarcely believe the benefit derived in one week from Ferrozone. Color came back to my cheeks. My vitality and appetite increased, renewed nerve force and better spirits came also. Ferrozone did a world of good and made me well.

Remember this: No alcoholic stimulant can nourish and build up like Ferrozone. Fifty cents per box or six boxes for $2.50. At all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont., and Hartford, Conn., U.S.A.

NO COAL STRIKE THIS WINTER

John Mitchell is confident that any differences which may arise between the employers and the employes in the anthracite mines will be settled by mutual agreement, without necessitating or furnishing an excuse for either a lockout or a strike. That is good news, although possibly it may mean a still further advance in the price of anthracite. The coal roads have been gradually strengthening their position. It was recently announced that Lehigh Valley Railroad had obtained control of the Pennsylvania Coal Company, the purchase price being in the vicinity of $19,000,000. The amount of anthracite now mined by independent collieries is very small in comparison with the total output, and even the independents are completely in the control of the transportation companies. This is a combination which most persons believe to be unlawful, and which certainly is against public policy. Perhaps after the administration gets through slapping the beef trust on the wrist it may turn its attention to the merger of the anthracite mining and transportation interests, a merger that has undisputed control of one of the great mineral products of this country.

THE FEDERAL ELECTIONS

Antigonish—Conservative, 819; Liberal, 1,239; majority, 920.

West Lambton—Conservative, 2,853; Liberal, 3,300; majority, 447.

North York—Conservative, 2,953; Liberal, 2,050; majority, 903.

Wentworth—Conservative, 2,918; Liberal, 2,968; majority, 50.

This is the last voting record of the four federal constituencies in which elections are to be held on the 22nd day of this month. Antigonish is made vacant by the appointment of Mr. McIsaac to office. North York is left without a member because Sir William Mulock has become a judge. The member-elect for West Lambton is dead. In Westworth the minority candidate was declared elected on a recount, in which the vote of one poll was thrown out because of the mistakes of the deputy. The candidate so declared elected did not take his seat and the courts declared the election void.

PICKETING PROHIBITED.

The Appellate Court of Illinois, speaking through President Justice Smith, has emphatically condemned the "picketing" practice sometimes indulged in during labor strikes. The right to demand higher wages, with or without reason, and the right to quit work individually or collectively, are conceded; but picketing, according to this high court, can intend nothing but intimidation, violence and lawlessness. The court says: "The picket system once established, the intimidation, assaults, slugging and bloodshed follow as naturally and inevitably as as night follows day. There can be no such thing as peaceful, 'polite and gentlemanly' picketing, any more than there can be chaste, 'polite and gentlemanly' vulgarity, or peaceful mobbing or lawful lynching." Those who provide for and engage in picketing know this as well—perhaps better—than the court does. Academic picketing simply for affable and courteous persuasion, everyone knows, would be worthless and ineffective. Pressure and intimidation are essential to the success of such a system. That is what it is for. The picket who confined his efforts to saying mildly to a strike breaker, "Come, let us reason together," would find that the leaders had no use for him. The decision of the Illinois court settles this business so far as that State is concerned.

WHEAT RECORDS BROKEN

Nearly 30,000,000 Bushels Have Already Been Marketed

Montreal, November 13. The deliveries of wheat at the elevators in the North-West, along the line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, continue to be much in excess of previous years; in fact, more wheat has been marketed during the past ten weeks, that is, from September 1 to date, than was marketed during the whole of the twelve months ending August 31, 1905. The figures are: September 1 to date, 29,356 bushels, corresponding period last year, 13,560,000 bushels, twelve months ending August 31, 26,000,000 bushels.

No less than 12,120 cars equivalent to one big train 120 miles in length, have been despatched from the elevators in the North-West eastward to Fort William, as compared with 9,000 cars during the corresponding period of 1904.

STARVED HIMSELF TO DEATH

Mounted Police Forced Food on Doukhobor Without Avail

Ottawa, November 13.—The Mounted Police Department has received from Superintendent Greenway, Prince Albert, a report in the case of the Doukhobor named Alex I. Panamaroff. This man was committed to gaol for wandering all over the country, deliberately starving himself to death. Food in the shape of milk, soup, a pound and a quarter of peanuts and one apple daily was forced upon him, but he eventually died of starvation.

Mill Burned at Shediac

Moncton, N. B., November 13.—The flour mill, owned by Senator Poirier, at Shediac, was destroyed by fire. It is supposed that the fire originated from the furnace. When discovered the flames had made considerable headway, and it was impossible to save the building. The warehouse adjoining was also burned to the ground. The loss will be about $15,000; partly covered by insurance.

The receipts will towards a fund that is being raised for the annual Christmas Old People's Banquet.

The Sioux Falls, South Dakota Argus-Leader, says: A decree of absolute divorce was granted to-day by Judge Jones, to Mrs. Louise P. Hall, of this city, from her husband, William S. Hall, a dentist, of Edmonton, Alberta, Canada. The custody of the infant child was given to Mrs. Hall.

Fatal Hunting Accident

Belleville, Ont. 13. Norman Stimers of Beaucroft, while hunting in the township of Mayo with his brother-in-law, Frank Mather, was accidentally shot by the latter on Tuesday last. It seems that Stimers was walking some distance ahead of Mather, when the latter saw a deer. He raised his gun and his thumb slipped from the hammer and the rifle was discharged, the bullet striking Stimers in the left side. Stimers died on Thursday morning.

An Ottawa Church Robbed

Ottawa, November 13.—It was discovered on Tuesday night that burglars had broken into St. Matthew's church during the night. The poor box was broken open and robbed, the communion wine was drunk, and the surplices thrown about the basement. The thieves entered an entrance by forcing in a basement window.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7 50 per annum for an individual, and from $20 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 1500x1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

Placer mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

Texas Lands

Very Cheap

The Houston & Texas Central Ry. Co. has decided to sell its land grant in Northwest Texas, adjoining Oklahoma. To effect a quick sale and avoid the expense of maintaining sales agencies, the lands have been listed at very low prices.

They are adjacent to the Rock Island main line running diagonally across Oklahoma and Texas. Portions of the tract are well watered and nearly all is susceptible of cultivation. Transportation facilities excellent—big markets within easy reach.

Sale will be made in parcels of 160 acres up to four sections or 2,560 acres to each purchaser. The prices are on a fixed scale—no fluctuation. Taxes are low, terms liberal and warranty deeds given in all cases.

If interested, send quick for descriptive leaflet with full information.

A RARE CHANCE FOR PROFITABLE INVESTMENT

THOS. PATTERSON & CO

MINING AND INDUSTRIAL STOCKS

61 Simcoe Street, are pleased to announce that they have been appointed fiscal agents of the

CALUMET-TELLURIDE GOLD MINING CO.

of Colorado, and have secured a limited amount of stock of this splendid proposition, which they are prepared to sell at

$1.00 PER SHARE, PAR VALUE

This is a rare chance for a safe and profitable investment. Our customers and the investing public are requested to watch for full particulars, which will appear in these columns in a few days. Call at our office and talk it over, if you have any money that is lying idle, as this is an investment we can recommend.

THOS. PATTERSON & CO.

I offer, subject to prior sale, 50,000 shares of the Capital Stock of The

Oxarna Gold Mining Company

at the "Ground Floor" price of TEN CENTS A SHARE, (none has been offered for less), par value $1.00, fully paid and non-assessable.

The OXARNA GOLD MINING COMPANY is capitalized at $1,000,000.00, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1.00 each. The Oxarna Stock was originally all in the treasury, no preferred or promotion stock having been issued by this Company, and up to the present time only 333,500 shares of their stock have been issued.

The OXARNA COMPANY own by United States Patent and Deed, 163 Acres of highly mineralized land in the Famous Thunder and Custer Mountain, Idaho District, and over $17,000,000.00 net has been realized by the Mines in our immediate vicinity. One of the Mines contiguous to our property on the north has produced $4,000,000.00 and five veins of this rich ore parallel on one of our claims, and by about 2,000 feet of shafts, tunnels drifts and upraises the OXARNA COMPANY have uncovered over $1,000,000.00 worth of ore, and they have a large amount of ore in the ore bins and on the dump that averages over $67.00 a ton, and they expect to be in position to Mill not less than 100 tons of ore every day in a very short time, but if they only Mill 30 tons a day in less than one year they can pay 100 per cent. on the par value of the stock out standing in dividends, for they expect to have less than 400,000 shares of the stock on the market when they are fully financed.

The Oxarna Company have purchased a Mill all fully equipped and ready for business, that originally cost about $15,000.00, and they owe a balance of $6,000.00 on this Mill that will be due in three months, and in order to raise this amount quickly I am privileged to make this most liberal offer, for the stock is easily worth par today, for the time is rapidly approaching when the Company will be on a paying basis and the stock will become immensely remunerative in the near future.

Subject to prior sales I offer the above allotment on the following terms: 4 per cent. discount will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order, or subscriptions will be accepted on the installment plan, 1-4 of the amount with the order and a like amount in 30, 60 and 90 days. Make all orders payable to the undersigned or remit through the NATIONAL BANK of Delphos, and they will forward stock subject to your order.

Personally I advise you to get all of this stock that you can pay for during the next three months, for it is an exceedingly good investment. For further particulars call on or address.

A TANGLED WEB

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

too late to talk of the past; besides, I have a curious story to tell you, in which, I am sure, you will be interested. Do you know I have found a trace of my rubies at last, and the day you marry Nora L'Estrange I will give her one of the best for a wedding present!"

"My dear Mrs. Ruthven, I am astonished and interested!" cried Marsden, struck by her tone and looking full at her. "Nor shall I—"

"Stop! listen to me," she interrupted, leaving her seat by the fire, and drawing a chair to a writing-table at a little distance, where a number of closely written sheets fastened together with a clip, lay beside her blotting-book. "It is a long story, and I do not want to occupy your time more than I need."

"You rouse my curiosity," cried Marsden, placing himself opposite her.

Mrs. Ruthven turned over a page or two of the manuscript before her, and resting her clasped hands on it, fixed her eyes on her companion.

"I had," she began, "a clew, a mere trifle, which no one knew save myself, and when I came up from Eversleigh, I sent for a man of whom I had heard, no matter how, a man of keen, trained intelligence, for I saw that the regular solemn English detective, with his heavy precaution and transparent devices, was merely announcing to the criminal world, 'I have a secret inquiry to conceal.' I sent for this man, I gave him, and him only, my clew."

"And why did you not give it at least to me," cried Marsden, "when I was tearing my heart out in fruitless efforts to recover your jewels?"

"I will tell you presently. Well, this employe of mine, led by my—my suggestions, fixed upon an individual whom he thought might possibly have been the robber or agent of the robber, and shadowed him" (she emphasized the word with cruel bitterness). "For days he followed the unconscious thief, in various disguises; at last, after keeping him in sight with infinite difficulty, he watched him leaving a country house not far from St. Germain."

Marsden's expression changed from polite attention to deep gravity.

"At a station midway to Paris he got out, a small valise in his hand. The detective followed. It was early afternoon, and a few passengers were traveling; the suspected thief went into a first-class carriage, with small dark mustaches, a low-crowned brown hat, such as Englishmen wear in the country, and a long loose overcoat. He came out at a station some ten miles off in a sort of frock coat, rather shabby, braided and fitting badly, a soft black felt hat pulled over his eyes and a large light mustaches; his overcoat was hanging on his arm, and he still carried his valise. Here he waited some time, reading a paper which he had bought at the station, and finally, as it began to grow dusk, he took a third-class ticket to Paris; my employe traveled in the same carriage," she turned a page. "It is too long to tell how he tracked him that night to an obscure street in the Marais, to the shop of a Polish Jew dealer in precious stones, where he held a long parley, and then back to a shabby cafe, where he engaged a room for the night—he went to it, after partaking of some wine and food. When his pursuer had ascertained that he was locked in for the night, he returned to the shop—I ought to have told you, that this man was himself the son of a Polish Jew, and spoke the language well. He made himself known to the owner of the shop, told some story of having been on the outlook for jewels, and, in short, persuaded his compatriot to let him hide in a corner, where he could witness the interview arranged for next day. I am dwelling too much on details, perhaps! Ultimately my employe witnessed the sale of ten large uncut rubies for a price, which, though high, was not enough for their value, and he saw the face of the man who sold them."

"Indeed!" with a slightly contemptuous accent, "and may I ask what was your clew?"

"There it is," cried Mrs. Ruthven, raising her voice for the first time above the level tone at which she had kept it, and drawing her breath in a deep sob, as she took out of a small leather case, and threw to him, a diamond stud. He had grown perfectly colorless, but the hand with which he took up the stud was steady.

"And what does this prove?" he asked.

"That Clifford Marsden, of Eversleigh Manor, is a felon!" she answered, fierce exultation lighting up her face and gleaming in her eyes. "Do you think I did not recognize the peculiar setting of the diamond which caught my hair in that waltz—that waltz—"

She stopped, her breast heaving.

"I know I lost this stud," said Marsden, very deliberately, "on that unlucky evening, and never could find it, but why should not the robber have picked it up, if he found it, as he most probably did, in the tent?"

"You are a brave man to face me as you do!" she exclaimed. "But I hold you in my hand," and she clinched it. "I will tell you who found it, and where! Your sweet, beloved fiancee, when paying me a private visit in my room, admiring my ball-dress, espied the glitter of that diamond among the lace on the body, where it had dropped when you struggled to stupefy me with your horrible chloroform. Me, the woman you had been making love to ten minutes before—who was ready to give you all she had—you base midnight thief."

"Do not be so positive. Might it not have fallen among your lace as we danced together, or when I was assisting to lift you?"

"No, no, no!" she cried, as if carried out of herself, and speaking with immense rapidity. "I saw it on your breast when you left me, and there, your face, told me you were tempted [illegible] I [illegible] dropping your guilt. Wait! I [illegible] you. Before you leave here with me, before he started to pursue you. He was with you at Amsterdam, in Paris, at Chantilly, when you went to your sick friend De Mouton. He tracked you, he can swear to you. I have paid hundreds to prove it, and I have you in my power!"

She stopped, panting.

Marsden rose slowly, his eyes fixed upon her. She was frightened by the silence, his desperate look. She, too, rose; but her fury seemed to evaporate.

"What are you going to do, Marsden?" she said, quivering. "You would not murder me?"

He laughed a strange, discordant laugh.

"I am blackguard enough," he said; "but I would not hurt a hair of your head. No! it is useless to contradict your assertions. You have me, indeed, in your grasp, and there is but one way of escape."

He moved to the door, but she was too quick for him. Setting her back against it she stretched out her arms to keep him off.

"You shall not kill yourself! I forbid you! You are bad, and base,

An Open Letter to Investors

DOES YOUR MONEY NET YOU 25 PER CENT ANNUALLY

If it does not, you had better investigate the BIG CASINO GOLD MINING CO., for money invested in the stock of this company should net you not less than 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. annually, the remainder of your life.

WHAT WE HAVE IN DEVELOPMENT AND ACREAGE

We have 270 acres of mineral land, located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode," and mining on the "Mother Lode" is not speculative, for the ore bodies are known to exist in inexhaustible quantities.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done, have blocked out and in sight a very large amount of ore ready to break down and mill.

We have a modern Twenty Stamp Mill in good working condition, running ten hours every day. We could be paying dividends from the returns of the mill, but we are putting the proceeds back into the development and equipment of the property.

We have the mine equipped with compressed air drills, steam power plant, steam hoist, black smith shops, and all necessary tools.

[illegible] have spent in development and equipment more than $200,000.00 on these mines, have taken almost $100,000.00 from the property and put it back in development.

WHAT WE PROPOSE TO DO

We propose to sell immediately 25 stamps to the 20 we have in, then we will pay from $30,000.00 to $50,000.00 per month in dividends and lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, which will be done inside the next twelve months.

We will then double the dividend and increase the sinking fund to again double the capacity of the mill, then we will pay dividends that will surprise every stockholder.

WHY DO WE WANT TO SELL STOCK?

We have no power, only steam, and that is created by burning Jack Pine wood, which is very poor, costs $7.00 per cord, and is hard to get. We know we have more ore than can be mined in two or three life times, and the Tuolumne Electric Power Co., and the Golden Rod Ditch Co. (with water power), are both in position to furnish us cheap power before Christmas, and we want to have in 50 stamps ready to operate when we get the cheap power, and in order to do this we are willing to sell some of our Treasury Stock at a sacrifice. Considering the development and equipment of the mines, this stock is cheap at par ($1.00) per share now, and we are going to make it bring $1.50 per share before January 1st, but we are going to sacrifice a limited amount of it the next few days at 50 cents per share.

IS THERE ANY CHANCE OF LOSS IN BUYING THIS STOCK?

We assure you that an investment in any industrial stock, in any bank or trust company's stock, or in any piece of real estate in North America, either in the States or in the Dominion, would not have the risk more nearly eliminated than the Big Casino stock, for we own the property, have proven the ore bodies, and your investment is protected by multiplied millions of dollars' worth of ore, only waiting to be broken, milled and put into bullion, then distributed in dividends to the fortunate stockholders.

You can go to see the mines, send any mining man you like, ask us any questions you want to, we have nothing to hide but court the closest investigation, our business is as legitimate as any in the world, and is far the most profitable.

You may have invested in something some time that you thought was mining stock and lost, that is no reason you should fear to investigate what we offer you; come and see us or write and ask for any information you may desire.

We will be at the White House for a few days, and will be glad to see you and tell you all you want to know about our proposition, whether you invest with us or not.

When we get the cheap power you can't purchase any stock of us at any price, for we will have none for sale. We will then get all the money we want for equipment from the mines in a very short time.

Where does 90% of our multimillionaires get their money? From the mines What is making thousands of poor people rich every year, and putting thousands more in easy circumstances? It is investing their savings in legitimate mining shares.

According to the report of Director Roberts, of the United States mint, the gold and silver mines of the United States during 1901 produced $15,511.50 per hour, every hour, day and night. Sundays and holidays included, and to this if you will add the copper produced at the same time you will have the enormous sum of $28,250.00 per hour, and if you will add to this the zinc, lead, quicksilver, and other mineral products you will increase the amount not less than 50 per cent. Would you like to share in these profits? then purchase shares in the Big Casino and you will get your portion.

For further information address or call and see us at the White House until further notice.

Very truly yours,

GEO. L. PORTER,

P. S.—Since arriving here, some of our friends have asked us if we have such a good proposition, why could we not sell it in some of the cities back in the States? We want to say there is not a city in the States that we could not sell every share of this stock in, if properly put before the people, for there are millions of dollars lying waiting for investment in propositions not one-fourth as good as this. The owners of the money are only waiting to be advised of the opportunity.

We came here solely on the request of Mr. W. H. Robertson, who is a warm personal friend of ours. He asked that his friends might have the opportunity to get in on B. C. stock as they would have some thing that would not fail to pay them large returns on their money, and you who purchase shares and grow rich will have Mr. Robertson to thank for bringing you the opportunity. Yours,

G. L. PORTER.

Yesterday Messrs. J. V. Turner & Sons, the enterprising sail, tent and awning manufacturers received still another order for camping supplies. The order received yesterday is the largest. The order received yesterday amounted to $600 and was given to the local firm in competition with the largest firms in the same line of business in London. The goods will be shipped this week.

High Court Session Adjourned

The fall sittings and winter sessions of the High Court of Justice without jury were held yesterday without jury were held yesterday with Mr. Justice McMahon presiding in place of Mr. Justice Meredith, C. J. C.P. The only case was that of the Port Hope Brewing and Malting Co., against Henry Anderson of Orillia. By mutual consent the case was adjourned to Lindsay, where it will be heard before Hon. Chancellor Boyd. Mr. Henry A. Ward of Port Hope appeared for the plaintiffs. Mr. R. O. Dunn, the defendant's counsel, was not present.

THE BEER COMBINE

The Local Brewery's Last Canvas the Most Successful on Record

Mr. W. Scott, travelling representative of the Calcutt Brewing and Malting Co., has just returned from a business trip to Cobourg, Picton, Belleville, and other points east, in the interests of the local brewery.

Few people outside the local hotelmen and grocers, know that the Toronto beer combine is after the scalp of a local industry.

To demonstrate how effectual or otherwise, the combine's efforts to crush a long established Peterboro business is, it might be mentioned that Mr. Scott's recent trip is the most successful he has had in ten years. Mr. Scott brought in more orders for the products of the local brewery than ever came to the brewery in the same space of time, before.

Now, even the breweries linked together to form the "combine," are reported to be cutting one another's throats. By understand methods of rebates on "Broken bottles" (!) "carriage," and sundry "discounts," the breweries in the combine are now said to be trying to take business from one another. One can easily see the end of the combine now, as Peterboro dealers, in wet goods, are not to be hamstrung by fictitious offers of cheap beer; they would, in case the local brewery capitulated, be promptly raised high sky.

KEENE LADY GONE

Mrs. Philip Elmhirst Passed Away on Sunday Night

The residents of Keene, were startled to hear, on Sunday night, or Monday morning, of a very sudden death, which occurred at her home in Otonabee, at the age of 67 years, of Mrs. Phillip Elmhirst, after an illness of only two days, her death being due to heart disease. The deceased's maiden name was Jane Bolton, and she leaves to mourn her loss her surviving husband and five sons, William, on the homestead, Frank, of Otonabee, John and Albert, of Carbery, Man., and Fred, of New Ontario.

The late Mrs. Elmhirst was one of the most highly respected residents of the township of Otonabee, and was a prominent member of the Bethel Methodist church. The funeral arrangements had not been made at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, but it will probably take place this afternoon to Westwood cemetery.

HYOMEI KILLS CATARRHAL GERMS

Its Healing Air Reaches Every Tissue of Nose, Throat and Lungs.

All the stomach dosing in the world cannot do any actual good in the treatment of catarrhal troubles, unless the nose and throat are completely freed from catarrhal germs, and the poison that they produce.

Hyomei is Nature's true cure for catarrh. It destroys all germs in the air passages and lungs, soothes and heals the irritated mucous membrane, and effectually drives from the system all traces of the poison. When using the Hyomei treatment, the air you breathe is like that on the Mountains, high above sea level, where the pine woods fill the air with purifying and healing qualities that give health and strength to those who suffer from diseases of the respiratory organs. Breathed through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, the healing air of Hyomei reaches every tissue of nose, throat and lungs, and immediate relief is given, and a permanent cure is soon made.

The complete Hyomei outfit, consisting of an inhaler, medicine dropper, and one bottle of Hyomei, costs only $1.00, extra bottles 50 cents.

If you cannot obtain Hyomei of your dealer, it will be forwarded by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price. Write today for consultation blank that will entitle you to services of our medical department without charge. The R. T. Booth Company, Hyomei Building, Ithaca, N. Y.

Rowdyism on Aylmer St.

As a young man was escorting his very best young lady home on Monday night, at the corner of Aylmer and Wolfe streets, on the lady resident the C.P.R. tracks, the twain were startled by being stopped by preconcerted action of a mob of ledgeless young men and boys who very apparently had "laid" for them. The young men, as soon as the couple stopped him and his lady friend, landed with his good right, fist on the outer plexus of several of his tormentors. He quickly shed his overcoat and "waded in" to the discomfiture of the heedless annoying him and the lady. A very short exhibition of his determined resistance and pluck, put the roughs to flight. This suggests the natural enquiry, how can four policemen patrol, during twenty-four hours, a city of 18,000 inhabitants? The answer to this conundrum is short and easy. "They can't, and it is not reasonable to expect it of them."

Father McColl's Reply

Rev. Father McColl, in an evening contemporary, writes a long letter in answer to Rev. Dr. Orother's communication, contained in our issue of last Saturday. In this very plausible letter, the rev. gentleman disclaims all credit for the massacre of St. Bartholomew's so far as the church's influence was concerned. He also refers to the friars' influence in the Philippine Islands. He says "England has without doubt one of the best, probably the best political system in the world, and then lays all the faults existent in human nature on the Protestant religion. He further says that Rev. Dr. Orother's authority, Prescott, one of the greatest Historians of any age, is unreliable. The rev. gentleman's whole letter is plausible and well written.

William Doyle Taken to Nicholls Hospital in Unconscious Condition

On Monday as the general public was wrestling with india rubber porter house steaks and gutta percha lamb chops, during the noon hour, William Doyle was taken into custody, while lying in a helpless condition in a local hotel yard, and taken to the police station. He did not revive, and the chief thinking that perhaps his case was serious, telegraphed for the Dix Spence ambulance, and the man was conveyed to the Nicholls hospital. He had been drinking heavily of late, and while he was not apparently under the influence of liquor when arrested, his collapse is generally due to his prolonged indulgence. Word was received from the Nicholls hospital last night, to the effect that while Doyle was very weak his condition is not at all serious, and it is expected that he will be able to leave the hospital in a short time.

Lindsay Engineer Arrested

Lindsay has again something approaching a sensation was created in Lindsay on Friday night when it became known that Engineer W. H. Hammond, in charge of the waterworks pump house plant had been arrested during the afternoon between four and five o'clock by Chief of Police Naviaux, on the following charge: "That he did steal goods and chattels belonging to his employers, the Board of Water Commissioners, of the town of Lindsay, consisting of a quantity of coal, a quantity of oil, hose and one set of scales.

Mr. Hammond was brought before Magistrate Jackson and remanded till Tuesday morning for trial bail being accepted. His bondsmen are Messrs. George Lytle and Bert Laidlaw.

Mr. McIlwain's Funeral To-day

As noted in yesterday's issue, Mr. W. McIlwain, Toronto, an uncle of Mrs. Wilt. Metherel, a member of the local fire brigade, died on Saturday afternoon, from an abscess of the lungs. Mr. Wilt Metherel, yesterday heard from Mrs. McIlwain in connection with the funeral. The deceased will be interred this afternoon, from his late residence, Toronto, at two o'clock. Mr. Metherel leaves this morning by the 8.10 train to attend the funeral, which was delayed by the unavoidable delay of Mr. Samuel McIlwain, a brother of the deceased.

Boy Burned to Death

On Saturday morning, while Mr. and Mrs. William Miller, whose live near Ennismore, were both out of the house, one of the children lighted a fire in a box stove, the door of which was left open; and while the youngest, a little fellow named Charles, was fanning the flame with the skirt of his dress, it caught fire, and he was so dreadfully burned that he lived only sixteen hours. Dr. Graham, who happened to be passing soon after the accident, was called in, and did what was necessary to relieve the poor child's pain, but he died—more from shock than from the severity of his injuries—not long after midnight.

James H. Hyde In the Box Tells the Story of His Life---When 24 Years Old Started Work at a Salary of $30,000.

New York, Nov. 15.—James H. Hyde, former First Vice-President of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, was the most conspicuous figure at the opening of to-day's session of the Armstrong Committee on Insurance Investigations. Extra police were stationed in the corridor outside the committee room, and were on hand to control any great crowd that might appear.

Mr. Hyde was the second witness. He testified that he was 29 years old, and became Second Vice-President of the Equitable, one month later after graduating from Harvard. He had always been brought up to believe his life work was to be the legitimate successor of his father, the founder of the Equitable. He had traveled and studied with that object in view. His father had instilled in him his views on life insurance. He was a director of the company two years before he graduated. From his earliest youth he had lived in a life insurance atmosphere, and had expected to make it his life work.

DECLINED SALARY AT FIRST.

During his father's illness, James W. Alexander turned over to him little by little matters of detail. He did not receive a salary upon his first connection with the company. He was offered a salary, but declined. The president and various members of the Executive Committee then suggested that as he had qualified himself by two years' work, he should have a salary, and Presidential Alexander in 1899 fixed it at $30,000. Mr. Alexander asked if that was agreeable to him.

SALARY INCREASED TO $75,000.

In 1901, George Louis Riggerald resigned as chairman of the Finance Committee, and Mr. Hyde was appointed to the chairmanship. The added responsibilities falling on Mr. Hyde, his salary was advanced to $75,000. His duties constantly increased in the various departments, and in 1903 his salary was made $100,000, at which it remained until his resignation last spring. The witness never spoke to any of the officers or members of the Executive Committee, or in any way suggested an increase to his salary.

Mr. Hyde said the only political contribution of which he knew was that of $25,000 to Cornelius N. Bliss, treasurer of the Republican National Committee, in the last Presidential campaign. This contribution was solicited by H. C. Frick, said Mr. Hyde.

THOUGHT HIMSELF GENEROUS.

Last summer, when the banking department called for the repayment of the $48,000, and the Equitable Life repudiated it, Mr. Hyde said Alexander and Mr. Jordan raised as much as they could and then he, Hyde, made up the balance, $212,000. He said he thought he was generous in this, as he had not received any benefit from the loan.

KILLED SIX DEER

The Laroque Hunting Party Returned From Stony Creek

The Laroque hunting party consisting of the following gentlemen, returned home from their camp at Stony Creek, Messrs. George William, Alf. Fred Bench, Baptiste Lanoque, John Alexander, R. Shepherd, Walter Greenwood, Wm. Greer and W. J. McCallum.

Mr. McCallum states that the parties in districts in which they were located, and in fact, the deer hunters generally, were up against it.

Owing to the large amount of water in the swamps and marshes the deer almost invariably sought refuge there instead of in the lakes as is usually the case.

The party secured, notwithstanding, six deers. They had the usual difficulty with their dogs one valuable hound being lost, and will probably never be recovered. Considerable difficulty was experienced with porcupines, and three dogs were knocked out by getting their jaws and muzzles filled with the destructive quills. As these quills continually work inwards, their dogs were in a terrible state, and required great care to extraction of the quills. The party however report having had a most enjoyable outing.

Mr. Hodgson Sees the Tooth

During the leisure hours at the Collegiate Institute yesterday, Mr. Hodgson, science master, called the pupils' attention to a tooth of an animal, a mammoth, for thousands of years extinct, and advised them to see this tooth in Mr. McDonough's store window, 239 George street. Mr. Hodgson said the tooth on exhibition in Mr. McDonough's window was a wonderful curosity. It is by such intelligent attempts to get students interested in such matters, that their growing minds are made to think.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT

Clifford Burgess, a Clergyman's Son Dies From Gun Shot Wound

Lindsay Post says:—

A shocking gun accident occurred on Sunday, a few miles from Kinmount. The victim being a young man named Clifford Burgess, son of Rev. Mr. Burgess, Church of England clergyman at Haliburton. The facts as learned are as follows:

Burgess, who is about 19 years of age, has been assisting the G.T.R. station agent at Kinmount for several months. Yesterday he joined several companions in a walk to Three Brothers Falls on the Burnt River, and one of the party having a rifle they began shooting at a mark. When young Burgess turn came he greased the trigger, but as explosion occurred, and before his comrades could caution him he lowered the butt of the gun to the ground and looked into the barrel to see if it was obstructed. Just then the charge went off, the bullet penetrating the unfortunate youth's left eye and emerging at the base of the brain.

Help was at once summoned and a vehicle procured in which the poor fellow was carried back to Kinmount where Dr. E. A. White was called in. He found his patient unconscious, in which state he continued without becoming lucid for a moment. No change having occurred, Dr. White decided to bring his patient to Lindsay, and this trip was made this morning on the 8.25 train. The ambulance was in waiting, and the poor fellow was transferred to Ross Hospital. His chance of recovery is very slight.

LATER.

The Times yesterday received word that Mr Burgess died in the Lindsay hospital.

SASKATCHEWAN ELECTION

Not Expected to Take Place Until Ice in Rivers Is Solid

Ottawa, November 15.—According to advices received here from the West, the voting in Saskatchewan may not take place for over a month. Now that the ice has commenced to form it will be necessary in order to poll a full vote in many districts to wait till it is solid enough to make the rivers passable for teams. This will not be the case till the middle of December. Nomination day, it is said may, therefore, be Saturday, December 16, and polling day two days before Christmas.

Anti-Foreign Excitement is Increasing

MAY BREAK OUT AGA'N

Lien Chow District in Fever Heat—A Serious Situation

Hong Kong, November 15.—American British and German missionaries are evacuating the country from the Lien Chow district, where anti-foreign excitement prevails among the natives. Conditions in that district are especially serious because of the large numbers of former soldiers in the Chinese army who are out of employment.

The commission of inquiry into the circumstances attending the murder of the American missionaries at Lien Chow is proceeding with its work. The native press mentions the indemnity paid by the United States for the death of a Chinaman who, it is alleged, was killed by American sailors, and says that the murdered missionaries will be willingly paid for at the same rate. Intense feeling has been aroused among the Chinese over the matter.

MR. ROGERS RETURNS

Trent Valley Canal Survey of Northern Waters Progressing Rapidly

Mr. R B. Rogers, chief engineer of the Trent Canal, has returned from the north country. He had been up there for two weeks with a party of surveyors who are getting maps and estimating the cost of using the lakes in that district as reservoirs to store the water and thus supply a greater and more even flow through the canal and Otonabee river during the whole year. In the party, besides Mr. Rogers, are Messrs. Easton, Sawers and Thornton, engineers, and also another assistants.

This survey has been under consideration for years, but it is only since the Dominion Government assured the province of the north lakes from the Ontario Government, that anything definite has been done. The feasibility of storing the water and holding it for future use, has been proved beyond a doubt, and this idea now is to obtain more storage room.

Mr. Rogers says that the party started from Drag Lake and have worked through to Hawk Lake. They have covered Drag Lake, Eagle Lake, Gaistone Lake, Haliburton, Lake and Katpeal Lake, which is the summit lake. All these lakes, except Hawk and Drag Lake empties into Burnt River and thus into Cameron's Lake.

Mr. Rogers considers that great good will result for the survey, and that the storage capacity of the T.V. Canal can be largely augmented. He remarked that the woods and lakes out north are simply overrun with hunters in the proportion of two men for every deer.

Police Court

OFFICIALS

Chief of Police, G.S. Rand

Magistrate, R.W. Scanlon

At yesterday's police court a young man well known about town, was charged by Thos. Moore, with having stolen a purse containing $60 from the latter. Moore, examined by Mr. Wood, County Crown Attorney, said that on Friday, Nov. 10th, he was in the bar of a local hotel. He had his dinner there and paid for it out of loose change in his pocket.

Prisoner was in the bar, and witness treated him, and the prisoner treated. Prisoner asked him to let him have a dollar for a minute or two, but he told him, "You don't need a dollar." Prisoner kept banging round him, asking for the loan of a dollar. His purse, containing $60, disappeared, and he asked prisoner for it. Prisoner only laughed, and said he had not taken it. Moore then laid a complaint with the chief of police. Was not drunk at the time.

A man present in the court house was in the bar at the time. Named same his purse nor his money since.

Cross-examined by Mr. McWilliams, prisoner's counsel, said there might have been other men than the prisoner, and the other man above noted, in the bar at that time. Prisoner put his hand into Moore's right hand trouser's pocket and abstracted the purse so quickly, he could not see. Him. He paid 25 cents for drinks. The man in the audience, as noted, came to him after his purse was gone and said he would try and do something for him. He thought prisoner would be man enough to give him back the purse. Did not accuse anyone to the face of taking the purse. Had been working at another hotel, and before that on the canal.

Had $2 or $3 in small bills in his pocket, so did not take the purse out of his pocket himself. Did not touch the $60 at all. It was a mistake when, in the original information he described the purse as containing $60, as there was $60 in it.

The prisoner was sent up for preliminary hearing before Judge Walker at 11 o'clock yesterday morning.

When the young man was brought before the judge, he elected to be tried by his honor. The trial will take place on Nov. 20th.

Bail was fixed at $600, the prisoner giving surety for $400 himself, and two gentlemen going good for the other half, giving two sureties of $200 each.

CHRISTENED ON THE DRAKE

New York Baby Named Princesses Louise and Beatrice

New York, November 15 — Little Louise Beatrice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Chadwick, was the distinction of being the principal of the first christening to occur on the Drake, flagship of Prince Louis of Battenberg. Louise Beatrice is six weeks old, and she cried lustily, all unconscious of the honor conferred on her both in the christening and in the fact that she was given the names of the two sisters of the King.

The christening was celebrated Sunday in the gun room of the six-inch amidships gun of the starboard battery. Prince Louis was to have stood up as godfather, but his Sunday was so full of social engagements that at the last moment he had to decline, and his cousin, Albert Manna, was godfather in his stead. The great silver cup won by the crew of the Drake in a marksmanship contest served at the font, and Chaplain Robinson, of the ship, officiated.

A LOCAL ROMANCE

Two Natives of Italy Married in St. Peter's Cathedral Yesterday

Yesterday Miss Giovanni Calio was led to the altar at St. Peter's Cathedral by Mr. Francesco Marino, and the train were made one by Rev. Dr. O'Brien. The bridesmaid was Miss Maria Gentili, and the groomsman, Joseibal Gentili.

Quite a romance attaches to this marriage. Francesco Marino, the happy bridegroom, has been a resident of Peterboro since 1894, having come here straight from the classic land of Italy.

The romance attaching to the wedding, is that Mr. Joseph Jennie, a friend of the groom, left this city a year ago on a visit to Italy. While in the land of his birth, in accordance with a solemn promise made Mr. Marino, before leaving, Jennie, picked out a lady likely to meet with Marino's demands in the matter of beauty and personality, and was instrumental in sending her out to Canada to meet Marino. She filled the bill completely, hence yesterday's marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Marino after the ceremony repaired to the cottage on Welland street, where they will reside, and this yesterday, presented a scene of merriment and festivity appropriate to the happy occasion.

ATHLETIC WORLD

BY OUR SPORTING EDITOR

RUGBY.

Saturday's Rugby Trip.

The local Rugby club decided to run an excursion to Hamilton for the Peterboro-Dundas game. From Hamilton the boys will go to Dundas by street cars. They will leave on the regular eight o'clock C.P.R. train on Saturday, and there will be a special train to Hamilton. A large crowd will doubtless avail themselves of this exceedingly low fare and see the contest on the Tigers. The tickets will be good returning until Monday night, and will be sold at a low rate.

• • • •

The team had a good practice last night in preparation for the first game in the finals with Dundas on Saturday. The boys will have to be in the best of shape when they meet the Westerners and it is important that this week's practice should be largely attended.

• • • •

The Brockville Recorder says:

Shaw is one of the best centre backs seen on the local gridirons.

Brockville is now through for the season, but the Peterboros are good chaps and hope's hoping they win out.

HOCKEY.

The Toronto Globe of yesterday said—Despite the story that a Peterboro man refused an offer of $40 a week to play in Bourgeau, the price they are actually playing for players there is just $25.

• • • •

The semi-finals in the junior series, O.R.F.U. will be as follows:

Nov. 18—Victoria II. vs. Hamilcaps Hollerills.

Nov. 18—Galt vs. Petrolea at London.

The intermediate finals have been arranged as follows:

Nov. 18—Peterboro at Dundas.

Nov. 25—Dundas at Peterboro.

CURLING.

The Ontario Curling Association Executive Committee met on Wednesday to re-arrange the clubs in groups 1 and 5 of the Ontario Tankard competition, according to the instructions of the October meeting. President T. O. Robson, of St. Mary's occupied the chair, and the other members present were:—Rev. R. N. Burns, Brampton; Dr. Russell, Hamilton; D. Carfrie, J. W. Cerveran, Toronto, and Secretary J. A. Macfadden. The following arrangements were made:

Group 1—Lindsay, Port Hope, Cobourg, Richmond Hill, Uxbridge Toronto, Toronto Granite, Fernent Park, Queen City. Umpire, Dr. Russell. Play at Toronto.

Group 5—Oshawa, Brampton, Colborne, Peterboro, Bobcaygeon, East Toronto, Aberdeens, Toronto Caledonias, Parkdale, Lakeviews. Umpire, J. W. Cerveran. Play at Toronto.

The Grimsby Club was admitted to membership, and placed in the District Cup competition in District No. 5. Pennetanguishene will play in District No. 3, Elora in No. 4, and Londesboro in No. 6.

Roose Returns to Ireland

New York, November 15.—Jeremiah O'Donovan Rossa, the Irish agitator, sailed for Ireland on the Kaiserin on Saturday to pass the remainder of his days. Rossa is now 74 years of age. He goes to Cork to become secretary of the Common Council. Almost 500 friends and sympathizers were at the pier to bid Rossa farewell, and just before sailing he said he would continue to give his time to working for the freedom of his native land.

Crooked Work in Montreal Elections

Civil Servants and Recipients of Tariff Favors all "Worked" to Send "Dan" Gallery to Parliament---Hard Cross Swearing.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—For the past week or more the election committee have been probing into the election of Ald. Dan Gallery as member for St. Ann's division in the House of Commons. The state of affairs revealed is, to say the least, peculiar. Ald. Gallery, by his own admission, paid out money to 144 chairmen of committees freely, without taking any steps whatever to control the expenditure, and he has not been able to estimate within $2,000 the amount he so paid out.

His own estimates vary from $4,150 to $6,650. Several of these chairmen have since been called, and they have declared in each case the amount which they received. Except in one case these amounts have been smaller, all the way from $50 to $200, than Ald. Gallery admitted giving them.

Following Ald. Gallery's methods, no chairman of committee has made any vouchers, statements or returns showing the purposes to which this money was devoted. They have explained the expenditure by saying they had to pay "hosters." Ald. Gallery himself has admitted that the word "hoster" is of his own invention. He has explained and several of his chairmen corroborate him on this point, that he never wants the men who go around from his committees to ask an elector to vote for him, nor even know they will vote. This distinguishes the "hoster" from the canvasser, and by this means the astute alderman thinks that he has evaded the prescription of the law which forbids the hiring of canvassers.

Another irregularity admitted by the chairmen is the paying of servitieurs. It is true that these men have been called "representatives" and that it is generally stated that they had made no agreement to have their services in the polls paid for separately, but many witnesses say they were promised $5 each and that hostlers to the polls were promised $10 each.

John Cowan, chairman of one of the committees investigated, and who subscribes himself as George A. Drummond, President of the Canadian Sugar Refining, Mr. Cowan, while he owns his elevation to the Senate to the Conservative party, has since his accession to the Kingsmere, become a ruthless supporter of Dan Gallery, and accuses Potter and McCarthy, two of the leaders among the minor officials of the company, and charge of a district. Mr. Cowan has admitted that he instructed his hostlers to endeavor to ascertain the attitude of the electors towards the candidates, and that he checked the lists in consequence of those reports. He also admits that it is quite possible that he treated some electors during the election, though he could not remember having done so. He did not think he had treated any oftener during that time than usual, and then not in saloons, for he is a total abstainer.

Paul Hinch, a cattleman, who is admitted to have been one of the members of Calder's committee, tells a damaging story against Ald. Gallery. He has testified to receiving $5 on two different occasions, once in the committee rooms and once outside, "to treat the boys." Hinch by added that he had treated everybody around, at Letourneille's saloon, and other places. He also states that he was present when several electors were treated in the Duke's Hotel bar, and that John Calder paid for the drinks. Moreover he tells of receiving $10 to pay a number of voters who had gone on strike; and $6 more for expense money, which meant treating, besides $25 for his own work, while Mr. Calder admits paying his wife the rental of the committee room, and $2 or $3 for services rendered by the children.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE

A Change in Food Makes.

All these things come from lack of the right elements in the food. A Professor says.

"Some years ago while teaching in Canada, I began to run down and a daily headache and nervousness distressed me, then my eyes became affected and pained me greatly. There were days when it seemed the top of my head would lift off and the pain drive me crazy.

"I gave up work in Winnipeg and got a graduate scholarship at Cornell University. But after being there four months I broke down completely, with eye trouble, stomach trouble and head trouble. For 8 months I was unable to resume my work—for one entire month I was kept in a darkened room.

"I came back to Canada and began teaching again, struggling against continued bad health. The doctors said my troubles came from my nerves, the oculist said from my eyes. I read everything on the subject I could get hold of. In a famous work on 'Neurasthenia' one sentence struck me particularly: 'Diet alone, without medicine, will do more good than all the medicine in the world without diet.'

"I have demonstrated most thoroughly and completely the truth of that declaration.

"From trying different foods I stumbled on Grape-Nuts, as a forlorn hope, a few months ago. When I began Grape-Nuts I weighed 118 pounds and after using it for a short time found my weight increased to 125 pounds. It is not my nature to be very heavy, so the gain was remarkable.

"However, that was only one and the smallest of the benefits I derived from Grape-Nuts. Before I began to use it I could not concentrate my mind on my work; in school I was so nervous I could scarcely stand before my pupils.

"Now my head is absolutely free from aches and pains; I never have any more trouble with my stomach and my eyes; my nerves are restored, and my mental powers are active and vigorous. In fact my friends say I am a transformed man.

"I feel that it is to the use of Grape-Nuts food alone that I owe my restoration to health and that by its use I can keep myself in perfect mental and physical condition. I sometimes leave it out of my bill of fare for a week or two, only to return to it again and feel the same improvement immediately.

"I refer you teamy of the school and University authorities in Winnipeg, where I was classical master in the Collegiate Institute for 3 years, as well as to Prof. Bennett, head professor in Latin at Cornell University.

"I have simply stated plain facts, and unhesitatingly declare that I would rather die than again go through the torturous and miseries from which Grape-Nuts delivered me." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

POSTAL REGULATIONS

Col. Rogers, Local Post-Master Issues Circular re Addresses on Letters

Lieut.-Col. H. C. Rogers, Peterboro's popular postmaster, yesterday handed the following notice to a Times representative, with a request that the same be brought before public notice, and thereby save a lot of possible delay and annoyance both to correspondents and to the local post office staff.

Postmaster Rogers has sent out the following notice:—

I am desired by the Postmaster-General to suggest to persons mailing boxes that they would not only greatly facilitate the operations of the post office, but prevent mistakes by instructing their correspondents to address their letters and papers, not to their offices or residences, but to the numbers of their boxes.

A DRIVING ACCIDENT

Mr. John R. Graham Dragged For Two Miles, Entangled in the Lines

We are pleased to say that Mr. John R. Graham, is doing as well as could be expected after his recent accident of last Sunday. Mr. Graham is now suffering severely from the nervous shock sustained, and his medical attendant says looks out good hopes of his recovery, owing to the sound constitution of his patient.

The accident occurred near Roslin on Sunday. Mr. Graham and wife, started for Roslin from McKim's Corners, when the reach of the buggy broke. Mrs. Graham was thrown out, and Mr. Graham became tangled in the reins and was dragged nearly two miles. He was carried into Dr. Hudson's office, with his leg, from the hip to the knee, terribly mangled, besides other bruises.

ROWE IS DYING

Suffers a Collapse and All Hope is Abandoned

Chicago, November 15.—News reached here today from El Paso, Mex., that John Alexander Dowie is dying. The latest despatches from Mexico say he recently suffered two collapses. The first stroke of paralysis occurred in a hotel in the City of Mexico, and the second on the Zion plantation, where Dowie was on a trip of inspection.

It is reported that Dowie told his followers that he had selected his son to succeed him, and begged them to give him their support. This is said to have proven very displeasing to the deacons, each of whom had hoped to be the next "prophet."

CATHEDRAL WEDDING

Miss M. A. Allen Becomes the Bride of Mr. W. J. Garvey

Yesterday morning in St. Peter's Cathedral a pretty wedding took place, when Miss Mary Ann Allen, daughter of Mr. John Allen, of this city, was united in marriage to Mr. William John Garvey, also of Peterboro. Rev. Father Kelly performing the ceremony in the presence of a number of the friends of the contracting parties. The bride, suitably attired, was attended as bridesmaid by Miss Katie Allen, her sister, while Mr. Joseph Garvey, brother of the groom, acted as groomsman. After the ceremony the happy couple, with the guests, repaired to the residence of the bride's parents, where a wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Garvey will reside in this city.

Vandalism at the Capital

Ottawa, November 15.—Another Ottawa Church has been broken into by thieves. Some night recently unknown parties entered the Fourth Avenue Baptist church and destroyed the clock. A number of acts of wanton vandalism and robbery have been committed in Ottawa and suburbs during the past ten days, and the police believe that an organized gang of thieves is operating in the district.

Your Last Opportunity Will Soon Pass.

We have had an advertisement in The Times several days giving some facts about the BIG CASINO MINES, but some people seem to think it impossible for so good an investment to be offered in Peterboro.

We will give $500.00 to anyone who will disprove one of the following statements.

The Big Casino Mines are located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode."

We have 270 acres of ground. Have been developing and equipping the property more than three years and a half. Have spent over $300,000.00 on the property.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done. Have a very large amount of good ore blocked out ready to break down and mill, and have more ore in our property than can be mined out in two or three life times.

We have apparently inexhaustible bodies of good ore. We also have ore that will mill $1,000.00 per ton.

We have a modern 20 stamp mill in good condition, to which we propose to add 10 stamps as soon as possible. With 30 stamps we will pay $30,000.00 to $60,000.00 per month in dividends. $30,000 00 per month will be 1 cents per share per month, or 48 per cent. on the money you invest in the stock at 24 cents per share.

We will lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, making 100 stamps which we propose to put in inside of the next twelve months, then your dividends should every year be at least equal to your investment,

$250.00 and two weeks' time should cover every expense of a trip to the mines, so that you can personally examine them and have the opportunity of disproving the above facts and get the $500.00.

Are you satisfied with interest or would you prefer profits like these we have told you the Big Casino will pay?

Your money is no safer in real estate, in the bank or anywhere else, than invested in Big Casino stock.

Four years ago Calumet, of Arizona, sold at $1.00 per share to raise money to develop and equip the mines. Certain people said it can't be any good or it would all be taken up out there; but they sold their stock and developed the mine, and paid their first dividend on Dec. 12th, 1903. The dividend was $2.00 per share, just twice what the stock cost, and they paid $10.00 per share last year, and will pay their last quarterly dividend for this year next month, which will make $70.00 per share this year, and the stock is quoted on the open markets of the world at $115.00 to $130 per share.

Granite Mountain stock was sold in St. Louis at 10 cents per share, and in 10 months after their mill started the stock was worth $72.00 per share in the open market and paid the St. Louis stockholders $13,200,000.00 in dividends during the next three years.

Neither of the above named mines gave more promise of making the wonderful producer they have proved to be, at the same stage of development, than the Big Casino does at present.

The directors of the Big Casino know their stock, based on the ore developed and equipment of the property, would be cheap at par, $1.00 per share, and will advance the price to $1.00 Nov. 20th, if not sooner. Right to advance the price to $1.00 any day is reserved, and the 20th is positively the last day you can buy the stock for less than $1.00 per share.

The Big Casino is a developed mine, and we will make one of the large dividend payers of the State of California out of it if we never sold a share of stock, for we can get all the money out of the mine to add to that $500, and it would only delay dividends a little longer.

The Big Casino will become a permanent dividend payer early in the coming year, and should pay not less than 24 per cent. on your investment at 20 cents per share the first year.

Remember the price may advance any day, and there will be none offered you for less than $1.00 per share after the 20th.

Yours truly,

GEO. L. PORTER,

Peterboro, Ont., Nov. 14th, 1905.

P. S.--See me at the White House.

When Run-down "Draggy," Used-up

You Lack the Vigor, Cou age and Staying Power that "Ferro-zone' Can Supply

Night comes and it's hard to sleep. Morning dawns and the anxious, tired feeling is still there. Don't neglect this gradual decline; it don't cure itself. But by forming rich, pure blood, Ferrozone will quickly supply the nutriment and building material your system craves.

Instantly you are aware that some powerful force is building up your depleted energies. Day by day you feel braced, toned, strengthened. Search the world over and you won't find anything to take up a weak system like Ferrozone. Physicians claim it is the most strengthening, uplifting medicine ever discovered.

No more spells of tiredness, but bounding, joyful health when you take Ferrozone, of which Mrs. H. S. Udell, of Bowmans, Mass., speaks in the following words of praise:

"I state my case because I think it may assist other women to health. A year ago I was almost a wreck. I was pale and emaciated, suffering from nervousness, and hysteria. Little things going wrong in the house bothered me. The doctor advised different treatments but they didn't help. He said my low condition was due to weakness that might never be cured. Ferrozone had a peculiar grateful effect and built me up quickly. The ills I suffered from are cured. I am now strong and vigorous and was made so by Ferrozone."

Why not cast aside the claims of sickness and enter the bright, happy life of robust health. Let Ferrozone help you—let it cure you once and forever. Price 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

PETERBORO, NOVEMBER 15 1905

EDISON'S FOUR-OUNCE MEALS.

"People eat and sleep too much, and don't work enough," said Mr. Thomas Alvah Edison, in the Sunday World of October 1.

"Eat heartily and sleep long," said Mr. Frank R. Lawrence in the Sunday World of November 12. "As a rule," he continued, "the vice of American people is not overeating. It is overworking."

Mr. Edison, who has tested his own theory of working, is busy, hale and hearty at 58. Mr. Lawrence, who is president of the Lotos Club, a familiar figure at great banquets and active in many ways, presents at 60 the appearance of a man less than 50. We have, then, two types of fine, vigorous manhood exploiting what seems to be directly opposite views on the vital questions of eating, resting and doing.

Superficially, Mr. Edison advances an Ascetic ideal which man generally approve in theory, while Mr. Lawrence offers the "red-blood" doctrine that prevails in practice.

Really there is less difference in the preachings of the two men than appears on the surface. Both are against gluttony, but while Mr. Edison advocates abstinence as a precaution, Mr. Lawrence says merely "Eat all you can enjoy." A man who eats until he is "food drunk"—the Edison phrase—has surely passed the limit of intelligent enjoyment. If the inventor is a glutton for anything, it is for work. But, as favoring Mr. Lawrences views of rest, he admits sleeping twenty hours after a particularly hard task.

For every point on either side of the Edison-Lawrence discussion expert medical opinion can be quoted. Mr. Edison is backed also by the tests in what Mr. Lawrence calls hair-splitting petty chemistry at the table." Who is to decide.?

PARLIAMENT FEARS THE PEOPLE.

In West Lambton both party candidates in the bye-election pending there have pledged themselves to support measures looking to the repeal of the legislation under which the Ottawa indemnities have been increased and pensions to ex-Ministers provided for. In North York, Mr. Aylesworth, the new Cabinet Minister, has given a public pledge to use his influence to secure a modification of the pension clauses. Finally, a despatch from Ottawa to The Globe intimates that the Government as a whole is seriously contemplating a repeal of these latter clauses. All this shows the influence which public opinion has already been able to bring to bear in the proper quarter. It shows, too, that the people can, by continuing the agitation, compel restitution to the public treasury of the money looted therefrom.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Empress Eugenie is still engaged in her memoirs, and to the completion of which she devotes most of her leisure moments. As soon as a page is written it is placed under a lock and key and not even her most intimate friends are allowed to see it. The work is not to be published until twenty-five years after her death. Her majesty uses in writing a penholder set with diamonds, which was used by the fourteen representatives in signing the treaty of Paris in 1856, and was given to her as a momento.

Mill Burned at Shediac

Moncton, N. B., November 13. — The flour mill, owned by Senator Poirier, at Shediac, was destroyed by fire. It is supposed that the fire originated from the furnace. When discovered the flames had made considerable headway, and it was impossible to save the building. The warehouse adjoining was also burned to the ground. The loss will be about $15,000; partly covered by insurance.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWE

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7.50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 1500x1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior. The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased, [illegible] on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

A RARE CHANCE FOR PROFITABLE INVESTMENT

THOS. PATTERSON & CO.

MINING AND INDUSTRIAL STOCKS

61 Simcoe Street, are pleased to announce that they have been appointed fiscal agents of the

CALUMET-TELLURIDE GOLD MINING CO.

of Colorado, and have secured a limited amount of stock of this splendid proposition, which they are prepared to sell at

$1.00 PER SHARE, PAR VALUE

This is a rare chance for a safe and profitable investment.

Our customers and the investing public are requested to watch for full particulars, which will appear in these columns in a few days. Call at our office and talk it over, if you have any money that is lying idle, as this is an investment we can recommend.

THOS. PATTERSON & CO.

I offer, subject to prior sale, 50,000 shares of the Capital Stock of The

Oxarna Gold Mining Company

at the "Ground Floor" price of TEN CENTS A SHARE, (none has been offered for less), par value $1 00, fully paid and non-assessable.

The OXARNA GOLD MINING COMPANY is capitalized at $1,000,000.00, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1.00 each. The Oxarna Stock was originally all in the treasury, no preferred or promotion stock having been issued by this Company, and up to the present time only 250,000 shares of their stock have been issued.

The OXARNA COMPANY own by United States Patent and Deed, 142 Acres of highly mineralized land in the Famous Thunder and Custer Mountain Mining District, which adjoins the Rich Mines of the Mines in our immediate vicinity. One of the Mines contiguous to our property on the north has produced $1,200,000.00 and five veins of this rich ore parallel on one of our claims, and by about 2,000 feet of shafts, tunnels, cuts and upraises the OXARNA COMPANY have uncovered over $1,500,000.00 worth of ore, and they have a large amount of ore in the ore bins and on the dump that averages over $67.00 a ton, and they expect to be in position to Mill not less than 100 tons of ore every day in a very short time, but if they only Mill 50 tons a day in less than one year they can pay 150 per cent. on the par value of the stock out standing in dividends, for they expect to have less than 400,000 shares of the stock on the market when they are fully financed.

The Oxarna Company have purchased a Mill all fully equipped and ready for business, that originally cost about $15,000.00, and they owe a balance of $6,000.00 on this Mill that will be due in three months, and in order to raise this amount quickly I am privileged to make this most liberal offer, for the stock is easily worth par today, for the time is rapidly approaching when the Company will be on a paying basis and the stock will become immensely remunerative in the near future.

Subject to prior sales I offer the above allotment on the following terms: 4 per cent. discount will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order, or subscriptions will be accepted on the installment plan, 1-4 of the amount with the order and a like amount in 30, 60 and 90 days. Make all orders payable to the undersigned or remit through the NATIONAL BANK of Delphos, and they will forward stock subject to your order.

Personally I advise you to get all of this stock that you can pay for during the next three months, for it is an exceedingly good investment. For further particulars call on or address, but you belong to me—you belong to me! No, Marsden, you shall not leave me!"

"What is life to me?" asked Marsden, with a calm despair. "A dishonoring shackle. The sooner I am rid of it the better. I can not struggle with you. If you have any pity, let me go!"

"I will not! I can not! Oh! Marsden, how I have hated you! You have been so unspeakable false! To rob me, that you might shake me off and marry my rival. Yet," and her eyes softened as they rested on his fine face, so rigid in its despair, on his attitude, grand even in its expressive abandonment, "with all, I can not let you destroy yourself! If I could hope that gratitude would awaken anything like affection, tenderness!"

"I am not worth saving," interrupted Marsden, speaking more collectedly. He began to calculate chances. "I know I have done a dastardly deed. I never saw its full baseness till I was found out." He smiled a bitter, cynical smile. "That does not show much of a moral nature to work upon; but I have so much decency left that it is torture to be under your eye, to hear your just reproaches. I do not ask you for mercy. If you choose to call a policeman, do so. You would be in your right. I will not resist."

He folded his arms and stood quite still.

"And do you not know I should tear my own heart to pieces, if I injured you?" she cried, in a passion of anger and love. "Oh! I can save you! I will save you! if you promise to give me the love I long for! Can I not win you by such service as man never had offered him before? I can save more than your life."

"I have no love to give!" said Marsden in a low tone. "I have done with love and friendship; and, however generous you may be, how can you silence your detectives?"

"I have bound up this interest with his discretion," she said eagerly, still keeping between Marsden and the door.

"I tell you, your bitterest revenge is to prevent my escaping life and its intolerable pangs."

"And I tell you," she cried, hardening again, "that if you kill yourself I will blazon the story of your felony, your shame, to the whole world! I will myself describe to Nora L'Estrange your disguised, your creeping to and fro to rob your plunder."

"Silence!" interrupted Marsden fiercely, making a step forward, then recovering himself. "It is not probable I can do anything to atone, to compensate. If I can—" he broke off.

Mrs. Ruthven paused and clasped her hands tightly together.

"I will not know your terms," she said slowly. "It will be a secret between our two selves. Ought not that to be an indissoluble bond of union? There is not a breath of suspicion against you. Waite's interest is distinctly to be silent. If I choose to submit to so great a loss, that is by affair."

"It is a tremendous if," said Marsden. "How am I to repay so huge a debt?"

"By giving me your life," she returned in quickly resolute tones, "by giving me your honor!"

"Do you remember that I am not only in love with Nora, but openly engaged to her?"

"I do, and breaking with her will be a considerable part of your atonement. I know men tolerably well; you are quite capable of loving two."

"You are right! My love for Nora is—I can not speak of it to you—it has hitherto been the most, the only, spiritualized passion I ever knew, there has been no time as yet for it to become incarnate. Now there is in you an undertone of deviltry that always attracted me."

"Will you break with Nora for my sake?" demanded Mrs. Ruthven imperiously.

"It could be managed," he returned thoughtfully, remembering his last interview with her. "Be that as it may, I shall never marry her now!"

"And my great sacrifice, will it not draw your heart to me!" she cried. "Oh! I have been wild with love and hate for you, and I feel how madly foolish and despicable I am to act as I do!" She burst into a passionate fit of sobbing.

The light came back to Marsden's eyes.

"You are a woman any man might love," he said, "and as you wisely admit that men can love two of more (we are generally broader than women, some women), you shall have all the love left in me, of my lifelong gratitude you may be sure. You are making a sorry bargain, I warn you. I shall never be the same again, but if you care to be Mrs. Marsden of Riversleigh, so be it!"

"Ah! you are simply selling yourself! And what a price I pay!"

"No! by Heaven! I am grateful, and I always admired you! Even that night, when I unclasped your necklace I felt inclined to kiss the pretty white throat that was so velvet soft to my sacrilegious touch!"

"And why did you not! Had you brought back consciousness by your kisses and confided your difficulties to me, all would have been well!" cried the infatuated woman, throwing herself into his arms.

What would a criminal so respited not pay the tribute demanded with liberal hand?

For the moment Marsden was moved and really grateful, though a bitter sense of being sold into slavery tinged his feelings of relief.

"How could you be so fascinated by Nora L'Estrange?" asked Mrs. Ruthven, still leaning against him and looking up in his face. "She is not even good enough to [illegible]

THE MEDERA CONCESSION

Germany Striving to Develop Interest in Portugal

Lisbon, November 14.—A diplomatic incident with Germany in connection with Madeira concessions appears to have taken the form of an ultimatum, and the impression is gaining ground that Germany seems determined to transform this question into an affair similar to that of Morocco. It is evident that Germany is striving to develop her interests in Portugal, the latest symptom being a plan for the establishment of a German Bank at Lisbon.

The Novidades says the King's visit to Paris has been adjourned since die in consequence of difficulties in the internal political situation.

PITIFUL SCENES

Occured During the Release of the Convicts in St. Petersburg

St. Petersburg, November 14.—Many touching scenes were witnessed yesterday when the political prisoners were released under the amnesty decrees. At the Schlusselburg fortress up the river, where the most dangerous political prisoners are kept in solitary confinement, a great concourse gathered looking for loved ones who vanished years ago, and whose whereabouts were unknown, but only four were released. Disappointed women wailing for husbands, sons or brothers, broke down and wept. A man named Fralenko and a comrade who said they had spent over 20 years in prison came out with long white beards. They knew practically nothing about what had occurred during their long imprisonment. Maximoff, the murderer of Interior Minister Von Plehve; Peter Karpovitch, the assassin of Minister of Public Instruction Bogolepoff; Geroliant, the chief of the Terrorist conspiracy, and other Terrorists were not released. A large body of prisoners released from other prisons later visited meetings and related their experiences.

No Medicine Cures so Many Sick, Overstrained, Despondent, Weak People as DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS

The One True Medicine for Health and Strength

You will realise, as you read the following letters, the grand work being done by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They have a direct action on the blood, nerves, heart, kidneys and liver. All weakness is turned into strength, new energy and nourishing blood are created, buoyant good health is established in a short time.

DISCOURAGED WOMEN FOUND NEW HOPE.

"I had pretty nearly given myself up as incurable. I was weak and sickly all the time, had headache, poor digestion and sinking feeling. On rising in the morning there was a feeling of awful weariness.

"Dr. Hamilton's Pills helped from the first. They must have strengthened my blood, for I gained in strength in spite of the cold, damp weather. Steady improvement followed, and I am now completely cured."

Mrs. M. E. Benson, Woodstock.

STRENGTH AND SPIRITS IMPROVED.

"No medicine could possibly be better than Dr. Hamilton's Pills," writes Mr. Jos. Devine from Ottawa. "I had pains in the back and side, caused by kidney trouble, was bothered considerably with headache, but Dr. Hamilton's Pills cured me quickly. I can recommend them for every man."

You'll become vigorous and strong, enjoy a good appetite, your sleep will be dreamless and sound, after regulating your system with Dr. Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Price 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1, at all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A. and Kingston, Ont.

—Mr. John Finlay, M.P., of Norwood, has been granted a patent on a pneumatic by the village council in a new factory he intends building.

—Jerome K. Jerome will give his lecture in the Chestnut Opera House in Philadelphia. Further comment seems useless.

—Mrs J. H. Brown, inspector of Factories, writes that the age limit for the employment of children in shops is ten years under the Shops' Act, while it is 14 years under the Factories' Act.

JUST A WORD of caution: Where the skin is destroyed by burns or scalds apply Weaver's Cerate, reduced with sweet oil or lard. Otherwise the Cerate in full strength should be used; the sooner the better.

—The debate which was to have taken place yesterday evening in the Young Conservative Club rooms on "Public Ownership," has been postponed owing to some of the members who were to have taken part not being able to be present.

—At a meeting of the Carpenters' Union held Monday night, it was decided to hold a smoking concert in the near future. The exhibition will be held in their spacious hall. The date is not yet definitely settled upon, but will be noted in The Times later on.

—Mr. W. McDuffus yesterday placed very handsome anodized door plates, some two feet high, on the double doors of his George street restaurant. A new lock, similarly finished was also added. This presents a very ornamental appearance, and gives the restaurant its last "finished" touch.

—The Times was yesterday in receipt of a letter in which our correspondent strongly advocated the wearing of "Full dress" at to-night's opening of the new opera house. As this is strictly a matter of personal taste, we omit the letter and leave our readers to decide this momentous question for themselves.

FROM TEXAS

Some Coffee Facts From the Lone Star State.

From a beautiful farm down in Texas, where gushing springs unite to form babbling brooks that wind their sparkling way through flowery meads, comes a note of gratitude for delivery from the coffee habit.

"When my baby boy came to me five years ago, I began to drink Postum Food Coffee, having a feeling that if would be better for him and me than the old kind of drug-laden coffee. I was not disappointed in it, for it enabled me, a small delicate woman, to nurse a bouncing healthy baby 14 months.

"I have since continued the use of Postum for I have grown fond of it, and have discovered to my joy that it has entirely relieved me of a bilious habit which used to prostrate me two or three times a year, causing much discomfort to my family and suffering to myself.

"My brother-in-law was cured of chronic constipation by leaving off the old kind of coffee and using Postum. He has become even more fond of it than he was of the old coffee.

"In fact the entire family, from the latest arrival, (a 2-year old who always calls for his 'potie' first thing in the morning) up to the head of the house, think there is no drink so good or so wholesome as Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

Mr. Turner Delivers a Lecture

Mr. J. J. Turner's lecture on his recent trip to Europe with the Canadian manufacturers, given at All Saints church, Monday evening, was very highly spoken of yesterday. He left Peterboro on the 9th June last, taking the Allan Liner Victorian, and was in the company of three Peterboro citizens during the trip. On July 11th after a most interesting visit in the large cities of England, the party went to France, taking ship from Dover. Mr. Turner sailed from England on Sept. 7th, by steamer Tunisian, arriving home on the 14th. Mr Turner described most graphically the interesting details of his extensive trip.

Found Dead in Cemetery

P. Shaughton, clerk at the Globe Hotel, Picton, was found dead in the cemetery there on Saturday morning with a bottle of prussic acid in his pocket. He was last seen on Friday afternoon, and was acting strangely. He was about 45 years of age, and a few years ago clerked in the McGregor house in Norwood. He leaves a wife and two children.

A CUTE JAG

Local Citizen, Whilst Under the Influence Keeps His Wife From Getting Next

Yesterday evening, a well-known local citizen had imbibed not wisely but too well. His perambulations during the afternoon had included frequent calls on spots where red eye and other liquid refreshments are sold. The citizen, whose name shall for obvious reasons, be omitted here, as well as his particular line of business, had still sufficient sense left to know that an early return home, would result in the application of the family broom, or at least a tongue lashing that he did not relish facing.

About 10 p.m., his usual time for returning home, from his place of business, he remarked to his "bona camaradas." "Boys I guess I had better call up the wife and give her a ghost story about being delayed by business."

He accordingly went to the telephone of the hotel, he was just then patronizing, and ringing up No. —, was heard to say, "Is that your ....." "Well, don't sit up for me to-night. I am on a relief committee of the lodge and have to sit up with a sick friend. I will be home for breakfast probably, and, if possible sooner. If I can get one of the lodge members to take my place, I will come home late to-night, but do not wait up as I shall be very late."

His friends noticing by this interrupted conversation of the audible end of the conversation, that the speaker in sight, was not being heard accurately, said to him "Say —— why don't you take that cigar out of your mouth so Mrs. ——, can hear you better?" "Why you —— idiots, do you think I want my wife to smell the gin off my breath? I'm too foxy for that. I keep puffing smoke into this telephone all the time I am speaking."

His friends will await his advent in the office this morning, to learn whether Mrs. —— got next to the truth.

Resigns Presidency of A.Y.P.S.

Mr. John Pattle, President of St. John's Anglican Young Peoples' Society has resigned the position he has filled so ably. On Monday night Mr. Harold Clinton read an address to Mr. Pattle on behalf of the society, and Mr. Jas. R. Bell presented him with a prayer and hymn book. Mr. Chas. Reid was unanimously elected to the office vacated by Mr. Pattle's resignation. An interesting debate, to determine whether the Irish possess more wit than all other nations was decided, by the audience, in the affirmative. The affirmative was taken by Messrs. Chris. Graham, Chas. Reid and Jardine; while the negative was upheld by Messrs. Howard-Moore, James Ball and Walker.

The judges were Mr. and Mrs. E. Harding-Wilmot and Mr. W. Harold Clinton.

Bagged Two Moose up North

Messrs. S. F. Stone and Wm. Hendley, of Lindsay, returned last week from a two weeks' hunt in the neighborhood of Sudbury. They succeeded in securing two fine moose—one a beautiful bull with handsome antlers, also three deer, one of which is a large buck weighing 240 pounds. They report seeing some fine moose and plenty of signs of wolves. They had one of the best hunts they ever enjoyed.

MANAGEMENT RETURNS THANKS

To Citizens Who Subscribed to the Advanced Sale of Tickets at New Opera House

Those interested in the new opera house wish The Times to convey their thanks to the public-spirited citizens who subscribed to the advance sale of tickets for the opening attraction. The evidence this given of that fact that they were willing to contribute to the support of an opera house, should the capital become interested in the project, is deeply appreciated by the management of this new playhouse, who take this means of expressing it. It is very largely due to the action of these gentlemen who subscribed that the opera house project was made feasible.

The prices for the production of the comic opera success, "The Yankee Consul," have been fixed at 75c, $1 $1.50 and $2.

The plan is at Ormonde & Walsh's where advance purchases may be made, commencing to-night at six o'clock. The number of persons who have already taken steps indicates the general desire on the part of the public to patronize the new opera house, and the prospects are that the opening night will see a brilliant gathering.

A MISSING PENNY

Belleville Woman Writes Enquiring for News of Her Son

Chief Ramsel was yesterday in receipt of a communication from Mrs. Penny, of South John street, Belleville, in which the writer asked if the local police could send her any word of her son, William, who left that city last April to take a job with the McDonald Lumber Co., of Peterboro.

The chief has ascertained that William Penny worked for Mr. McDonald from April to July last, when he was paid off, and all knowledge of his whereabouts ends.

Mrs. Penny described her son as being 5ft. 10in. in height, fair complexion and very bald. He frequently went by the nickname of "Skinner" Penny.

She further said that he has always been very wayward. As Mrs. Penny is very anxious about her son's continued absence, any one knowing anything of his whereabouts knowing anything of his whereabouts would confer a favor by acquainting the chief of police here, or writing to Mrs. Perry at her Belleville address.

Canned Corn on the Cobs

The latest novelty in groceries was yesterday placed on view by Mr. Arthur Rowntree, the enterprising George street grocer. It consists of gallon cans of corn on the cob, all ready for use when heated. The importation of such new wrinkles in any line of goods demonstrates that Peterboro is now demanding the best the world produces, and it reflects great credit on a firm who take the chance of introducing a luxury never seen here before. Epicures declare something new to tickle their palates can now have fresh corn right on the cob, at all seasons of the year.

Turner & Sons' New Sign

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, the enterprising manufacturers of sails and camping outfits, yesterday erected over their fine George street emporium what is perhaps the finest sign of its kind ever in use in or without doubt the best in Canada. Made by Tilsley & Sons, signs, artists, yesterday, in 40 feet long by about two feet high. On a back ground of a beautiful shade of green, in gold carved wood letters covered with gilding, in the centre just appears the words "J. J. Turner & Sons." On one end appears the word "Tents," whilst at the other end is the word "Awnings." The whole is well illuminated by three electric lamps in globes.

To Give up Land To The Peasants

One-Third of European Russia to Be Surrendered by Czar and Grand Dukes---Workmen Strike for a Republic.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 15.—The Associated Press is informed from a high source that a Ukase will be issued shortly, whereby a large portion of the Imperial domain, which covers almost a third of European Russia, and which at present is the property of the Emperor and Grand Dukes, will be given to the peasants.

WITTE MAY COLLAPSE.

London, Nov. 16.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Telegraph sends an interesting picture of Count Witte attending a Cabinet Council for many hours on Monday, until long after midnight, his physician meanwhile waiting in an adjoining room to see him. Then, being afflicted with a severe headache and unable to sleep, the Premier devoted the whole night to arrears of official work.

"My private opinion," says the correspondent, "is that unless these conditions change, Count Witte's marvellous driving powers will be subjected to a very dangerous strain."

OFFICER LOST HIS HEAD.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 15.—The latest reports from Vladivostock indicate that the rioting has not yet been suppressed. Both the sailors and the fortress artillerymen participated in the outbreak. The commandant lost his head, the situation got beyond his control, and energetic measures were not taken until a large part of the city had been destroyed. The population is still seeking refuge on the vessels in the harbor.

According to one report from Vladivostock, three hundred rioters, mostly sailors and artillerymen, were killed or wounded during the first day of the outbreak.

DEMAND A REPUBLIC.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 16.—The proletariat of St. Petersburg has summoned another general political strike, beginning today, at noon. This action was decided upon late last night by the workmen's strike committee, which now is completely under the domination of the social revolutionists, whose leaders openly proclaim that their ultimate object is the complete overthrow of the monarchy and the establishment of a democratic republic. This also is the final aim of the Social Democrats of Poland, but the proclamation issued keeps this in the background, and apparently supports the popular sympathy for Polish autonomy and the indignation against the application of the death sentence being imposed on the Lomzynski mutineers.

The proclamation says:

"The Imperial Government continues to walk over our corpses. It court-martials the bold soldiers and sailors of Cronstadt, who rose in defence of their rights and national freedom. It encircles weak and oppressed Poland with the iron ring of martial law.

"The Workmen's Council calls on the revolutionary proletariat of St. Petersburg to renew the general political strike which has already demonstrated its dread power in order to show brotherly solidarity with the revolutionary soldiers and sailors, as well as with the revolutionary proletariat of Poland. Let the workmen of St. Petersburg cease work at noon November 16, with the cries of 'Down with the court-martial! 'Down with the death penalty!' 'Down with martial law in Poland and in all Russia.'"

Opera House Kicks

Very general dissatisfaction was everywhere yesterday expressed by those who paid $5 for tickets and found that others than those who lodged out the first night at the new opera house, were admitted at only a fraction of what they paid. It was dreely remarked that faith was not kept with those supporting the new home of the drama. It is a pity that such opinions should greet the new opera house.

SHOOTING AFFAIR

Mrs. Harrington of Toronto Shot Twice in an Aylmer Street Italian Resort

About seven o'clock on Tuesday night, what might have been a fatal affair, took place in an Italian resort at 294 Aylmer street.

It seems that Mrs. Harrington, a Toronto woman, was visiting with her sister who lives in the said house.

While Mrs. Harrington was fooling with a loaded revolver she says she accidentally shot herself. There are two bullet wounds, one in her ethmoid and one in her leg. Dr. McNulty was called to dress the wounds and had the woman taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, and yesterday afternoon performed an operation to locate and remove the bullets.

When the shooting occurred there were several men and women in the house.

When the doctor arrived the wounded woman was all alone, and the house was unoccupied. There was evidence to lead to the supposition of drinking and card playing and further investigation created the impression that the shooting might have been done by some one of the company, and not by Mrs. Harrington herself.

As yet no arrests have been made.

T. V. C. PRAISED

Mr. Richards of American Cereal Co. Discussed Freight Rates

Mr. T. F. Richards, tariff Manager, of the American Cereal Company was in the city yesterday on his way to his home in Chicago.

Mr. Richards when seen yesterday morning stated that nothing of immediate local significance attached to his present visit, in the nature of a holiday in passing.

Asked as to any recent developments with regard to the question of the equalization of freight rates regarding which a decision was given in August last by the Railway Commission at Ottawa, he stated that no further action in the way of a second appeal was at present considered. The railways, however, have entered an appeal which may be argued. The decision of the railway commission affected the position of the Cereal Company very slightly, and detrimentally rather than otherwise. It would, however, be of a very considerable advantage to farmers.

Speaking generally with regard to the local business, Mr. Richards was most enthusiastic with regard to the prospects of its continued expansion. The Trent Canal, he regards as a great, progressive and entirely necessary public work and its completion would be attended by results the benefit of which are scarcely yet to be fully comprehended.

HEARST LAWYERS PLAN ACTION

Ask for Recount of Votes in Ballot Boxes

OVER 2,000 "VOID" BALLOTS

And Over Six Thousand "Protested" Ballots

New York, November 16.—Mr. Hearst's lawyers are planning to apply for several thousand court orders, when the different boards of canvassers meet this week to begin canvassing the vote. The plan of Mr. Hearst's counsel is to ask for an order to compel the inspectors to recount the votes in the ballot boxes whenever the face of the returns show a discrepancy, or, in other words, when they do not balance. It is also their plan to ask for a court order in the case of each "void" and "protested" ballot, which is produced in envelopes at the canvass whenever the two sides cannot agree as to whether such a ballot should have been counted or not.

There are over 2,000 "void" ballots on the returns and some 6,000 ballots "protested." The Tammany lawyers say the ballots in the boxes now sealed cannot be counted, and that no court can direct them to be counted on account of the decision of the Court of Appeals in August, 1904. The outlook is an endless contest.

DICKSON CO. WIN

First Action by Mr. McWilliams Dismissed With Costs---Referee to Decide Second Case

At Osgoode Hall (Toronto) Mr. Justice Street delivered judgment in two cases of great local interest which were tried at the recent assizes here.

McWilliams vs. Dickson Co.—Judgment (R) in action tried without a jury in Peterborough. Action to replevy a quantity of basswood, ash, elm, maple, cedar, hemlock and other sawlogs cut by defendants upon lot 18 in the fifth concession of Cavendish, and removed by them to Burleigh Falls, on Stony Lake. Held, that plaintiff had failed to make out a right to the logs in question. Action dismissed with costs. A. B. Aylesworth, K. C., and R. F. McWilliams (Peterboro) for plaintiff. G. H. Watson, K. C., and G. M. Roger (Peterboro) for defendants.

McWilliams vs. Dickson Co. (No. 2).—Judgment (R) in action tried without a jury in Peterboro. Action to recover the value of certain logs claimed by plaintiff, which were taken away and converted by defendants. The logs in question were cut by plaintiff during the winter of 1903-04 upon lots 18 to 23 in the fourth concession, and lots 19 to 23 in the third concession of Cavendish. Held, that plaintiff is entitled to recover the value of the timber cut upon certain of the lots, excepting the pine timber, which goes to defendants. Reference directed to ascertain the amount (if any) to which plaintiff is entitled in respect of the timber in question. The inquiry must be based upon the provisions of the consent order of May 28th, 1904, declaration that logs cut upon the different lots were mixed together in one mass by plaintiff after they were cut, so that it became impossible to separate them. If the parties are unable to agree upon a referee, counsel will be heard upon the subject. Costs of action and reference reserved until after finding of referee. Same counsel as in the previous case.

Enquiries made by The Times yesterday tended to show that the local counsel on neither side has anything to say yet in reference to the judge's decision in the big case. Both claimed to have gained a victory over the other, Mr. Roger, for the defendants, the Dickson Company, says that his clients have gained considerable ground. Mr. R. F. McWilliams claims that the plaintiff has achieved practically all that he was seeking.

SPIRITS NOT ALL FRAUDS

Dr. Funk Tells of Man Who Saw His Own Corpse

New York Man, in Address to Presbyterian Ministers, Insists There Are Many Psychic Phenomena Which Deserve Investigation at the Hands of Scientific Investigators.

New York, November 16. — The Rev. Dr. F. K. FUNK read a paper on "Psychic Phenomena" before the Presbyterian Ministers' Association today. He said he did not regard spiritualism as being proved, but, on the other hand, he believed there were many psychic phenomena which deserved careful attention at the hands of scientific investigators.

Of Mrs. Pepper, the medium, he said he did not believe she is a fraud. He regarded her as having more capacity for the manifestation of psychic phenomena than any other person he had ever met, but he was not prepared to attempt to give any explanation of this manifestation. In his paper Dr. Funk said:

"After much careful investigation, covering a number of years, I think I am within bounds in saying that nine-tenths of what passes as psychic phenomena is fraudulent. Of the remaining one-tenth coincidence would explain some; some telepathy and clairvoyance would explain."

ONE SENSATIONAL INCIDENT.

It is the remainder of this [illegible] scientists, he said. Dr. Funk then related some incidents out of thousands that had been brought to his attention. One was that told by an eminent physician of this city, whose veracity he pronounced beyond question. This physician, while home in Florida, was attacked with paralysis, from which he expected to die. He finally became unconscious, but felt himself wholly free from pain. He wondered if that was death and thought of a friend a thousand miles distant. At once he seemed to be in the home of that friend and heard the conversation of the family. He tried to speak to them, but could not attract their attention. Suddenly his friend's eyes became riveted upon him and the two conversed, the friend being much surprised at his presence there.

SAW HIS OWN CORPSE.

Then the physician heard a voice saying that if his work was not done he could return to earth. He reasoned over the matter and concluded his work was not done. At once he found himself in his bed chamber looking at his own corpse. By a supreme effort of will he re-entered his body and found a similar night had passed while he became unconscious. Dr. Funk continued:

"That same morning that friend wrote that physician a letter telling him he had a strange dream the night before; that he had seen the physician in his room as clearly as he had ever seen him before, and that in his astonishment he had said to the physician:

"Why, doctor, are you here? I thought you were in Florida. But as I approached to grasp your hand you disappeared. I greatly fear some misfortune has happened to you.'

"This letter and one written by the doctor the same day passed each other on the way, but by subsequent correspondence the physician learned that what he had seen in the conditions stated was a fact."

ATHLETIC WORLD

BY OUR SPORTING EDITOR

HOCKEY.

H. Corby, ex-M.P., has donated a valuable silver cup for competition among the Belleville City League hockey teams. About six teams will enter. Some hockey sports in Lindsay should do likewise and encourage the boys in their efforts to provide hockey for the citizens. Put the boys on their feet and they will play the game all right.

There will be a meeting of the George street Guild to-night at eight o'clock, in the Y.M.C.A. for hockey. George street will have a strong team again this year, and will endeavor to once more land the championship.

• • • •

There is a possibility that Knox church may have a team in the Guild League this year. A rink is to be constructed at the south of the church.

• • • •

The present cold snap has set the hockey men talking, and already some of the boys are hunting up their skates and sticks.

• • • •

BASKETBALL.

The Brownie basketball team are requested to meet at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night for practice.

• • • •

CURLING.

President George Morrow said yesterday morning that the annual meeting of the curlers, would be called within the next few days. At present he had nothing to give for publication. So far no definite plans had been made, although there is no doubt but that Peterboro will have a number of rinks that will be able hold their own in O.C.A. tournaments.

• • • •

RUGBY.

Despite the decidedly cool weather the locals had a good practice at the rink last night and will be in the best of shape for the big game at Dundas on Saturday. Among those out were Crowley, Hurtubise, Dillon, Gilbert, Crouch, Quinlan, Fitzpatrick, Walkey, Hall and Simon.

• • •

There promises to be a big crowd of rooters with the team on Saturday. The fare for the round trip will be only $2.60. The blue and white will be well supported and if Hurtubise's Braves don't pull out a victory there will be a pretty surprised bunch of Peterboro rooters.

• • • •

Dundas only beat Varsity III. on Saturday by 8—5 and on that showing should have no trouble.

• • • •

Bert Dameron, one of the wings of last year's Peterboro team, will play for Dundas on Saturday.

• • • •

Already a large number have signified their intention of taking in the round trip to Dundas on Saturday.

• • • •

The easier circuit meet for this winter promises to be very interesting. Peterboro Normal will probably be seen in a number of the events at the different meets in the circuit.

• • • •

Mr. A Rountree, secretary of the Turf Club has received a communication from W. H. K clark, secretary of the American Trotting Association, stating that Mr. E. A. Cooke, who is at present training some fast ones in Peterboro, has not been expelled from the association, but merely suspended.

"Empress of Britain" Launched

Montreal, November 16.—The new Canadian Pacific Railway steamship "Empress of Britain," was successfully launched on Saturday last by Mrs. Arthur Piers, of Montreal, at Fairfield on the Clyde, in the presence of a large and distinguished gathering, which included a number of prominent Canadians. The launching was most successful and the new steamer starts upon her career under the most favorable auspices, her graceful lines in the water calling forth many words of praise from the spectators. This is the first steamer for the fast Atlantic service of the Canadian Pacific Railway between Liverpool, Quebec and Montreal, and these steamships will be larger and faster than any hitherto on this route, their tonnage being 14,000, length 570 feet and breadth 75 feet.

Would Reduce Duty On Several Fruits

And Admit Lemons, Oranges, and Bananas Free---Brush Makers Want Higher Tariff ---Tenement House Goods From States.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Yesterday session of the Tariff Commission was [illegible] very startling requests made, few startling statements, and little discussion. The work proceeded more quickly than it has at any of the sessions held so far in this city.

CORSET MEN'S WANTS.

The first problem that the Commission sought to wrestle with this morning was the troubles of the corset manufacturers, as stated by representatives of the Crompton Corset Co. John Gilchrist said that they did not agree with the request of the Eastern corset manufacturers, who had asked for an increase of 10 per cent. on the finished article. As regarding 40 per cent. of the materials used in the manufacture of corsets, the Crompton Corset Company wanted a readjustment of the duties on materials. The Canadian corset manufacturer worked against keen competition from Belgium and the United States. One great difficulty was with labor.

"We have to train our girls," said Mr. Gilchrist, "and when they are useful they get married."

COTTON GOODS CRITICIZED.

What they asked was not an increase in the finished article, but a fair tariff on the raw material—a rate of twenty per cent. on all materials used in corset manufacture. The product of Canadian cotton mills was irregular, and had still to be sorted out. Imported goods could be obtained of exactly one shade. To manufacture the better class of goods [illegible] Canada. Week in the Canadian mills, they must be allowed to import the better materials on fairer terms.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE

PETERBORO'S NEW HOME OF THE DRAMA NOW OPEN

Brilliant Assemblage of Peterboro's Elite and Fashion Delighted With the Musical Comedy The Yankee Consul

Last night the long looked for and eagerly anticipated opening of Peterboro's new home of the drama, was [illegible]

Long before the advertised time of opening, a long line of those seeking admission, extended for a considerable way up George street.

As The Times has, in former issues contained full particulars of the plans and dimensions of the Grand Opera House, we will not worry our readers with a repetition.

Last night's audience crowded every available foot of room in our elegant new home of the drama, numbering as the orchestra chairs the majority of those filling every seat, both ladies and gentlemen, showed their appreciation, both of the auspicious opening of the theater, and of the first-class company honored by opening the place, and honoring the theater by a splendid production of a most eminently first-class theatrical production, by appearing in full dress.

The scene presented was a most attractive one; the gay dresses of the ladies, relieved from too glittering a spectacle by the sombre black of the gentlemen, was one to warm the heart of any theatrical manager.

Mr. Rupert Bradburn, manager of the house deserves great credit for the great manner in which he has kept faith with the public, in connection with our new theater.

As it was stated the theater was to have opened several weeks earlier. However sooner than give a half first night production by presenting a crude or unfinished interior, Mr. Bradburn decided to delay the formal opening until every thing was fully in readiness.

The wisdom of his decision was apparent yesterday, when the beautiful interior of a most imposing structure, struck every one favorably.

A handsome souvenir was handed to every patron of the opera house, beautifully engraved on tinted paper of superior quality.

Unlike most theatrical programs, last night's theatrical bill of fare, was not rendered cheap looking by advertisements of patent medicine or other goods.

The play, the Yankee Consul, the libretto of which is from the facile pen of Hibbert W. Hanson, and the sparkling music by Alfred G. Robyn, caught on with the large audience. It is a musical comedy replete with laughable situations and rendered most catchy by music of a high order.

It was in two long acts; long by the measure of time but only too short as judged by the merriment and applause of the audience. We predict a successful future for the Grand Opera House, under Mr. Bradburn's management.

The accommodation of the new opera house is ample, the appointments modern and the comfort of the public has been well looked after in every particular.

The arrangements embrace all the latest ideas and novelties in theatre building and, in case of fire, there are escapes and exits on every floor.

Wheat Movement is Heavy

Ottawa, November 16.—Official returns received here from Fort William and Port Arthur show that during the month of October 11,540,500 bushels of wheat were received from the western grain fields, as compared with 6,739,935 bushels during October 1904. The shipments out of the elevators were 10,677,166 bushels, as compared with only 3,891,227 bushels the previous October.

EMPIRE'S DISRUPTION

Is Feared by Witte, Who Appeals to the People

St. Petersburg, November 16. — The Government, through the medium of an appeal printed in the Official Messenger today, makes another appeal to the people to prevent the dismemberment of the empire and to withhold their verdict on the reform program until an opportunity has been given for the carrying out of its provisions. Count Witte in counting largely on the support of the press in recounting the people to the inevitable delay in the carrying out of the promised reforms, although he expects a great deal of opposition from the conservatives and peasantry.

Count Vorontzoff-Dashkoff, unable longer to endure his failure to tranquilize the Caucasus, is reported to have resigned the Vice Royalty. It is announced that the Emperor Nicholas and his family will shortly return to the palace at St. Petersburg. Count Witte today took up his quarters in a wing of the palace, where he will be in constant touch with His Majesty.

ROSEBERY FOR PREMIER

He May Lead British Liberals If Relegated to Power

London, November 16.—Lord Rosebery is to be the next Premier and Foreign Secretary in the event of the Liberal party being returned to power at the next general election in Great Britain. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, it is said, will enter the House of Lords, the Liberal party completely abandoned its former plan to make him its leader.

There is every probability of the appointment of the Liberal cabinet of John Burns, who, in that event, would be the first labor leader ever called into the circle of the King's advisers. Mr. Burns is slated either for the presidency of the Board of Trade or for the Local Government Board, preferably the latter, which deals with matters closely related to municipal life. He may also head the newly created Department of Labor.

BEFORE THE PRIVY COUNCIL

Local Case Involving $200,000 to Come Before Imperial Court

Montreal, November 16.—Mr. R. C. Smith, K. C., left last night for New York, whence he will sail on the Baltic for London. Mr. Smith, in conjunction with Sir R. Reid, K. C., will represent the Light, Heat and Power Company in the suit against Edmond A. Robert, of Beauharnois, over the ownership and sale of the Beauharnois water power, in Beauharnois county. Mr. Donald Macmaster, K. C., and Mr. Eugene Lafleur, K. C., will act for Mr. Robert. The amount involved is $200,000, which the company has been condemned by the Canadian courts to pay Mr. Robert.

ENTERTAINMENT OF PRINCE

Prince Alexander Guest of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel

New York, November 16.—Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel, of Fifty-second street, who have as their house guests, Prince Alexander of Battenberg, Walter Rockers Townley, Councillor of the British Embassy, and Lady Susan Townley, and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, wife of United States Minister to Belgium, will give a dinner tonight in honor of Prince Alexander.

Mrs. Astor will give a dinner on Friday night in honor of Prince Louis.

Your Last Opportunity Will Soon Pass.

We have had an advertisement in The Times several days giving some facts about the BIG CASINO MINES, but some people seem to think it impossible for so good an investment to be offered in Peterboro.

We will give $500.00 to anyone who will disprove one of the following statements.

The Big Casino Mines are located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode."

We have 270 acres of ground. Have been developing and equipping the property more than three years and a half. Have spent over $200,000.00 on the property.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done. Have a very large amount of good ore blocked out ready to break down and mill, and have more ore in our property than can be mined out in two or three life times.

We have apparently inexhaustible bodies of good ore. We also have ore that will mill $1,000.00 per ton.

We have a modern 20 stamp mill in good condition, to which we propose to add 20 stamps as soon as possible. With 20 stamps we will pay $20,000.00 to $40,000.00 per month in dividends. $10,000.00 per month will be 2 cents per share per month, or 48 per cent. on the money you invest in the stock at 50 cents per share.

We will lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, making 100 stamps which we propose to put in inside of the next twelve months, then your dividends should every year be at least equal to your investment.

$250.00 and two weeks' time should cover every expense of a trip to the mines, so that you can personally examine them and have the opportunity of disproving the above facts and get the $500.00.

Are you satisfied with interest or would you prefer profits like those we have told you the Big Casino will pay?

Your money is no safer in real estate, in the bank or anywhere else, than invested in Big Casino stock.

Four years ago Calumet, of Arizona, sold at $1.00 per share to raise money to develop and equip the mines. Certain people said it can't be any good or it would all be taken up out there; but they sold their stock and developed the mine, and paid their first dividend on Dec. 15th, 1903. The dividend was $5.00 per share, just twice what the stock cost, and they paid $10.00 per share last year, and will pay their last quarterly dividend for this year next month, which will make $16.00 per share this year, and the stock is quoted on the open markets of the world at $125.00 to $130 per share.

Granite Mountain stock was sold in St. Louis at 10 cents per share, and in 10 months after their mill started the stock was worth $72.00 per share in the open market and paid the St. Louis stockholders $12,000,000.00 in dividends during the next three years.

Neither of the above named mines gave more promise of making the wonderful producer they have proved to be, at the same stage of development, than the Big Casino does at present.

The directors of the Big Casino know their stock, based on the ore developed and equipment of the property, would be cheap at, par, $1.00 per share, and will advance the price to $1.00 Nov. 25th, if not sooner. Right to advance the price to $1.00 any day is reserved, and the 25th is positively the last day you can buy the stock for less than $1.00 per share.

The Big Casino is a developed mine, and we will make one of the large dividend payers of the State of California out of it if we never sold a share of stock, for we can get all the money out of the mine to mill in the mill, and it would only delay dividends a little longer.

The Big Casino will become a permanent dividend payer early in the coming year, and should pay not less than 24 per cent. on your investment at 50 cents per share the first year.

Remember the price may advance any day, and there will be none offered you for less than $1.00 per share after the 25th.

Yours truly,

GEO. L. PORTER,

Peterboro, Ont., Nov. 14th, 1905.

P. S.—See me at the White House,

WHY SO WEARY?

Always Restless and Weak Is Not Natural—But It's Dangerous

You have to work hard. This uses up lots of nerve force and tears down the body faster than it can build up.

The result is a half-dead feeling you can't shake off. Somehow you must get more vitality. The water in your blood must be turned into nutriment and building material.

This is just what happens in using Ferrozone, which renews the blood and nerves, and makes each organ do the work that nature expects of it.

Ferrozone quickly increases your weight, brings appetite and healthy color, instills a reserve of vigor into the system that defies weariness, exhaustion, debility, or sickness of any kind.

Ferrozone quickly increases your weight, brings appetite and healthy color, instills a reserve of vigor into the system that defies weariness, exhaustion, debility, or sickness of any kind.

The enormous strengthening power of Ferrozone is proved in the case of Mrs. Edward Hill, of Orr Lake, Ont., who says:

"Two years ago I had a nervous breakdown. At night I tossed restlessly in bed, unable to get any rest from sleep. In the morning I suffered from over-powering weakness. My appetite was poor. I grew pale, thin and despondent. A slight backing cough also added to my burden.

"My doctor said to try Ferrozone, and it did me good in a few days. I increased in strength, the nervous sensations disappeared, and with my appetite came back my color and good spirits. I have gained over ten pounds in weight, and as my age is 56, I consider Ferrozone is a marvel." (Signed) Mrs. Edward Hill.

REMEMBER THIS: Ferrozone is a true tonic—not an alcoholic stimulant. Fifty chocolate-coated tablets in a box for fifty cents, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

UNION LABEL

PETERBORO, NOVEMBER 15 1905

ORGANIZING NON-UNION MEN

One of the most important steps in the direction of industrial progress and peace in many years is the movement projected by the Citizens' Industrial Association of America, which is the federated body of the Employers' Associations throughout the United States and Canada. It is planned at its meeting this month in St. Louis to centralize the power of the national organizations by establishing employment bureaus in every city and to enroll the non-union mechanics and skilled workmen all over the country. The object of these employment bureaus will be to supply any sudden or unusual demand for skilled labor that may arise in any part of the country, and by cards of recommendation and otherwise to assist any non-union worker of good character who may desire to leave one city to find employment elsewhere. In short, the employers propose to achieve their independence by organizing unions of non-union men.

This step is the logical sequence of the remarkable success which has marked the organization and growth of the Employers' Associations during the past few years. In organizing these associations to meet conditions which had grown intolerable, the employers took a leaf out of union labor's book, and in organizing the non-union workman they intend to take another. If the effort proves successful the result will be two huge bodies of workingmen in this country between which the employers will hold the balance of power, thus enabling them to maintain an equilibrium of peace and tranquility.

The need of such an organization has been long felt, and it is strange that it has not been thought of before. For example, the Employers' Associations were chiefly instrumental in breaking the teamsters' strike in Chicago last summer, by sending men from other cities to take the strikers' places, but a great deal of money was wasted in executing the movement by reason of the lack of means of communication with a sufficient number of reliable non-union drivers. Canada sent several hundred teamsters, but they were gained through advertising and nothing was known as to their antecedents and reliability. Under the new plan the demand could have been supplied with promptness and certainty.

It is needless to say that such an organization will be of immense benefit to the non-union working man, without the burden of dues, and not at the mercy of a walking delegate or any other form of dictation, they will enjoy practically all the privileges and advantages of a union man in obtaining employment, as well as freedom of action and powerful backing when a change of location becomes necessary or desirable.

The tyranny and intolerance of the unions can no longer make a non-union man an industrial pariah and outcast. In exercising the inalienable right of a citizen not to join a union, a non-union workingman never deserved the reproach of being a "scab," and hereafter he will be protected from its unjust consequences.

DOWIE IS DYING

Suffers a Collapse and All Hope is Abandoned

Chicago, November 15.—News reached here today from El Pasco, Mex., that John Alexander Dowie is dying. The latest despatches from Mexico say he recently suffered two collapses. The first stroke of paralysis occurred in a hotel in the City of Mexico, and the second on the Zion plantation, where Dowie was on a trip of inspection.

It is reported that Dowie told his followers that he had selected his son to succeed him, and begged them to give him their support. This is said to have proven very displeasing to the deacons, each of whom had hoped to be the next "prophet."

MORRIS NATHAN RELEASED

This Was Because Grand Jury Failed to Indict Him

Boston, November 15.—Morris Nathan who was arrested two weeks ago today, in Pittsburg, in connection with the death, in this city, of Susanna Carry, the Cambridge, Mass., chorus girl, was given his freedom in the municipal court today, when his case came up. The reason for this action was that the Grand Jury had failed to find any indictment against him. As soon as Nathan was freed he was served with a subpoena to appear before the Superior Court at the trial of the persons who have been indicted as one of the most important witnesses.

STOLE LIBERAL POLICY.

London, Nov. 15.—The British Western Daily News, commenting on the Colonial Secretary's speech at Bristol, says that with the general principles of his address on colonial policy, Liberals must concur. Indeed, it was a second exposition of the essentially Liberal policy of decentralization, and of leaving to the colonies absolute control over their own affairs, including their own tariffs.

DISORDERLY ELECTIONS.

Madrid, Nov. 14.—A number of casualties resulted at various points from the municipal elections. At Valladolid one man was killed and many were injured. At Somocrostro eight persons were shot and seriously injured, and at Valtierra five men were injured. In Bilbao the ballot boxes were filled and the election was annulled.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section (160 acres, more or less).

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7 50 per annum for an individual, and from $25 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15.by1320 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locater may, upon having a survey made and upon compliance with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

Marsden understood the drift of the question.

"It would be unchivalrous to boast," said he, with a significant smile.

A look of delight in the suffering she hoped to inflict gleamed in Mrs. Ruthven's large dark eyes.

"I must let you go, dearest," she said, laying her hand caressingly on his shoulder, yet he fancied with a touch of proprietorship. "But you will be sure to return to dinner, and be sure you do not go to the L'Estranges's. A letter will do much better than an interview."

"An interview? God forbid!" he exclaimed, with unmistakable sincerity.

"How pleased Lady Dorrington will be," said Mrs. Ruthven, meditatively.

"Oh, charmed," returned Marsden, while he thought how cruel fate had been in permitting his affectionate interlocuter to leave Chedworth alive. "I must leave you now," he said. "I feel I must be alone. I am still dizzy and unhinged with—with the sense of your great goodness."

"But you will come back? You will not do yourself any harm?"—anxiously.

"No. I don't think I have pluck enough left to blow my brains out, or rather you have given me a fresh zest for life. You are looking awfully exhausted. You must lie down and rest."

"Do you care enough for me to wish I should rest?"

"How can you doubt? Good-bye for the present." A little further tribute, and he fled from her, half mad with rage, despair and self-contempt.

His ruling motive for the last few minutes had been to escape from Mrs. Ruthven, to be alone with his crushing sense of discovery and defeat. He had been utterly outwitted, he was at the mercy of a deeply injured woman—a woman from whom he shrank appalled, all the more because he had injured her.

The force of degradation could no further go, and he had been such a doubly damned fool as to believe himself safe! That he could defy this keen, subtle, tenacious woman, and hug himself in the belief that by so base, so shabby a crime, he could secure an adorable creature like Nora! He had said truly that failure, detection, showed him the depth of shame into which he had fallen. Had he succeeded, it would not have occurred to him to repent.

Still aglow with the passion Nora had inspired, it was torture to give her up; yet he had so much sense of right left, or rather restored, that he felt it would be equally torture to meet her eyes, to hear her voice, knowing he was a despicable outcast, from whom, was she but aware of his true character, she would turn with scorn and loathing. Why, if he had murdered a man in anger, he thought, as he paced his room, or sat with locked doors, his head buried in his hands, he could face the world with comparative boldness, and yet, how unjust opinion is! What real harm had he done Mrs. Ruthven? Only deprived her of a few baubles she looked quite as well without. He had not robbed her of any comfort or necessity, or of money or lands. Why had he been so unlucky as to have taken such an overpowering fancy to a girl like Nora unapproachable save by the tremendous sacrifice of marriage? This was really the mainspring of his misfortunes.

As to the future, he shuddered to think of it. Why should he not escape it? As to his solemn promise to Mrs. Ruthven, that weighed but lightly on his soul. What stayed his hand was partly the demoralization which seemed to paralyze him, but chiefly his dread of being hopelessly disgraced in Nora's eyes. She had immense power of him, and he had said truly, that all of good in him was linked with his feelings for her. No! he might have had resolution to end his ruined life, had he not felt convinced that Mrs. Ruthven, furious at being robbed of her prey, would tell all and make the worst of all to Nora. No; the one shred of comfort in the web he had wrapped for himself, was to remain undiscovered in Nora's eyes. He would effect to unbend her by a noble effort of self-denial, and perhaps she would give him a kind thought; perhaps, when married of a monotonous life with Winton or some other prig, a regretful thought.

O What a sham life was altogether! Was Nora as true, as real, as she seemed? Yes, now, he would swear, but how long would her truth last the wear and tear of the world?

Well, he had escaped detection, and for Nora's sake, for his sister's, his name's sake, he had better drift with the tide which seemed setting in his favor. His only way of enduring existence was to forget there was a yesterday or a to-morrow.

But dine with that woman, who was his mistress in the cruelest sense, he could not—at least, to-day. No; to-day he must lie alone; he must be free to swallow, unchecked, such an amount of burgundy, champagne, brandy, as might drown the intolerable rage and remorse that maddened him.

His incoherent note of excuse, however, only brought Nemesis upon him in the shape of Mrs. Ruthven herself, wrapped in shawls and furs, who sent up an urgent message, and sat in her carriage at the hotel door till her captive joined her, and was taken off in triumph.

CHAPTER XVI.

A day had passed—two—three—and Marsden had made no sign.

Nora began to hope he was wise enough to perceive that it would not be for his own happiness to insist on martying a girl who was so reluctant to be his wife.

After some consideration, she wrote a cordial letter to Lady Dorrington, rebutting her accusations and assuring her that, so far from wishing to mar her brother's prospects by holding him to his engagement, she had earnestly begged him to set her free.

Christmas had gone by, to Bea's infinite disappointment, without the presence of her favorite, Marsden. There was a pause in the little drama of their lives! This interval was first broken by a few lines from Winton to Mrs. L'Estrange, in which he asked her to fix an hour when she could see him, as he was in town for a short time, and, if she adhered to her intention of returning to Brookdale early in January, it would be his only opportunity of wishing her good-bye, as he hoped to complete his business and sail for India the end of the month.

Nora accepted this note as notice to be out of the way, and felt truly grateful to Winton for sparing her the pain of an encounter.

Mrs. L'Estrange began to form some idea of the truth. Though she liked Mark Winton, she thought Marsden would be a more suitable husband for Nora. He was bright and companionable, while Mark was older than his years, sobered too by a life of steady work and serious responsibility. Nora could not be so much attracted by a man too much in earnest for civil speeches or implied compliments, or any of the gallant trickery in which Marsden excelled—who differed from and argued with her as he would with a comrade of his own sex, and, to crown all, had no looks to boast of beyond a good figure and gentleman-like air.

However, she made out very little from their tete-a-tete interview.

Winton looked worn and gaunt, but seemed very glad to see her, and to find her alone. He spoke freely enough of his own affairs, of the division he had made of his uncle's bequest with the deceased's grandchild, and of his own approaching departure, of herself and her little daughter, in even a kindlier tone than usual; but not until he rose to take leave, after refusing her invitation to dinner, did he mention Nora. Then he asked calmly—"And Miss L'Estrange; I hope she is well?"

"Yes; very well."

"And when does the wedding take place?"

"I am not quite sure."

"I thought it was fixed for the beginning of February?"

"Yes; that was talked of; but we do not quite know yet."

"Are you pleased with the marriage?" he asked, looking at her very searchingly.

"Certainly I am. It is a good marriage, from a worldly point of view; and then Clifford Marsden is so utterly devoted, that I think dear Nora's happiness is sure to be his first consideration."

"But, Mrs. L'Estrange, Marsden's financial position ought to be looked [illegible]"

SASKATCHEWAN ELECTION

Not Expected to Take Place Until Ice in Rivers is Solid

Ottawa, November 15.—According to advices received here from the West, the voting in Saskatchewan may not take place for over a month. Now that the ice has commenced to form it will be necessary in order to pole a full vote in man yelistricts to wait till it is solid enough to make the rivers passable for teams. This will not be the case till the middle of December. Nomination day, it is said may, therefore, be Saturday, December 16, and polling day two days before Christmas.

Vandalism at the Capital

Ottawa, November 15.—Another Ottawa Church has been broken into by thieves. Some night recently unknown parties entered the Fourth avenue Baptist church and destroyed the clock. A number of acts of wanton vandalism and robbery have been committed in Ottawa and suburbs during the past ten days, and the police believe that an organized gang of thieves is operating in the district.

A RARE CHANCE FOR PROFITABLE INVESTMENT

THOS. PATTERSON & CO.

MINING AND INDUSTRIAL STOCKS

61 Simcoe Street, are pleased to announce that they have been appointed fiscal agents of the

CALUMET-TELLURIDE GOLD MINING CO.

of Colorado, and have secured a limited amount of stock of this splendid proposition, which they are prepared to sell at

$1.00 PER SHARE, PAR VALUE

This is a rare chance for a safe and profitable investment.

Our customers and the investing public are requested to watch for full particulars, which will appear in these columns in a few days. Call at our office and talk it over, if you have any money that is lying idle, as this is an investment we can recommend.

THOS. PATTERSON & CO.

I offer, subject to prior sale, 50,000 shares of the Capital Stock of The

Oxarna Gold Mining Company

at the "Ground Floor" price of TEN CENTS A SHARE, (some has been offered for less), par value $1 00, fully paid and non-assessable.

The OXARNA GOLD MINING COMPANY is capitalized at $1,000,000.00, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1.00 each. The Oxarna Stock was originally all in the treasury, no preferred or promotion stock having been issued by this Company, and up to the present time only 350,000 shares of their stock have been issued.

The OXARNA COMPANY own by United States Patent and Deed, 142 Acres of highly mineralized land in the Famous Thunder and Custer Mountain, Idaho districts, and over $17,000,000.00 net has been realized by the Mines in our immediate vicinity. One of the Mines contiguous to our property on the north has produced $1,000,000.00 and five veins of this rich ore are parallel on one of our claims, and by about 1,000 feet of shafts, tunnels drifts and upraises the OXARNA COMPANY have uncovered over $1,000,000.00 worth of ore, and they have a large amount of ore in the ore bins and on the dump that averages over $60.00 a ton, and they expect to be in position to Mill not less than 100 tons of ore every day in a very short time, but if they only Mill 50 tons a day in less than one year they can pay 100 per cent, on the par value of the stock out standing in dividends, for they expect to have less than 400,000 shares of the stock on the Market when they are fully financed.

The Oxarna Company have purchased a Mill all fully equipped and ready for business, that originally cost about $15,000.00, and they owe a balance of $5,000.00 on this Mill that will be due in three months, and in order to raise this amount quickly I am privileged to make this most liberal offer, for the stock is easily worth par today, for the time is rapidly approaching when the Company will be on a paying basis and the stock will become immensely remunerative in the near future.

Subject to prior sales I offer the above allotment on the following terms: 4 per cent. discount will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order, or subscriptions will be accepted on the instalment plan, 1-4 of the amount with the order and a like amount in 30, 60 and 90 days. Make all orders payable to the undersigned or remit through the NATIONAL BANK of Delphos, and they will forward stock subject to your order.

Personally I advise you to get all of this stock that you can pay for during the next three months, for it is an exceedingly good investment. For further particulars call on or address.

Use Opaque Envelopes

A circular letter has been addressed to postmasters by the deputy postmaster-general, forbidding the transmission of envelopes having the address on the envelope a transparent cover. The reason assigned is the delay caused in sorting. The British post office was the first to raise the objection.

Look Out for Dynamiters

Citizens are being sent out from Montreal warning the police to be watchful for a gang of safe blowers who have been operating in Montreal and the eastern townships. They dynamited the Outremont postoffice recently and escaped with considerable money and registered letters. They may have come west.

Only 216 of an Increase Here?

The assessors only report a gain of 216 people. This is largely credited by citizens who know of the great and increasing demand for houses, and who see our local factories monthly increasing their output, and consequently employing more men. It is possible that the council may be asked to have a special census taken to ascertain Peterboro's population and growth.

MR. ALLEN'S FUNERAL

Millbrook Showed Everywhere Its Veneration for the Deceased Archdeacon

A stranger, unacquainted with current local history of the village of Millbrook, who happened in there on Tuesday, might easily have considered that, at least a crowned head had been taken.

Flags were at half mast everywhere, shop blinds pulled down, business everywhere was entirely suspended.

All this was for show tangible evidence of the love and respect entertained by all classes of the community for the late Venerable Archdeacon Allen.

At 1.30 p.m. the burial service began at St. Thomas' church. The altar, prayer desks and pulpit were draped in black, as was also the Archdeacon's seat in the sanctuary. The body had been taken to the church in the morning to lie in state, and a large number of people had a last look at the departed. An oaken casket contained the remains.

The service was fully choral, the surplice and stole. As the solemn strains of Chopin's "Dead March" pealed forth from the organ, the clergy, robed in their vestments, entered the church in procession.

The Bishop of Toronto was represented by the Venerable Archdeacon of York, Hr. Langtry; the others were Rev. Messrs. J. F. Lewis, M.A., Jean Farncomb, M.A., and F. J. Lynch, from Toronto; J. C. Davidson, M.A., Wm. Major, and E. A. Langstaff, M.A., from Peterboro; George Warren, M.A., Lakefield; A. J. Fiddler, M.A., Colborne, K. Daniel, M.A., Port Hope, J. H. Tremayne, Omemee, E. W. Pickford, Norwood; A. B. Chaffee, B.A., Cobourg, W. J. Creighton, M.A., Bobcaygeon, C. H. Marsh, Lindsay; J. Scott Howard, M.A., Newcastle; W. J. Summerhayes, Gore's Landing, and E. R. Spence, curate at Millbrook.

Rev. Rural Dean Creighton and Rev. Rural Dean Davidson read the solemn burial service. The hymns sung were, "The Strife is O'er, the Battle Done," "Now the Laborer's Task is O'er," "For All the Saints who from their Labors Rest," Ven. Archdeacon Langtry closed the service with prayers and the benediction. As the clergy and the bearers with the remains passed out of the church the congregation sang "Lord now lettest Thou Thy Servant depart in peace." St. Thomas' church was filled with a large congregation, parishioners and friends of the departed clergyman. Six sons of the late Archdeacon were the bearers and carried the coffin on their shoulders. Interment took place at St. John's cemetery, Cavan, in the family plot, Rev. C. H. Marsh, of Lindsay, officiating at the grave. About 200 carries were in the procession to the cemetery.

LAST TAX DAY

All the City's Taxes but $8,000 Paid up

Yesterday was the last day of grace for tax-payers, and Mr. W. J. Green the collector, has been a busy man during the last few days. He stated yesterday that the money had been coming in very well, and that he believed there would not be more than $8,000 remained unpaid at the close of the day. This was about the same amount last year and in view of the fact that the amount on the roll this year is considerably larger than that of last year, the showing is better than it was in 1904.

While, in all probability the statement which the collector will present to the council will show a larger sum that $8,000 unpaid, it must be remembered that there were about $2,000 rebated on the taxes paid by August 1st, and the council has remitted about $2,000, both of which amounts are counted in the balance. This year the money has come in very satisfactorily, showing that Peterborians have or have the means of raising all the money required.

TO REDUCE LICENSES

Charlotte Street Methodist Church to Support the Movement

The regular meeting of the quarterly official Board of Charlotte street church was held Tuesday night, when the stewards were elected for the ensuing year as follows: — Messrs. James Stevenson, Retd. Smith, H. P. Kennedy, T. H. Geare, J. C. Elliott, D. D. C Dawn and Dr. M. A. Morrison.

A communication was presented from the local Ministerial Association asked the Board to consider the proposition of advocating a reduction of liquor licenses in the city, and also asked if the members would sign and support a petition to send to the city council.

A resolution was passed according to the communication and the Board agreed to join with the other churches in the movement to reduce the hotel licenses in the city.

Rosedale Boy Burnt to Death

Together Falls Gazette says: On Saturday morning while Mr. and Mrs. Wm Miller, who live near Rosedale, were both out of the house, one of the children lighted a fire in a box stove, the door of which was left open, and while the youngest a little fellow named Charles, was dressing the flame with the skirt of his dress, it caught fire, and he was so dreadfully burned that he lived only sixteen hours. Dr. Graham, who happened to be passing soon after the accident, was called in, and did what was necessary to relieve the poor child's pain, but he died—more from shock than from the severity of his injuries—not long after midnight.

DROWNING ACCIDENT

Chief of Police Bond, Port Hope, and Sister-in-Law Dead at Haliburton

Yesterday morning very much regret was expressed throughout the city, as the sad intelligence of the drowning, whilst out hunting, of Chief of Police W. A. Bond of Port Hope, and Miss Grace, his sister-in-law, of Toronto.

A telegram was received at Port Hope Tuesday night by an undertaker, telling him to send coffins to Haliburton for the bodies of William Armstrong Bond and Miss Georgia Grace. The sad news was conveyed to Port Hope's chief constable, and Miss Grace was his sister-in-law.

The telegram came from Mrs. Lillian Bond, who, with her husband, her little daughter and Miss Grace, her sister, left last week on a hunting trip to Haliburton. Miss Grace's home is in Toronto, and Chief Bond came from Toronto, where he was on the police force. He has a brother who is a Toronto policeman.

News of the death of Chief Bond of Port Hope was received with great regret by the Toronto police force Tuesday night. For five years prior to July 7, 1904, when he went to Port Hope, he was attached to No. 3 division, and was very popular with his comrades in Toronto. After leaving Toronto he achieved notoriety by getting the first information leading to the solution of the Margaret murder case. He was a native of Bowmanville, and was [illegible] Miss Gertie Bond of Queensville, and leaves besides his wife and one child, five brothers and two sisters.

Miss Georgia Grace, his sister-in-law, who was also drowned, was a daughter of Mrs. Levina Grace of 211 Ontario street. She was formerly a stenographer in the J. D. King shoe warehouse, and lived at the home of her sister, Mrs. Bond, both here and in Port Hope. She was but 21 years old, and was well known in the vicinity of Aurora.

Sulphur Springs

Mr. J. H. O'Shea, proprietor of the Commercial House has on his property in North Monaghan what, at present, bears the mark of possible unlimited wealth.

Last April Mr. O'Shea purchased four acres in the township of North Monaghan, about one mile of the Driving Park. Some weeks ago he discovered that on his property were two natural flowing springs. One peculiarity of the water from these springs, was that it had a most disagreeable odour and peculiar taste.

Yesterday a Toronto gentleman, well posted in the matter of natural mineral waters and springs, in company with Mr. Fred Walker, manager of a George street grocery store, drove to Mr. O'Shea's property, and made a thorough examination of the springs. The Toronto gentleman, who requested that his name be omitted until the matter was finally settled, pronounced the springs to be producers of a high grade sulphur water of great efficacy.

He took generous samples of the water with him, and will have it analyzed by a leading analytical chemist of Toronto.

If the result proves as satisfactory as he anticipates, these springs, situated near the banks of the Otonabee will likely be the nucleus of a fashionable watering place. It was just such kind of mineral waters that formed the basis of Saratoga's wealth and popularity.

The Toronto gentleman and Mr. Walker were most enthusiastic over the result of the investigation, and speak already of a company to be formed to advertise and ship the waters of these springs.

We trust for the sake of the city, that Mr. O'Shea's springs may be as valuable as anticipated.

Str. Rosedale Has Hard Time

The Port Hope Guide says:—The cargo of the steamer Rosedale shifted last week during a heavy gale, and threw the vessel on her beam ends for 18 hours. The entire crew, except Capt. Shaw, worked in the hold shovelling the cargo, but their efforts were unavailing, and she reached the Soo in that condition. Several thousands bushels of grain were damaged. The lower deck was under water nearly up to the hatches. Capt. Shaw is a Colborne man.

It is said that the Guild League will flourish this year, and that all the teams will be stronger than last year.

Hillhouse Brown Must Serve His Seven Years

Hamilton Bank Manager Pleads Guilty and is Given a Long Sentence--Was Very Nervous in Court-- Charges Not Investigated

Hamilton, Nov. 17.—Mr. Hillhouse Brown, the society man and branch manager of the Bank of Hamilton here, today pleaded guilty in the police court to the charges against him, and the magistrate, after listening to a plea of mercy made by the prisoner's counsel, sentenced the accused to seven years in the Kingston Penitentiary.

WERE READY TO CONVICT.

The bank officials had everything in shape, had it been necessary for them to have convicted the prisoner; all the books were brought into court. There was some little delay in arraigning the prisoner. Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., of Toronto; Mr. William Lees, jr., were associated with S. T. Washington, K.C., Crown Attorney, for the bank; and Geo. Lynch-Staunton, K.C., and J. W. Nesbitt, K.C., appeared for Brown. Mr. Johnston requested that he be allowed a few minutes to consult with the Crown, and then the charges were read to Brown.

WAS TERRIBLY NERVOUS.

As the magistrate reached for the first indictment, the prisoner stood up. He was terribly nervous for a few minutes, but braced himself, and in a low, clear voice said: "I prefer to be tried here."

"How do you plead?" asked the magistrate.

"I am guilty."

The charge was that in February 1903, he stole $1,000 and falsified the books.

GUILTY OF OTHER CHARGES.

The second charge accused him of falsifying the books and stealing $5,100 in July, 1903, and the third, against the name of Oliver E. Stringer, a bank inspector within the past year. He pleaded guilty to both and asked the magistrate to dispose of them.

"That is all the charges there will be," said Mr. Washington.

"We would prefer to have sentence passed immediately," said Mr. Nesbitt.

"We want the case disposed of now."

The magistrate consented, and Mr. Nesbitt then began his address: "As to the sentence," he said, "Mr. Staunton and myself propose to make a few remarks about that, and in regard to what it should be." Up to the present time no man had borne a better character; had been more esteemed, or had better habits than his client.

HUMILIATION IS ENOUGH.

"In the first place as to punishment," continued the lawyer, "a man in his position had suffered far more than the ordinary criminal by the humiliation and degradation of his arrest and downfall. This and the disgrace he has brought on his family and others, will be sufficient to deter others from following in his footsteps."

RECEIVED THANKS

Baron Komura of Japan Sends Thanks to President Shaughnessy of C.P.R.

Montreal, November 11.—A very pretty booklet has been received at the head office of the Canadian Pacific Railway here from the eastern agent of the company at Yokohama. This is a memorial of the arrival in Japan of the Japanese plenipotentiary, Baron Komura, who went to the Far East via the Canadian Pacific rail and ocean route. The little book is covered in dark green and is extremely artistic. It contains extracts from the press of Japan descriptive of the arrival and welcome of the great Komura. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, received a cable from Baron Komura recently thanking him for the courtesy extended to his party by the company in the course of the voyage from New York to Japan.

INTERESTING DOCUMENT

Mortgage of Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway

Mr. W. H. Moore, the well-known digester of legal opinion, has in his possession a document that is not only valuable from a financial standpoint, but a veritable curiosity.

The document is the mortgage given by George Tate and William Fowler, lessees of the old Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway, to William Cluxton and David Smart, trustees on behalf of the town of Peterboro. It was dated November 13, 1857, and was registered in the county registry office on February 1st, 1858, by County Registrar Chas. Rubidge. The original value of this mortgage was $80,000, but by annual payments of $1,200 at six per cent. interest on unpaid principal, this has been reduced to about $30,000. The mortgage is held now by the commissioners of the Peterboro city trust for the balance of principal on account of the sinking funds, to redeem the debentures of the city of Peterboro. It is in the possession of Mr. W. H. Moore, and the present trustee is Mr. T. E. Bradburn.

The mortgage is on real parchment purchased in London, England, and is all in handwriting, which is like copper-plate. Four large sheets of parchment, 20 inches by 24 inches, and these are fastened together at the bottom by three seals, one for each of the interested parties.

On the face of the document is inscribed the following:—"Dated November 13, 1857, George Tate and William Fowler to William Cluxton and David Smart, trustees, and the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company. Registered at the county registry office for Tuesday, 1858, by Chas. Rubidge, registrar."

John McMillan who hails from Douro, tried to run things to suit himself and do the opposite for both proprietor and patrons of Hogan's Hotel, east side, last night.

A hurry up call was sent by telegram to the police, and P. C. Stewart was on the spot in one, two, three time. When he arrived McMillan was raising Harry Mc.K. as a by-stander expressed it, so the officer gathered him in.

Owing to the strictly horizontal position of the oak plank on which guests of the Hotel des Cogs recline, and the lack of thoughtfulness on the part of our civic authorities in failing to provide elderdown pillows, it is to be presumed that John will be able, after a night's cogitation and inclement bedsores, to brace up and explain to his worship, why he got d. & d.

The gates of the city are locked every night, for the surrounding region is disturbed and further uprisings are feared.

BURNED TO DEATH WHILE AT PRAYER

Five People Lose Their Lives in New York

THE BLACK HAND

Dreaded Italian Society Said to Be Responsible for Conflagration

New York, Nov. 17.—At least five persons were burned to death in an Italian tenement house fire at 221 East 23rd street early today. The building was six stories high, and the sleeping tenants on the upper five floors were made prisoners by flames with the ground floor a roaring furnace beneath them. Three of those who lost their lives were kneeling in prayer when the fire reached them.

Within the first hour after the fire was under control the bodies of two women and three men had been taken from the stairways beneath the second and third floors.

KNEELING IN PRAYER.

When the firemen arrived with their ladders nearly everyone on the fire escapes were kneeling in prayer or counting rosary beads. Adding to the pathos of the scene was the noise of the men, who stood with their arms full of personal possessions, while their wives sought means to protect the children from being trampled by the crowd or suffocated by smoke.

Everyone on the fire escapes were saved by the firemen. The first group of dead was found on a stairway near the second floor. On the next stairway above the firemen found the bodies of two women and one man, who had evidently knelt together where they died.

The dead are; Guiseppe Randazzo, Antonia Lorea, Calvatore Tinzo, Santa Tiazza and Antonia Sejarde.

BLACK HAND RESPONSIBLE.

The issues of the house told the police today that the Black Hand Society had recently sent him letters demanding $2,000. Although the demands did not state what the penalty was to be for refusing to pay the money, the police have begun an investigation in the belief that the fire was started by the writer of the letters.

CARGO REMOVED FROM BAVARIAN

Investigation Ordered by Gov't Will Commence To-morrow

Quebec, Nov. 16.— The Government steamer Quadrans arrived here last night, with Mr. Andrew Allan and twenty Montreal laborers, who are being returned to their homes. All the cargo that can be possibly saved at present has been lightered from the Bavarian into small craft and brought to Quebec.

The investigation ordered by the Department of Marine and Fisheries will be commenced to-morrow in this city, under the presidency of Hon. Chief Justice Routhier, who will have associated with him Commander Spain and the sailing master of the Second Squandron, who is due to arrive this evening from New York.

The Government will be represented by Mr. A. Gilchrist, advocate of this city, with Mr. Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice, as counsel.

Messrs. A. H. Cook and C. Pentland, K.C., will represent the Messrs. Allans, and Mr. F. E. Meredith, K.C., the Canadian Shipping Confederation. Considerable public interest is manifested in the outcome of the investigation, which is expected to reveal a state of affairs that will call for legislation in the interest of the St. Lawrence route.

MR. RICKERBY'S CASE

Mr. George T. Rickerby Defends His Brother From Alleged Injustice

The Times was yesterday in receipt of the following letter from the facile pen of Mr. Geo. T. Rickerby, which speaks for itself. The letter reads as follows:—

(To the Editor of The Times.)

Dear Sir,—In the report contained in Wednesday's Examiner, of the charge against my brother Joseph, I would respectfully thank you for your consideration in suppressing the names in the case. I notice that your reporter uses judgment in written up such cases, and invariably withholds names, until the prisoners is proven to be guilty; it seems that your paper alone, of those printed in Peterboro, tries to shield a young man charged with an offence not proven, and thus tries to evade placing a bad name on a man who I believe to be innocent, and when the coming court will also, as time will show, prove to be innocent.

In the matter of my brother, the Examiner reporter, took care to eliminate whatever facts that would seemingly exonerate him (my brother) from any guilt. That my brother is innocent can be proven by ten witnesses.

This above assertion can be substantially proven. The Examiner's report said: "Although Moore was severely cross-examined by defendant's counsel, his evidence was little shattered." Now, to his warrant he swore that the amount lost was sixty dollars. On cross-examination by Mr. McWilliams, he said it was eighty dollars. Both statements were made on oath, and either one is certainly false. I believe neither. He positively swore that he paid for his dinner with even change. The bar-tender and two other witnesses swear that he handed a five dollar bill, and his time and there declared that the change he received was all he had on his person, and, as a passing remark said, "when I blow that I'm broke." Further, on oath, he said "Rickerby and I had a drink together." On cross-examination by defendant's counsel he admitted that there were others. Pressed further by Mr. McWilliams, he said, "The drinks cost me a quarter," thereby admitting that even six might have drank on the treat. He swore that he had only three or four drinks. The bartender and others swear that twenty would be a moderate estimate. Apart from what he drank before coming to the C.P.R. After the supposed losing of the money he told three or four persons that he had lost his pocketbook. When asked who took it he answered, "I don't know, there have been so many in here," and after accusing half a dozen different persons he left. On Wednesday he swore that he accused no one but the defendant.

Now, Mr. Editor, would you not call the above statements conflicting. And in justice to my brother, I ask you to publish this letter and accept the thanks of

Respectfully yours,
GEO. T RICKERBY.

While we appreciate Mr. Rickerby's appreciation of our efforts to shield the young man until such time as he may be proved guilty, and which judging by the letter received above, seems remote, we think judging by the Examiner's explanation of last night that he has misinterpreted the Examiner's report of this trial.—Ed. Times.

Mrs. Shearers Explains How the Shooting Accident Occurred

Mrs. A. Shearer, the mistress of the Italian boarding house, next door to the Montreal House, where Mrs. Harrington, her sister, was wounded by the accidental discharge of a revolver at three o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, states that the shooting was purely accidental and indignantly resents insinuations to the contrary. Mrs. Harrington states that when the doctor arrived, she and three boarders were present, contrary to the report that the house was occupied by no one but the wounded woman when the physician came to attend to her injuries. Mrs. Shearer then explained how the accident happened. She said her sister was examining the revolver, probably thinking it was unloaded, and she cautioned her against meddling with the weapon and advised her to lay it aside. She then went into the front part of the house, leaving the victim of the accident sitting beside the stove in the sitting-room. She heard the report after she had left her sister, but it was very dull and she did not think at the time that it was caused from the explosion of the cartridge. She went out, however, to see what was the matter, and noticed the blood on the arm of her sister's wrist. She then came to the conclusion that the revolver had been accidentally discharged. Mrs. Shearer added that she had managed boarding houses in Peterboro for the last five years and has never got into any trouble.

The bullet struck Mrs. Harrington's elbow, glancing off and entered her thigh, where it was located Wednesday afternoon, about two inches from the wound. The injured woman was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where she is now progressing favorably. The wound is not at all dangerous.

The revolver, which is of 32-calibre, containing six chambers, was shown to a Times representative. The weapon is rather old and all the chambers are empty. Mrs. Harrington claims that there was only one cartridge in the magazine at the time of the accident.

The Times was last night credibly informed that the shooting affray, was not as described by Mrs. Shearer, and as told in the evening papers of yesterday.

We were informed that the shooting, whilst absolutely accidental, and not owing to any criminal carelessness, was done by a man in this house. According to the report given The Times last night the man was cleaning and oiling his revolver and turning round the chamber with his fingers, when in some way he accidentally pulled the trigger, and the ball entering the arm of the woman, who was seated opposite him on a chair, and passing through her arm entered the upper and fleshy part of her leg.

Whether this later report is correct or not, there was no blame attaching to the man as it was a grave and simple accident that might have occurred to anyone.

ADULTERATED FOODS

Several Brockville Merchants Fined for Selling Adulterated Foods

Brockville, November 17.—The Department of Inland Revenue is taking active steps towards suppressing the sale of adulterated foods in Brockville and elsewhere. An Inspector came through here some time ago and collected samples of goods from the shelves of local merchants. These were submitted to the Dominion analyst and during the past month reports have come back in the form of a demand for fines for selling adulterated goods, mainly pepper, cream of tartar and jams. The fines have ranged from nine to twenty-four dollars and in each instance were promptly paid the local officer who served the papers.

O. L. College Has Good Year

At a meeting of the directors and shareholders of the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, Principal Hare and the Executive and Faculty Committees reported on many improvements that had been made and showed the income to be $5,000 more than in any previous year. The Executive Committee will consider the principal's recommendation for an additional building. All the old directors were re-elected, and Mr. W. W. Buttell, of Toronto, was chosen to fill the place vacated by the late Mr. Drury. The officers elected were as follows:—Honorary President, Hon. Geo. A. Cox; Honorary Vice President, Rev. Dr. Potts; President, R. C. Hamilton; Vice-Presidents, R. J. Score and J. L. Smith; Secretary-Treasurer, John Elliott.

Inhabitants of Town Nearly All Massacred

Population Consisted Almost Altogether of Jews, Who Were all Murdered--General Strike to Be a Failure.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 17.—The outlook is much less threatening to-day, the general strike promising to collapse within a few days. The appeal made to the country to join in the movement met with no response, and the discussions in the workmen's council are decreasing.

It is now apparent that the extremists took the decision to order a general political strike hastily, and without due preparation, in the belief that the whole country would rise at their bidding and continue the revolutionary movement. Having once demonstrated the power of a general strike as a weapon with which to terrorize the Government, the leaders believed they could invoke it at a moment's notice, but popular sympathy failed to respond, and the leaders are reluctantly compelled to admit that they cannot force a last ditch fight, but must content themselves with calling the present strike a "demonstration." While the organized workmen of St. Petersburg obeyed the order to strike, many did so grumblingly. In the face of the winter, and the necessity of providing for their families, many of them did not want to stop work.

At the Russo-American Rubber Works to-day anti-strikers beat off and drove away a strike deputation which came to order the workmen out. None of the papers appeared to-day except the Official Messenger, but the printers of each newspaper themselves published sheets announcing that the strike was for the purpose of abolishing the state of siege, the death penalty, and martial law throughout Poland.

It is now definitely established that the extremists acted in the interests of the Socialist leaders against the execution of the Schmidt murderers. The appeals made to the country to join in their trials have not yet actually begun. The executions which began last night is still ranging to-day. There are many rumors in the streets but the city is quiet.

Baron Gunsberg, a well-known Jewish philanthropist of St. Petersburg, has received Imperial authorization for the distribution of the Jewish relief funds raised in America, England, and other foreign countries. He is now organizing committees. The advices being received here indicate that much money will be required, and the major portion of the funds on hand will immediately be distributed to provide those who are in urgent need with food and other necessaries of life.

The most horrible accounts of the massacres and destruction of property are reaching St. Petersburg by mail. The inhabitants of the outlier town of Chernigoff, practically the whole of the population being Jews were utterly annihilated. Baron Gunsberg's son, who has just arrived here from Kieff, managed to escape from a mob only by hasty flight. When he returned to his residence he found it practically empty. What the rioters had not carried off they had destroyed. Count Witte, who is taking personal interest in the relief measures, advises that the funds be distributed through local committees under Baron Gunsberg's direction. The Baron has decided to exercise the greatest care in seeing that the local committee shall be devoid of revolutionary elements. He expresses confidence in Count Witte, with the demand of equal rights for the Jews, and he appreciates the attitude of the Premier.

GAYNOR AND GREENE TRIAL

WILL TAKEPLACE IN SAVANNAH IN JANUARY

The Great Case Will Excite Marked Interest in Canada and the United States

Savannah, Ga., November 17.—The trial of Benjamin D. Greene and John F. Gaynor, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the United States Government in connection with the river and harbor contracts given out under the supervision of former Captain O. H. Carter, engineer in charge of the Savannah district at the time, will not begin [illegible] January 1st next.

This developed yesterday, when the Federal Court of the Southern district of Georgia was convened by Judge Speer. The criminal docket was not touched and will not be until January, when Judge Speer will convene his court after recess to be taken next Saturday.

Greene and Gaynor are still in gaol here and there will be no effort made to secure their release on bail. Special Assistant United States Attorney Erwin has announced that former Captain Cater will not be summoned as a witness for the government and it is believed he will not be brought here by the defence.

ATHLETIC WORLD

HOCKEY.

The members of the Peterboro team are in fine shape for the intermediate final, to be played at Dundas on Saturday. This team will go up to Dundas ready to put up the hardest game of the season.—Toronto News.

Peterboro, Nov. 16.—The Peterboro team is in splendid shape for the first of the final games in the intermediate O.H.A. championship series on Saturday at Dundas. The boys will run an excursion to the Valley Town, and will be accompanied by several hundred supporters. If Peterboro wins the intermediate finals, Capt. Hartshaw says the team will go after the intermediate Canadian championship, the Intermediate Quebec championship being held by Rough Riders II. of Ottawa.—Toronto Star.

Meagher will not be in Saturday's game owing to his injury, which will likely keep him out of rugby for the remainder of the season. A fine wing player in the last to the results Crowley may be able to make the trip.

Saturday's game should be a grand exhibition of rugby. Neither team has met defeat this season, and both are confident of winning. Dundas will have the advantage of playing on their own grounds, but the locals have shown that they can play about as fast at home as away.

BASKETBALL.

To-night at nine o'clock the Harriers and the Arrows will play. The game will be preceded by special apparatus work by the senior class, which will start at 8.30. Admission free.

The basketball game between the Harriers and Arrows to-night should be a good exhibition. There will be a gymnastic exhibition before the game which commences at nine o'clock.

PROBABLE MURDER

Headless Body Found Near Halifax and Authorities Will Investigate

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 16.—A headless corpse, found at Round Island, Glace Bay, C.B., a short time ago, and buried there, is to be exhumed, and a post-mortem made, as it is thought the man may have possibly been murdered. A man driving along with a large box upon a wagon was seen in this sparsely populated district between Broughton and Round Island on a dark night previous to the finding of the body, and cannot be traced. Rumors from the vicinity have aroused public opinion, and the county authorities have ordered an investigation.

$5,000,000 FOR HYDE'S STOCK

Harriman & Frick Wanted Control of Equitable Life

New York, Nov. 16.—James H. Hyde was the first witness before the Insurance Committee to-day. He asked to correct his testimony of yesterday relative to offers for his stock. He said he did receive four offers besides that of Mr. Ryan. Two of these came from Mr. Harriman and Mr. Frick. He was offered $5,000,000 for his entire holdings and $2,500,000 for half of them. George Gould also made such an offer, but these were all declined because witness did not think one man should control the society. Gage E. Tarbell also made an offer, and said he had a syndicate ready to buy it. George W. Young also offered to buy Mr. Hyde's stock. These were all verbal offers.

Mr. Vincent Gets Good Office

Mr. W Vincent, late of the C.G.E. Works has left the city to take charge of the Temiscaming & Hudson Bay Silver Mine at Cobalt. His many friends, in the city, will rejoice to hear of the new important and lucrative office given him. Mr. Vincent has had an extended experience as a mining engineer in several countries of Europe, including England, France and Spain, as well as in the United States and Canada. The Times wishes him every success in his new position.

Sunk in a Collision

Philadelphia, Nov. 16.—The Norwegian steamship Earnford, from Pillaya Island, for Philadelphia, was sunk to-day at the mouth of the Schuylkill river in a collision with the British steamer Carthaginian, which was bound from Philadelphia for St. John's and Glasgow. The crew of the Earnford were saved.

Your Last Opportunity Will Soon Pass.

We have had an advertisement in The Times several days giving some facts about the BIG CASINO MINES, but some people seem to think it impossible for so good an investment to be offered in Peterboro.

We will give $500.00 to anyone who will disprove one of the following statements.

The Big Casino Mines are located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode."

We have 370 acres of ground. Have been developing and equipping the property more than three years and a half. Have spent over $300,000.00 on the property.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done. Have a very large amount of good ore blocked out ready to break down and mill, and have more ore in our property than can be mined out in two or three life times.

We have apparently inexhaustible bodies of good ore. We also have ore that will mill $1,000.00 per ton.

We have a modern 20 stamp mill in good condition, to which we propose to add 20 stamps as soon as possible. With 40 stamps we will pay $70,000.00 to $80,000.00 per month in dividends. $10,000.00 per month will be 2 cents per share per month, or 40 per cent. on the money you invest in the stock at 50 cents per share.

We will lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, making 100 stamps which we propose to put in inside of the next twelve months, then your dividends should every year be at least equal to your investment.

$250.00, and two weeks' time should cover every expense of a trip to the mines, so that you can personally examine them and have the opportunity of disproving the above facts and get the $500.00.

Are you satisfied with interest or would you prefer profits like these we have told you the Big Casino will pay?

Your money is no safer in real estate, in the bank or anywhere else, than invested in Big Casino stock.

Four years ago Calumet, of Arizona, sold at $1.00 per share to raise money to develop and equip the mines. Certain people said it can't be any good or it would all be taken up out there; but they sold their stock and developed the mine, and paid their first dividend on Dec. 13th, 1905. The dividend was $3.00 per share, just twice what the stock cost, and they paid $10.00 per share last year, and will pay their last quarterly dividend for this year next month, which will make $10.00 per share this year, and the stock is quoted on the open markets of the world at $115.00 to $120 per share.

Granite Mountain stock was sold in St. Louis at 10 cents per share, and in 18 months after their mill started the stock was worth $72.00 per share in the open market and paid the St. Louis stockholders $12,000,000.00 in dividends during the next three years.

Neither of the above named mines gave more promise of making the wonderful producer they have proved to be, at the same stage of development, than the Big Casino does at present.

The directors of the Big Casino know their stock, based on the ore developed and equipment of the property, would be cheap at par, $1.00 per share, and will advance the price to $1.00 Nov. 25th, if not sooner. Right to advance the price to $1.00 any day is reserved, and the 25th is positively the last day you can buy the stock for less than $1.00 per share.

The Big Casino is a developed mine, and we will make one of the large dividend payers of the State of California out of it if we never sold a share of stock, for we can get all the money out of the mine to add to the mill, and it would only delay dividends a little longer.

The Big Casino will become a permanent dividend payer early in the coming year, and should pay not less than 24 per cent. on your investment at 50 cents per share the first year.

Remember the price may advance any day, and there will be none offered you for less than $1.00 per share after the 25th.

Yours truly,

GEO. L. PORTER,

Peterboro, Ont., Nov. 14th, 1905.

P. S.--See me at the White House.

Pale and Anxious

Your Countenance Indicates the Body's Awful Struggle for Health.

Impossible to work or think clearly when there is no reserve of vigor, no nourishment in the blood, no supply of nerve energy.

The life of the half-sick man is pitiful, in fact, almost criminal, when bounding strength is so quickly derived from Ferrozone.

This nutritive tonic is guaranteed to strengthen all men, women and children. Weak organs get new force, vital energy is generated. Muscle and fat are added, healthy color is restored and the blood fairly tingles with newfound life.

Read the evidence of Jno. Carter, of 484 King St. East, Toronto, who says:

"After a severe attack of Grippe my health was almost shattered. I suffered constantly from nervousness and dyspepsia. At night I would waken with terrible palpitation and heart pains. Work became a great effort. At ten in the morning I was so tired and weak I could hardly work another minute.

"Then came a bad attack of rheumatism which laid me up in bed. I could scarcely lift the weight of a pound and to stoop or bend was impossible. My druggist recommended Ferrozone, and he knew what he was talking about, for it rebuilt my strength, gave me abundant appetite, better blood, and new nerve energy. The rheumatism has disappeared. I weigh more, feel refreshed and vigorous, and am able to work ten hours a day. Ferrozone did it all."

You will be steadied, toned and strengthened for all time to come with Ferrozone. Get the genuine in 50c. boxes or six for $2.50, at all dealers, or N. C. Poison & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., or Kingston, Ont.

THE ST. LAWRENCE ROUTE

It seems improbable that general confidence in the safety of the St. Lawrence route for purposes of navigation by ocean going vessels is to be restored by ministerial explanation, departmental enquiry and the ultimate suspension of pilots' and masters' papers. The half-dozen serious accidents to ships in the St. Lawrence during the present season may be ascribed to coincidence alone. But coincidence of this sort is one of the main bases of actuarial computation. Therefore insurance on St. Lawrence shipping is reaching the prohibitive stage. The route is coming to be viewed with suspicion by British and foreign shippers, and the ripest patriotism prevents Canadian themselves from believing that it is quite safe and in other respects all that it should be.

Obviously, this great waterway, the longest inland waterway for ocean going vessels in the whole world, is a magnificent national asset. No money should be spared in making it as safe as the high seas. Much money has been already spent to that end and it must be said that much of it has been spent wisely and to temporarily good purpose. But there is ground to suspect that that purpose is to be served has been obscured in political exigency and that the system upon which the aids to navigation have been devised and provided has [illegible] impaired by political administration. Every considerable producing and carrying agency in Canada—and this involves every considerable material interest in the country—is concerned in the establishment and maintenance of the safety of shipping in the St. Lawrence.

To that end the Dominion Government would do well to appoint and maintain a commission of navigation and shipping experts, free from the beginning and to be free for all time from political influence, such a commission would be able to devise the necessary remedies and to estimate the necessary cost. We are sure that the cost, under such a form of administration, would be cheerfully met by the people of Canada.

A GOLDEN CHANCE

Stock in One of Idaho's Richest Gold Mines Now in the Market.

There have, of late years, been so many mining "crazes" that the investing public has come to treat every mining proposition as a matter requiring pretty thorough investigation before placing their money.

There are, however, a few sound, established, proven and wealth-producing mine stocks on the market. Among these mines that do not merely offer stock to develop a chance, for wealth, but which have been already developed and show ore of the richest quality in limitless quantities, is the Ozarna Gold Mine, of Custer, Idaho.

The editor of the Western Trade Journal, one of the most reliable authorities on mining stocks, has personally examined the proposition of the Ozarna Gold Mining Company and says without [illegible] that as mine, reliable or promising property in the West is offering its stock to the public, and we advise such of our readers as wish to invest in a safe and sure mining proposition to lose no time in securing this stock. The property is being rapidly and energetically operated so as to produce the best results for the shareholders. Owing to the immediate proximity of this property to the largest and richest gold mines of the district, it is not unreasonable to expect that within a short time this company will be paying as large, if not larger, dividends than any other mining company in the great West.

The stock now being offered is likely to be worth many times its present valuation in the near future, and as only a limited amount of the stock is to be sold, this opportunity of securing a good investment should be embraced at once. This is one of the largest and safest concerns in America, and one whose every representation can be implicitly relied upon, as it carries out all obligations in an honest and business like manner.

Those desirous of investigating this grand opportunity, or securing stock at its present price of 10 cents per share for a limited time only, had better write at once to Reginald Coryell, Secretary, Custer, Idaho, or W. E. Floding, Delphos, Ohio.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of the Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quarts.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7.50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 0x1500 feet. The fee for recording a claim is $5

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The leases shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

VARICOCELE & STRICTURE

No other disease is so prevalent among men as Varicocele. As it interferes with the nutrition of the sexual organs it produces weakness, loss of semen through the urine, decay of the organs, pains in the loins, aching in the back, nervousness, despondency, bashfulness, palpitation of the heart, constipation, and a combination of these results in complete LOSS OF MANHOOD. Thousands of young and middle-aged men are troubled with STRICTURE. If you have reason to believe you are afflicted with it, don't neglect it. It will ruin you. Don't let doctors experiment on you by cutting, stretching or tearing it. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT dissolves the stricture tissue, hence it disappears and can never return. We cure Varicocele and Stricture without operation or loss of time. The treatment may be taken at home privately. Send for our Free Illustrated Book on VARICOCELE and STRICTURE. WE GUARANTEE TO CURE OR NO PAY.

Kidneys & Bladder

All sexual complaints affect these organs, hence the kidneys are a great source of disease. Have you aching or weakness over the small of the back, tendency to urinate frequently, deposit in urine, coldness of hands or feet, a drowsy feeling in the morning. Don't neglect your kidneys. Our NEW METHOD TREATMENT is guaranteed to cure any disease of these organs or no pay.

No Names Used Without Written Consent.

C. W. Rowe, of Jackson, Mich., says: I had varicocele in the secondary stage and two strictures of many years' standing. I was on the brink of suicide, undergoing great suffering, but only got temporary relief. I was finally advised to try the NEW METHOD TREATMENT of Drs. K. & K. The enlarged veins disappeared in six weeks, the strictures tissue was removed in eight weeks and my sexual energy and vitality returned so I was a man in every respect. I recommend you doctors with my whole heart."

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

into carefully before the marriage takes place. Marsden of Evesleigh sounds like a grand alliance, but he is a good deal dipped; of course, he may have cleared himself. Miss L'Estrange has no guardian; I believe."

"No. Colonel L'Estrange, after making many wills, which he destroyed, finally died intestate; but good friend, Mr. Barton, the colonel's solicitor, has managed everything for us, and I have got into the habit of looking on Lord Dorrington as an informal guardian; but he can not, or will not, interfere now, because he, or rather Lady Dorrington, is so displeased with the proposed marriage."

"Ha! I feared so. Lady Dorrington was, I think, anxious her brother should secure Mrs. Ruthven's fortune. This must be a source of annoyance to Nora—I mean Miss L'Estrange—who is, I suppose, attached to Marsden; he is a sort of fellow to please a girl's fancy." There was a tinge of bitterness in his tone.

"Oh, yes, of course! But Nora is no sentimentalist, you know!"

"I do. She is something better. Well, good-morning, Mrs. L'Estrange."

"We shall see you again, though? You will not go without saying good-bye to Nora and poor little Bea?"

Winton hesitated.

"I should like to shake hands with Miss L'Estrange once more," he said slowly. "As to Bea, you must keep me posted up in your own, and her doings—if you will consider me her informal guardian, I shall be pleased."

"You are very good—you always were good, Mark," cried Mrs. L'Estrange, warmed out of formality. "But you are not going away forever! India is so accessible now; you can come to and fro, and —"

"India is the best place for me," he interrupted, somewhat grimly. "There I have work to do; here there are no ties to keep me! I shall come and say good-bye before I start." He shook hands cordially, and left her.

Mrs. L'Estrange hurried upstairs to report proceedings to Nora, who was pretending to read in her own room, where she was fond of retiring, finding the restraint even of her step-mother's kindly presence irksome, in her present overtaxed condition of mind—consumed as she was by perpetual anxiety respecting her own position, and intolerable regret for what she had lost by mere misapprehension, or, worse still, the deliberate misleading.

"And Mr. Winton is to leave so soon!" she exclaimed, growing very white, as her step-mother ceased speaking. "Why does he hurry away?"

"I can not imagine. He seems quite to go back to his work, and to think there is no place for him in England."

Nora was silent, and Mrs. L'Estrange continued to speak, repeating Winton's kind words, volunteering to be Bea's guardian. Suddenly she broke out, as if she had not heard what her step-mother had been saying:

"It is cruel of Clifford to keep me waiting so long—so long—for his decision. It will be five days to-morrow since he left me! And I can not bear this terrible anxiety! Helen! Ought I to marry him, when I have such doubts—such reluctance? Am I weaker than other people, that I can not see the right thing to do—and do it? Would Clifford really break his heart about me? What shall I do, Helen? Oh, what shall I do?"

She burst into a passion of tears, which absolutely frightened her step-mother, to whom she had scarcely ever—even in her childish days—displayed such strong emotion.

"Dear Nora," she cried, caressing her, "if it distresses you so dreadfully, do not marry Mr. Marsden! Better face the difficulty now, than let yourself be indissolubly linked to a man you do not like—though why you do not I can not understand."

There was a prolonged silence, while Nora's sobs subsided, and she gradually regained her self-possession.

* * * * * * *

At the Duchess of Leinster's dower house, there was not unmixed joy on the receipt of a carefully composed letter from Mrs. Ruthven, announcing her engagement to Marsden.

Lady Dorrington could not make it out. She was not so carried away by her eagerness for this fresh betrothal as to lose sight of the probable injustice to Nora, whose proud high-spirited letter had touched her, and, more still, had inspired her with hopes that the mischief was not irreparable. She hastened with Mrs. Ruthven's epistle to Lord Dorrington.

"Well, my dear," said the supient nobleman, when he had slowly perused it, "that brother of yours is a clever fellow. How he manages to get rid of one woman, and secure another in a twinkling of an eye, is beyond me altogether. Mrs. Ruthven is wisely vague on the subject."

"Clifford's momentary engagement to Miss L'Estrange seems to have originated in misapprehension on all sides; and I feel assured that she, too, will see the wisdom of setting an unwilling fiance free."

"Perhaps so; but I doubt if Clifford ever undertook anything against his will, unless under pressure of some tremendous necessity; and what the necessity was for his marrying Nora L'Estrange I can not see."

"Depend upon it, my letter is at the root of this very prudent change of front," returned her ladyship. "I feel anxious about Nora, however. I think I had better run up to town and see for myself how matters stand. You return to Chedworth to-morrow. I will explain to my aunt that I am compelled to go to town, the sole expenses, instead of spending the couple of days I promised."

It followed, of course, that my lady carried out her plans, and, having had a short interview with Mrs. Ruthven and found her brother was still absent at Evesleigh, she dispatched a telegram to Mrs. L'Estrange, whom she wished to see alone.

Mrs. L'Estrange had been out early, having walked with Bea and her governess to a music class which that young lady attended, and doing some shopping on her way back.

The dignified master of the house having gone to dinner, the door was opened by the "slavey" of the establishment, and Mrs. L'Estrange found the telegram on the drawing-room table.

As Nora was not there, and the message boded nothing pleasant, Mrs. L'Estrange went down-stairs at once, and meeting her own maid in the hall, she told her she was obliged to go out again, in case Miss L'Estrange asked, and set forth to keep the appointment.

The bell sounded more than once during the sacred hour of rest and refreshment, but the task of answering was left to the neat little housemaid, whose lot it was to serve more than one master.

Nora meanwhile employed herself in her own room. She shrunk from meeting Winton alone, and he might come any day; so, while Helen was out, she kept in her special stronghold.

She had been greatly disappointed that day. The morning post had brought her nothing from Marsden; so, with a sinking heart, she had set herself to compose a letter to him.

She had written "Dear Clifford," and sat looking at the words in a sort of despair as to how she should attack her terrible subject, when the servant of the house brought her a letter, at the sight of which her heart stood still, the writing was Marsden's.

"Has Mrs. L'Estrange come in?" she asked.

"Yes'm, she is in the drawing-room."

Nora tore open the envelope and glanced at the contents, before rushing to confide them to her step-mother.

(To be continued.)

EMPIRE'S DISRUPTION

Is Feared by Witte, Who Appeals to the People

St. Petersburg, November 16. — The Government, through the medium of an appeal printed in the Official Messenger today, makes another appeal to the people to prevent the dismemberment of the empire and to withdraw [illegible] program until an opportunity has been given for the carrying out of its provisions. Count Witte is counting largely on the support of the press in reconciling the people to the inevitable delay in the carrying out of the promised reforms, although he expects a great deal of opposition from the conservatives and peasantry.

Count Vorontzoff-Dashkoff, unable longer to endure his failure to tranquilize the Caucasus, is reported to have resigned the Vice Royalty. It is announced that the Emperor Nicholas and his family will shortly return to the palace at St. Petersburg. Count Witte today took up his quarters in a wing of the palace, where he will be in constant touch with His Majesty.

A RARE CHANCE FOR PROFITABLE INVESTMENT

THOS. PATTERSON & CO.

MINING AND INDUSTRIAL STOCKS

61 Simcoe Street, are pleased to announce that they have been appointed fiscal agents of the

CALUMET-TELLURIDE GOLD MINING CO.

of Colorado, and have secured a limited amount of stock of this splendid proposition, which they are prepared to sell at

$1.00 PER SHARE, PAR VALUE

This is a rare chance for a safe and profitable investment. Our customers and the investing public are requested to watch for full particulars, which will appear in these columns in a few days. Call at our office and talk it over, if you have any money that is lying idle, as this is an investment we can recommend.

THOS. PATTERSON & CO.

I offer, subject to prior sale, 50,000 shares of the Capital Stock of The

Oxarna Gold Mining Company

at the "Ground Floor" price of TEN CENTS A SHARE, (none has been offered for less), par value $1 00, fully paid and non-assessable.

The OXARNA GOLD MINING COMPANY is capitalized at $1,000,000.00, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1.00 each. The Oxarna Stock was originally all in the treasury, no preferred or promotion stock having been issued by this Company, and up to the present time only 350,000 shares of their stock have been issued.

The OXARNA COMPANY own by United States Patent and Deed, 160 Acres of highly mineralized land in the famous Thunder and Custer Mountain, Idaho districts, and over $12,000,000.00 net has been realized by the Mines in our immediate vicinity. One of the Mines contiguous to our property on the north has produced $1,000,000.00 and five veins of this rich ore parallel on one of our claims, and by about 2,000 feet of shafts, tunnels drifts and upraises the OXARNA COMPANY have uncovered over $1,000,000.00 worth of ore, and they have a large amount of ore in the ore bins and on the dump that averages over $67.00 a ton, and they expect to be in position to Mill not less than 100 tons of ore every day in a very short time, but if they only Mill 50 tons a day in less than one year they can pay 100 per cent. on the par value of the stock out standing in dividends, for they expect to have less than 400,000 shares of the stock on the market when they are fully financed.

The Oxarna Company have purchased a Mill all fully equipped and ready for business, that originally cost about $15,000.00, and they owe a balance of $5,000.00 on this Mill that will be due in three months, and in order to raise this amount quickly I am privileged to make this most liberal offer, for the stock is easily worth par today, for the time is rapidly approaching when the Company will be on a paying basis and the stock will become immensely remunerative in the near future.

Subject to prior sales I offer the above allotment on the following terms: 4 per cent. discount will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order, or subscriptions will be accepted on the installment plan, 1-4 of the amount with the order and a like amount in 30, 60 and 90 days. Make all orders payable to the undersigned or remit through the NATIONAL BANK of Delphos, and they will forward stock subject to your order.

Personally I advise you to get all of this stock that you can pay for during the next three months, for it is an exceedingly good investment. For further particulars call on or address.

A White Deer

While hunting last week up the Ottawa, near the Russian Captain in Quebec, a hunting party, among whom was Dr. Deneau, of Pembroke, saw a pure white deer. The hound broke off, took a side trail and ran up against the albino. It turned and faced the dogs, but was too far off for the hunters to reach it in time for capture. A pure white deer has not been captured in this neighborhood for probably twenty years, and there is not specimen in the Ottawa museum. The animal seen was of the red deer species and a good specimen.

LOCAL INCIDENTS

By The Times Man on the Street

—St. John's choir practiced yesterday evening.

—There was no police court yesterday.

—Five weeks from next Monday will be Xmas.

—Complaints are again made with respect to the muddy state of the crossings.

—Mrs. Williamson's Bible study class will meet this evening at eight o'clock.

—Shop early for Xmas and get first choice. All articles reserved until called for later on. Times Bookstore.

—A special meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. will be held on Monday evening next at 7.30 o'clock.

—For genuine bargains in fancy goods, dolls, toys of every description and notions for children, come to Times Bookstore.

—Crepe paper in entirely new designs and colors, for making lamp shades and fancy articles. Be sure and see the latest out before buying. Times Bookstore.

—One thousand copies of the Christmas War Cry, which is handsomely illustrated, will be sold in Peterboro next month by the Salvation Army.

—The officers and teachers of St. Paul's church Sunday school were entertained yesterday evening at the residence of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Torrance.

—Surely in protection of our city, pays. Homes bought mainly by hard earned and harder saved money, this city needs a fire hall as much as an opera house.

—The city is full of commercial travellers just now and the hotels are crowded, so crowded in fact that the members of the Yankee Consul Co. could hardly find accommodation.

—Rev. Dr. Symonds, former rector of St. Luke's church, will preach at St. Luke's next Sunday morning and the Bishop of Toronto in the evening when he will also administer the rite of confirmation.

—The Colbourg assessors have assessed Mr. Sam Clarke's indemnity as a member of the Legislature. Mr. Clarke appealed against the assessment, but the appeal was not entertained.

—Yesterday the small boy got out his sled and after vain efforts to slide down hill, proceeded to put a shine on the runners with a brick but stolen from next door neighbor's coal house.

—Apples in England are said to be scarce, and are selling in London for 25c. a piece. This seems a shame when we consider how many the farmers of Peterboro county feed to their swine.

—Hillhouse Brown, defaulting manager of the Hamilton city branch of the Bank of Hamilton, yesterday pleaded guilty at that city, and was given seven years in the Government Boarding House at Kingston.

—In the militia orders published at Ottawa yesterday appears the following item of interest to Peterboro—"57th Regimental Peterboro Rangers.—To be provisional lieutenant, Joseph Emerson Hodgson, gentleman."

—Take in the cheap excursion on Saturday to Hamilton and watch the Dundas vs. Peterboro game at Hamilton. It will only cost you $1.00 for a return ticket; make this up on the game out of some of the Dundas Duffers who think that their team will win.

—Lindsay Post says; Saturday evening a young man travelling to Peterboro on the eight o'clock train jumped off at Lindsay station, attracted by a scramble of maidens. He was carefree and the night was cold. He overlooked his stay too long, the train pulled out, and he was "Johnny on the spot." His language, strong as it was, didn't recall the train, and he had to remain till the "flyer" came along.

—Yesterday afternoon, two men at work in the Aylmer street drain, had a narrow escape from death. The men were engaged in digging out the drain that is under the supervision of Mr. Frank McManus. When the men were working some five feet under the surface, the sides of the entrenchment suddenly caved in. It was only by prompt and intelligent work that they were rescued before being crushed or suffocated. Fortunately, neither of the men had to be taken to the hospital.

CHIEF BOND'S DEATH

Details of the Lamentable, Fatal Accident Near Haliburton

The following particulars of the recent drowning accident have been secured: While going up Crooked Lake on Wednesday on a small skiff for a deer hunt at the head of the lake, fifteen miles from Haliburton, a party consisting of Chief of Police William Bond and Miss Grice, of Port Hope, and Jas. Peterson of Harcourt were swamped. Mr. Bond and Miss Grice were drowned, but Mr. Peterson clung to the boat and was saved. The body of Miss Grice has been found but Bond's body is still missing and is being dragged for. Mrs. Bond and her little daughter will remain at the residence of Mr. P. A. Curry, until the body of her husband is recovered.

THE AUXILLIARY MAIN

Water Commissioners Hurrying Along the Main From Auburn

The water commissioners are progressing well with their work of laying the auxiliary water main from the Auburn power house to Smith street. The total distance is over 4,000 feet, and of this only about 1,000 remains to be laid, the work having proceeded so far as Barnardo avenue. A 12-inch main is being laid to supplement the main of the same size already in on that section, and with the increased pipe capacity which the new main will give it is expected that for years to come the main supply pipes will be sufficient to give all the pressure required, both for ordinary and emergency uses.

Mr. W. Hendrewin, superintendent of the waterworks, states that he hopes to place in a large number of services put this year, and they will work up to this time the general summer

HUNTERS RETURN

Gold Lake Hunting Club Being Home Seven Deer

Yesterday before the noon hour a 'bus load of bearded, sun-burnt, men, fairly indecent as to their superabundant health, drove into town. They were bespattered with mud, but jolly as a barrel full of monkeys that have just found where some one has cached a bag of peanuts.

The party were the members of the Gold Lake Hunting party, comprising our popular Chief of the Fire Brigade, who acted as captain of the club, Mr. Thos. Rutherford, and Messrs. J. Stanger, Herb. Snowden, Frank White, F. Stenson, Arthur Ringer, W. S. Hartshorn, Geo. Irwin, and the guide.

The party should have arrived here on Wednesday night, but they were frozen in at the Narrows on their way home. They had for several miles to break a passage through ice an inch thick for their canoes, heavily laden with venison and camping outfit, in order to reach Buckhorn.

They did not have as good luck as usual with the deer for such experienced hunters, being handicapped by continuous bad weather, ever since the deer shooting season opened. They got a few ducks and trout, the fishing this year however was not as good as usual.

Local Street Car Co. Construction

The concrete work for the large addition to the car sheds of the Peterboro Radial Railway Company, has been commenced.

The brick work will be rushed ahead as rapidly as possible. The extra room is required owing to the increased rolling stock of the company.

The extension is 22x52 and another entrance track will be laid into the building. The shed will then afford accommodation for five additional cars.

GOT ELEVEN DEER

Ketchecum Deer Hunting Party Arrives Home

Yesterday afternoon a jolly lot of local sportsmen, comprising the Ketchecum Lake Hunting Club, returned home looking hale and hearty and sadly in need of a barber's attention. As one gentleman, who saw them, remarked, they needed the use of a lawn mower and then a razor.

Messrs. Brooks, Tovey, Ald. Hicks, James and others of the Wilmot party, report having had a splendid time and bring back pretty nearly all the deer the law allows them.

They got eleven head, which was not so bad, considering that they encountered very inclement weather, that interfered with their hunting.

Indemnity Bill Condemned

Port Hope, November 17.—At a meeting of the Port Hope Conservative Association, Mr. Jas. McLean, ex-president, introduced a resolution condemning the bill put through at the last session of Parliament, which provided increased indemnities to members and pensions to ex-ministers. The resolution was unanimously carried.

BUCK FEVER

Gold Lake Hunters Suffer From Above Complaint

Talk about Buck Fever!! !! The Gold Lake Hunting party who returned yesterday report three cases of this complaint, that is common among neophytes at the game; but in two of the three cases in question, those attacked by the buck fever mercifully were old and seasoned veterans.

The first case of this fever developed on the third day out; a member who has shot more deer than he has fingers and toes was paddling furiously after a well-antlered buck who was rapidly swimming for the nearest shore and life. As the wind dead ahead was very heavy he was not making as good time as the buck. Another member of the party, who is intimately associated with a local hotel, seeing his brother member's inability to catch the buck, rushed for his Winchester. He rushed to the shore and as quickly as the ride would work pumped out shot after shot as quickly as he could pull the trigger.

The buck landed on the far side of the lake in safety as the genial wine clerk had forgotten that the rifle was empty. Before shooting with his empty rifle, he tried to turn the deer, some half mile away, by vigorously waving his cap and shouting "Get back, there, you."

The second attack of this buck bacteria was in evidence two days later, when two members chased a fine doe for a mile, one paddling as though in a championship canoe race, and the other rapidly pulling the trigger and consequently pumping his magazine as rapidly as he could. Again the sport had forgotten the very necessary insertion of the 16 death dealing cartridges.

The third time this murderous attack of a member of the party will be, as far as we are concerned. Left buried in "innocuous desuetude," as Mr. the hunter, might have his gun loaded by now, and go gunning for us.

Miss Margaret Miller Passes Away at the Family Residence

The many friends in the city and county of Miss Margaret Miller, will regret to hear of her death, which occurred on Wednesday night, from heart and lung trouble, at her home, lot 16, con. 7, Otonabee. Deceased was a daughter of Mr. William Miller, and was thirty-three years of age. The late Miss Miller had been ailing for about a year, and about three months ago, went to Gravenhurst Sanitarium, where she remained four weeks, returning home feeling little improved. She gradually sank after her return, her death occurring last night at 8.30.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 1.30 o'clock from the family residence to the Keene cemetery, where interment will take place.

Five sisters with her father and mother survive her.

EXTENSIVE TOUR OF THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES THROUGHOUT INDIA.

The tour upon which the Prince and Princess of Wales are now embarked is of a more gigantic character than is commonly imagined. They will tour India from end to end. The peninsula is in itself a great continent, its length being 1900 miles and its breadth some 1,000 miles. The area over which the Prince and Princess will tour measures at least 1,250,000 miles, and including Burma, which will also be visited, the figures may roughly be given at 1,500,000. The present Prince and Princess' tour will largely exceed the 10,000-mile tour undertaken by King Edward in native states of that district. One of the first points visited will be Ajmere; the only point of British territory in this wide area of native rule. Thence the route will be to Peshawur on the remote north-west, historic Delhi in the centre of the Mahommedan area, down the plain of the Ganges to Calcutta. From the plain the Prince will mount 7,000 feet to Darjeeling and afterward will journey across the sea to Burma; thence to Madras, Mysore and across the central tableland of India to Benares, and westward again to Simla and Cuetta, finally leaving from Kurrachee in March, 1906.

HAS SUNG IN CHOIR OVER SEVENTY YEARS

Veteran of Sacred Music Visits London and is Astounded at the Coliseum.

London, Nov. 18.—England's eldest chorister, George Arnold, of the picturesque Sussex fishing village of Bosham, visited the Coliseum last night, where he gazed with admiration and amazement at the costumes of the choristers and listened with rapture to their voices.

"I know what good singing is, and I ought to, for I have sung in our choir, week in and week out, for seventy-six years," said the old man last night. "I was born at Bosham, on March 29, 1819, and have stayed there earning a living as a fisherman since. When I was ten years old I joined the choir, singing treble.

"We had a band then—two clarinets, a copper bass viol and a bassoon. A pitch-pipe, which we still have, was used to start the singing. A fine of threepence was inflicted on any member who missed a service, and the money was spent on a jar of mutton and turnips. I had a good deal of mutton for nothing, as I never missed a service.

"My wife is still living, and we have had fourteen children. I have a great number of grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren, I still sing in the choir, and hope to for many years and some of my children and grandchildren are also members."

Mr. Arnold is still hale and active, and sees and hears as well as ever. When he was 86 he sang a solo at the church concert before 1,000 people, and did it so well that he was encored.

His great ambition in life now is to sing in the Coliseum choir, which delighted him so much last night.

WATER OF ENGLAND RECANTS HIS VIEWS

French Editor Now Believes John Bull is Not Such a Bad Fellow.

(Special Cable).

Paris, Nov. 18.

M. Massard, the editor of the violently Anglophobe paper, one of the members of the Canadian Municipal Council who visited London last week, has made a public reantatation of his Anglophobe heresies.

To his astonishment, he says, he found that the Cockneys on the English side of the channel had many of the offensive insularity with which he had credited them, that they were broad-minded and that they bore the most friendly sentiments toward the French.

The proofs given him of this friendliness particularly moved him, he says. He declares now that the councilor's visit to London has helped to clear away many misunderstandings, and has shown that not only can Frenchmen trust their English neighbors, but that both nations can work harmoniously together for their mutual benefit.

M. Massard concludes by glorying in the fact that he has grasped the hand so cordially stretched out to him, and that he is not ashamed to own it publicly.

MADE A GOOD LIVING BY ROBBING BEGGARS

When He Added Murder to His Crimes His Career Was Ended.

(Special Cable).

Paris, Nov. 18.

A worthy, named Bresard, who was sentenced to penal servitude for life to-day deserves a special niche in the temple of infamy.

His speciality was robbing beggars, and he only brought himself into the clutches of justice when he so far forgot his methods as to murder two of his victims—a man and a woman.

"These are the only two I ever killed," he said plaintively at the conclusion of his trial. And then he confessed to his thefts. He began his career with the hypothesis that every beggar is an impostor—and generally a prosperous one.

He made his home in Calais, and studied the movements of the beggars. He noted those who were possessed of wealth, and robbed them in their rooms.

Bresard confessed thefts in the most matter-of-fact fashion, knowing well that he could not obtain pardon from without exposing their [illegible]. The evidence offered [illegible] two [illegible] that [illegible] in the [illegible] Lands, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

IDLE THOUGHTS

ON MATTERS LOCAL, NATIONAL AND UNIVERSAL.

Now that Peterboro has at last an opera house in which it is not painful and apprehensive to sit, let the management see to it that its patrons are not discouraged by the presentation of shows unworthy a place in the histrionic world. The engagement of good comedies, dramas, operas, etc., will ensure a growth of patronage, but the selection of travesties of the same will not only court financial disaster to the house, but will place Peterboro on the black list so far as high class companies are concerned. The fate of "the drama" in this "Lift Look City" is in the hands of the manager of the Grand.

* * *

Poor old doggie! If Ald. Bagley's bylaw to prohibit the running at large of dogs becomes law, his doom is sealed. What's the use of having a dog—man's most faithful four-footed friend—if one has to chain him up in one's back yard, and conduct him along the King's highway in harness; for it is conceded by the general public that this is what is meant by the bylaw, which reaches out for tagged doggies as well as tagless ones. They will all be in danger from the public executioner, as in Ald. Bagley's own words, "the sporting of a tag doesn't make a dog a canine saint." Perhaps the parties behind the worthy alderman's proposition will go a step further and suggest some more acceptable scheme for curbing a dog's inherent propensities than making a perpetual prisoner of him. Then there would be some loss to the civic treasury in the way of licenses, but that might be made good by cutting down the Board of Works' appropriations. A friend of this to be persecuted animal asks if the following pathetic (dog)gerel will interpret the working of the bylaw should it by any possible chance be put into effect:

A dog he would a wandering go,
Heigh oh, says Rolly,
Whether the bylaw would let him or no,
Heigh oh, says Rolly.
He is caught in the act by the police on the beat,
And promptly arrested for running the streets;
Next morning he's summoned before the P. M.,
And discharged with a caution not to do it agin.
For the second offence he's fined a dollar and costs.
But the third time convicted, poor doggie to this world is lost.

While on this theme, one might suggest that there are many petty nuisances (to some people) in these days of fads and fancies to which bylaws might be applied. There is the phonograph fiend, the gentle lovable cat (especially at night), the baby carriage (to say nothing of the babies), the steam engine whistle, the factory chimney, the house-to-house gossiper, and goodness knows what not in the estimation of many 20th century moralists. In fact, every person is a nuisance one way or the other to his or her brother and sister mortals. Ladies frequently complain that it is a nuisance to so do up their hair and have to wear certain fashionable apparel or headwear simply because Paris sets the pace and Mrs. Grundy demands it. And to many "lords of creation," it is a decided nuisance to be obliged to labor between meals, and to give up their seat in a street car to one of the gentler sex. Did this world of nuisances and it would develop into a perfect Paradise, and theological controversialists cease to grist.

* * *

It's really too bad that the memory of stupid old Guy Fawkes should have engendered controversial strife between "gentlemen of the cloth." Why not let the matter drop and live in Christian amity, notwithstanding past inquisitions and religious slaughters. Differences of opinion are as dominant today in the human make-up as they were in the days of Henry VIII. and the Spanish Inquisition; but thank God we are that much nearer the angels this 20th century than to cut each other's throats in support of Church dogmas or tenets. Since Adam and Eve set the example in Eden good and evil have marched hand in hand, and the reverend gentlemen would set a better example of Christian charity by searching in the past and present history of each other's church for that which is commendable rather than for that which may be condemned. As we hope for a merciful judgment beyond the grave of our many faults and weaknesses in this life, so let us, Protestants and Catholics alike, exercise true religious tolerance, and be always ready with the "glad hand" to each other. It is safe to say that not one convert has been made either by Father McColl or Dr. Crothers through their regrettable controversy, but on the contrary considerable ill-feeling engendered thereby between their respective flocks. Both are talented and exemplary gentlemen in their respective spheres, and the following lines have been offered by a well-known citizen:

People say it isn't right
For clergymen to stir up strife,
Nor should they, 'cause of old Guy Fawkes,
Indulge in unkind, cutting talks.

Mr. Gordon Brooks an Arm

The many friends of Mr. Clem Gordon, overseer of the Trent Canal, will regret to hear that while engaging a game at Hastings on Thursday he had the misfortune to fall and break his left arm below the elbow. The fracture was reduced by a Hastings physician, and Mr. Gordon returned to the city yesterday. Last night he was reported as doing as well as could be expected.

Mr. Whitney Speaks With Peterboro

A local gentleman, well known in Peterboro, was yesterday in personal communication with Premier Whitney, in Toronto, by telephone. Their conversation was concerning a coming election trial, in which the gentleman referred to claims to have in his possession actually signed and witnessed declarations as to bribery and other offences by a former political representative and also by an agent of the member. Mr. Whitney requested the gentleman to confer with a local solicitor.

Council in Committee Of The Whole

Decide to Take the Initiative Toward Securing Wharfage, if the Government Will Assist.

The City Fathers met in Committee of the Whole last night, when there were present; Mayor Henry Best, and Aldermen Crowe, Adams, McIntyre, Tovey, Johnston, Beaty, and Mason.

CITY WHARVES.

The first business taken up was a discussion on the suggestion raised by many citizens that the city take advantage of the dredging of the river now in progress, from the C.P.R. bridge up to and beyond Hunter St. and utilize the material taken from the river's bed for filling up the city's property along the water front with a view to constructing dockage facilities. The end now under way is just below Hunter street bridge, and the dredge is dumping its debris on the river bank, which is quite convenient. During the next cut, however, it will be necessary to carry the material dredged away in barges, and the Government's instructions are to dump it into any convenient deep water. The Council decided last night to urge upon the Minister of Public Works the desirability of depositing this material on the water front in preparation for wharfage. This will of course mean the construction of some sort of crib work to preserve the land thus made, otherwise it would be carried away again by spring freshets. What is to pay the cost connected with this scheme is the vital question, and as immediate action will have to be taken, the matter was left in the Board of Works hands, with power to send a deputation to Ottawa if necessary.

CARE OF THE POOR.

A communication from Mrs. Butler, matron of the Protestant Home, requested that the city appoint a committee to confer with a committee of the county council, trustees of the Home and local clergymen, to discuss ways and means of taking care of the city poor. The Provincial inspector on Homes has strongly objected to the present overcrowded state of this institution, and advised that an immediate extension to the Protestant Home must be provided.

His Worship, Ald. Johnston, Mason and Adams were appointed a committee for this purpose.

ISOLATION HOSPITAL.

This question again came up in conjunction with that of a House of Refuge, and the Council thought that after consultation with the county on the Protestant Home question they will have a better understanding of the county and city's positions in regard to these matters. From communications read from other cities and towns it appears that Peterboro does not stand alone in not having an isolation hospital, and we will publish in another issue the text of those letters received in response to the city clerk's inquiries in this matter.

Ald. Johnston raised the question of keeping open the several water troughs all winter, and it was left to Mr. Henderson's decision as to whether this scheme is practicable or not.

Council then adjourned.

TORONTO'S GRAND OPERA FESTIVAL IN ENGLISH

Henry W. Savage's Famous Company of 150 Voices and Orchestra of Fifty to Be Heard in Elaborate Productions of "Aida," "Faust," "Rigoletto," "Tannhauser," "Lohengrin," and "The Valkyrie," During the Week of Nov. 20th, at the Princess Theatre, Toronto.

Music lovers in cities within excursion distance of Toronto will have an opportunity to hear the most pretentious repertory of grand opera masterpieces during the week commencing Monday, Nov. 20th, at the Princess Theatre, Toronto, that has ever been offered by a company visiting the Dominion. Henry W. Savage's comprehensive English Grand Opera Company, whose success during the past two years has been unequalled with the greatest pride and enthusiasm must in the musical world is now making its second great tour of the United States and Canada, covering 14,000 miles and introducing real grand opera in our own tongue. A special train of fourteen cars will be required to carry the singing forces of the company, orchestra of fifty musicians and elaborate productions for the repertory. This venture is unprecedented in the fifty years since grand opera came to America.

Opera goers, music students and amateurs have been looking forward to the coming Toronto opera season at the Princess Theatre, ever since Mr. Savage announced his present visit. Students in the score of music conservatories in the motion of the grammes are preparing to attend the English opera season in a body, while Toronto's society, art and music circles are preparing to take advantage of the moderate prices that prevail for the season and enjoy the entire repertory of seven world's great masterpieces.

Mr. Savage has just captured Boston with his magnificent production of the second music drama of "The cycle known to the music world as "The Ring of Nieblungen," by Richard Wagner. The Boston press is captivated by this production of "The Valkyrie," and are saying fine things for Mr. Savage's company. This music drama is to be one of the features of the Toronto opera season.

The arrangement and dates of performances will be as follows:

Monday evening, Nov. 20.—Wagner's "Tannhauser."

Tuesday evening, Nov. 21.—Verdi's "Aida."

Wednesday matinee, Nov. 22.—Wagner's "Lohengrin."

Wednesday evening, Nov. 22.—Verdi's "Rigoletto."

Thursday evening, Nov. 23.—Wagner's "Valkyrie."

First American production in English.

Friday evening, Nov. 24.—Verdi's "Aida."

Saturday matinee, Nov. 25.—Wagner's "Tannhauser."

Saturday evening, Nov. 25.—Gounod's "Faust."

The scale of prices will be $2.00, $1.50, $1.00 and 50 cents, it being part of Mr. Savage's educational plan in popularizing grand opera in England to make the prices so moderate that all who desire may attend the entire series of performances.

NOTE—The sale of seats for the entire eight performances will open at the Box Office, Thursday, Nov. 16th, 1905.

Prepaid Mail Orders can be sent in and will be filled in order of receipt, beginning Saturday, November 11th.

Cheques and orders should be made payable to O. B. Sheppard, Princess Theatre.

A NEW INDUSTRY

Mr. R. J. Soden Meets With Most Generous Patronage

In this issue appears an advertisement that will be of great interest, in many respects more than that is merely a new concern added to Peterboro's commercial or mercantile enterprises. Mr. R. J. Soden, who is an old Peterboro boy, married to a Toronto Peterboro young lady, and who has Peterboro and her progress at heart, has opened a new book stationery, and fancy goods store on Hunter street, opposite the post office.

That Mr. Soden will get a reasonable of a good big slice of Peterboro's trade in his lines, is assured, but only by the clean, intelligently chosen, and up-to-date quality of his large stock, but by the fact that his store has been fairly crowded since he opened three days ago.

Mr. Soden is a thoroughly practical bookseller, having been engaged extensively in this business in Montreal and other cities.

This store is nice, clean, well lighted and both shelves and counters covered by a well chosen stock of the latest articles appertaining to the book trade.

As Mr. Soden is an old Peterboro boy, there is no doubt but what his goods will go like snow before an April sun.

LIPTON'S TWO REGRETS

That He Was Never Married, Secretly or Otherwise, Nor Lifted America's Cup

London, Nov. 17.—"There are two great regrets in my life. One that I have not yet lifted the American's Cup, and the other that I have not been married secretly or otherwise." is Sir Thomas Lipton's reply to the statement published in the United States that years ago he was secretly wedded to a Scotch girl.

Premium of $344.22 For City's Debentures

Amount Offered for Sale, $44,309.08---Purchase Price, $44,653.30, by a Toronto Firm.

The tenders for the purchase of the city's debentures, advertised for November 15th, were opened yesterday afternoon by the Finance Committee, who had postponed attending to this business until the return of Finance Minister Ald. Mason, from his deer hunt. The amount of the debentures offered for sale, in part or whole, was $44,309.08, and they were sold en bloc to Aemilius Jarvis & Co., of Toronto, for the sum of $44,653.30 at four per cent., which means a premium of $344.22 being secured by the city. Twelve tenders were received, one from a local party, one from the commissioners, and the remainder from Toronto, Montreal, and Ottawa. This is the first time in many years that our debentures have fetched a premium, and from out of town bidders, and it is a source of gratification that the city's financial rating stands so high in Canada's money market.

$15,000.00, four per cent., for waterworks, 30 years.

$12,000.00, four per cent., for bridge and street extensions, 20 years.

$3,000.27, four per cent., for sewers, 30 years.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

ANY even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the Northwest Provinces excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded upon by any person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Entry may be made personally at the local land office for the district in which the land to be taken is situated, or if the homesteader desires, he may on application to the Minister of the Interior, Ottawa, the Commissioner of Immigration, Winnipeg, or the local agent for the district in which the land is situate, receive authority for some one to make entry for him.

HOMESTEAD DUTIES.—A settler who has been granted an entry for a homestead is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of the following plans:

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased), of any person who is eligible to make a homestead entry under the provisions of this Act, resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such person as a homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence prior to obtaining patent may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirements of this Act as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon the said land.

APPLICATION FOR PATENT should be made at the end of three years, before the Local Agent, Sub-Agent or the Homestead Inspector.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST MINING REGULATIONS.

Coal.—Coal lands may be purchased at $10 per acre for soft coal and $20 for anthracite. Not more than 320 acres can be acquired by one individual or company. Royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds shall be collected on the gross output.

Quartz.—A free miner's certificate is granted upon payment in advance of $7.50 per annum for an individual, and from $50 to $100 per annum for a company according to capital.

A free miner, having discovered mineral in place, may locate a claim 15 Ox1500 feet.

The fee for recording a claim is $5.

At least $100 must be expended on the claim each year or paid to the mining recorder in lieu thereof. When $500 has been expended or paid, the locator may, upon having a survey made and upon complying with other requirements, purchase the land at $1 an acre.

The patent provides for the payment of a royalty of 2½ per cent. on the sales.

PLACER mining claims generally are 100 feet square; entry fee $5 renewable yearly.

A free miner may obtain two leases to dredge for gold of five miles each for a term of twenty years, renewable at the discretion of the Minister of the Interior.

The lessee shall have a dredge in operation within one season from the date of the lease for each five miles. Rental, $10 per annum for each mile of river leased. Royalty at the rate of 2½ per cent collected on the output after it exceeds $10,000.

W. W. CORY,
Deputy of the Minister of the Interior.

STRICTURE AND KIDNEY DISEASE CURED.

C. E. WRIGHT.

"I had stricture for eleven years. It finally brought on Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. I had an uncomfortable shooting pain in the groin and feeling as though something was in the urethra. My back was weak and I could scarcely stoop over. Urine was full of sediment. Had a desire to urinate frequently. Family doctors, so-called specialists, patent medicines, electric belts, all failed. I was discouraged. I had spent hundreds of dollars in vain. Finally I consulted Drs. Kennedy & Kergan as the last resort. I had heard a great deal about them and concluded from the fact that they had been established over 25 years that they understood their business. I was delighted with the results. In one week I felt better and in a few weeks was entirely cured. Have gained sixteen pounds in weight."

A TANGLED WEB

BY MRS. ALEXANDER

"Nora," it began,—"I think I see the relief in your eyes—those sweet truthful eyes I love so well—when you read these words—I give you back your promise, and set you free. There is that in you, I know not what, which forbids me to sham generosity. I give you up, because I can not help it. A tremendous necessity, a necessity I can not explain, compels me. No words can express the agony of bitterness and humiliation it costs me to release you, for I love you as passionately as ever, as I did from the first, when you unconsciously cast a spell over me that has been my ruin. Yet it has been all my own fault. I do not blame you. If I were to write forever, I could say no more. You never loved me, but I should not the less have insisted on your keeping your promise to be my wife. Now I renounce you, and hope never to see you again! You will give yourself to another, of course—I would rather know you were safe in your grave out of reach where none could touch you. So good-bye! No one will ever love you so entirely, so intensely, as I do, though I curse the hour I first saw you. If it be possible you should ever regret me, I would break every law, every bond to come to you. But this is madness!

"Yours—still utterly yours,

"CLIFFORD MARSDEN."

In the first infinite relief of finding herself free, Nora did not quite take in the fierce despair of this strange letter. Her impulse was to rush with her great tidings to Helen. She flew down-stairs, and into the drawing-room. Mrs. L'Estrange's arm-chair was in front of the fire, and Nora just saw, as she thought, the dark line of her dress at one side, as if her feet were on the fender.

"Oh, Helen! dear Helen! Clifford releases me. Thank God, I am free, quite free!" she cried in joyous agitation.

She had scarce uttered the words when a figure started up from the chair, and Winton confronted her.

Nora stood still and dumb, the open letter in her hand, feeling dazed and helpless in the crushing confusion which had so suddenly overwhelmed her.

"Has Marsden then released you at your own request?" cried Winton, impetuously, and coming forward quickly, forgetting in the supreme excitement of the moment all conventionality; while to Nora it seemed equally natural to answer with an emphatic "Yes, oh yes! Where is Helen? I thought she was here?"

"So did I," returned Winton, recovering his self-possession and his reserve. "I called to—to say good-bye, and I trust you will forgive my inopportune presence, my unguarded, and I fear very presumptuous question. My sincere interest in—in your welfare, must be my excuse."

"You are very kind, I—Oh, where is Helen? I must go and look for her." Before WINTON could stop her, had he been so disposed, she had fled.

Winton gazed after her, as expression of hope and joy gradually lighting up his sombre face. She was free by her own desire. Life might be worth living yet! While he stood thinking, new and glowing views of much over which he had often puzzled suggesting themselves, the respectable Watson came in.

"If you please, sir, Mrs. L'Estrange went out again, and Miss L'Estrange does not know when she will return."

"Ah!—well, perhaps—" he hesitated. He was dying for a few words with Nora, but it would be bad taste to intrude upon her now. "Perhaps," he continued, "I may find Mrs. L'Estrange at home to-morrow. I should not like to leave without bidding her good-bye."

He had nothing for it but to take his hat and depart.

Nora, greatly surprised at Helen's absence, could not compose herself to do anything. She wandered to and fro from room to room, sometimes sitting down—to fall into vague reveries. She read and re-read Marsden's letter; its passionate despair sobered and dismayed her. What could have happened to make him give her up so freely? She was deeply grieved for him. She strove to compose a letter to him in her mind, but could not command her ideas; all she could do—and she was ashamed of the pleasure she had in doing it—was to enclose the two rings Marsden had given her in a neat packet and address them to the giver—later in the evening she would write.

At last Mrs. L'Estrange returned, looking pale and tired.

"Oh, Helen! Where—where have you been?" cried Nora, when her stepmother came into the room, now only partially lighted by the glow of a good fire.

"You will hardly guess!—I have been with Lady Dorrington." And she proceeded to describe the telegram and her interview.

"I think Lady Dorrington is terribly afraid you are breaking your heart, Nora. She feels sure you have renounced Mr. Marsden in consequence of her letter, she is therefore quite pleased with you. But I have a wonderful piece of news. He has absolutely engaged himself to Mrs. Ruthven, and they are to be married soon."

"Then that, in some way, accounts for this letter," said Nora, handing Clifford's to Mrs. L'Estrange, who read it with surprise and regret.

Many and varied were the conjectures of both as to what could possibly be the mysterious necessity which influenced Marsden; both coming, reluctantly, to the conclusion that money must be the root of the evil—which was certainly Nora's good.

* * * * * * *

Mrs. Ruthven was successful along the whole line she had marked out for herself. If she was a little sore regarding the feelings Marsden so frankly avowed toward Miss L'Estrange, she had the consolation of believing that she was inflicting the cruelest disappointment on that detested rival. Then, she had the man she loved so utterly at her mercy; and this, which would have been pain and humiliation to a woman of real heart and delicacy, gratified her crude love of power, while the certainty of accomplishing the marriage on which she had set her soul, of falsifying Shirley's spiteful prophecies of defeat, filled her with exultation. There was a very ugly reverse to this medal, but, for the moment, she was able to put it aside, if not to forget it. With her wealth, and Marsden's position and popularity, the world was at her feet. As to his crase about Nora L'Estrange that would pass over. He would find that an experienced woman of the world must be a more suitable wife for him than a mere simple school-girl like Nora.

For several days after she had come to a distinct understanding with Marsden, Mrs. Ruthven denied herself to every one—even to her faithful Shirley, who was by no means pleased with the aspect of things.

He had not been accustomed to be thus debarred admittance, and he scented mischief. Though the day was gone when he hoped to rekindle Mrs. Ruthven's passing caprice for himself, he objected very strongly to her marrying Marsden, who had unconsciously wounded his amour propre, and insulted him by his oppressive superiority. When, at last, Mrs. Ruthven was at home to him, he was in a very bad temper indeed, which was not improved by the careless triumph of her manner. "I thought you were going to cut me completely," he said, when they had exchanged greetings. "Why, it is more than a week since I was admitted!"

"You have no right to complain; I have not seen any one."

"You have not been unwell, I hope?"

"No: I have felt remarkably well: but I have been busy with these tiresome papers," and she waved her left hand toward them. Shirley started, for on her finger sparkled the double-heart device, of rubies and diamonds, he had seen on Nora's.

THOS. PATTERSON & CO.

I offer, subject to prior sale, 50,000 shares of the Capital Stock of The

Oxarna Gold Mining Company

at the "Ground Floor" price of TEN CENTS A SHARE, (none has been offered for less), par value $1 00, fully paid and non-assessable.

The OXARNA GOLD MINING COMPANY is capitalized at $1,000,000.00, divided into 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $1.00 each. The Oxarna Stock was originally all in the treasury, no preferred or promotion stock having been issued by this Company, and up to the present time only 333,000 shares of their stock have been issued.

The OXARNA COMPANY own by United States Patent and Deed, 162 Acres of highly mineralized land in the Famous Thunder and Custer Mountain, Idaho districts, and over $12,000,000.00 net has been realized by the Mines in our immediate vicinity. One of the Mines contiguous to our property on the north has produced $3,000,000.00 and five veins of this rich ore parallel on one of our claims, and by about 2,000 feet of shafts, tunnels drifts and upraises the OXARNA COMPANY have uncovered over $1,000,000.00 worth of ore, and they have a large amount of ore in the ore bins and on the dump that averages over $67.00 a ton, and they expect to be in position to Mill not less than 100 tons of ore every day in a very short time, but if they only Mill 50 tons a day in less than one year they can pay 100 per cent. on the par value of the stock out standing in dividends, for they expect to have less than 600,000 shares of the stock on the market when they are fully financed.

The Oxarna Company have purchased a Mill all fully equipped and ready for business, that originally cost about $16,000.00, and they owe a balance of $6,000.00 on this Mill that will be due in three months, and in order to raise this amount quickly I am privileged to make this most liberal offer, for the stock is easily worth par today, for the time is rapidly approaching when the Company will be on a paying basis and the stock will become immensely remunerative in the near future.

Subject to prior sales I offer the above allotment on the following terms: 4 per cent. discount will be allowed if all cash accompanies the order, or subscriptions will be accepted on the installment plan, 1-4 of the amount with the order and a like amount in 30, 60 and 90 days. Make all orders payable to the undersigned or remit through the NATIONAL BANK of Delphos, and they will forward stock subject to your order.

Personally I advise you to get all of this stock that you can pay for during the next three months, for it is an exceedingly good investment. For further particulars call on or address.

Tom's Wife

By A. M. DAVIES OGDEN

Copyright, 1905, by E. C. Parcells

Down in the street a sudden bursting of bombs announced an "extra," and the sick man lying on the bed in the little hotel room stirred wearily and opened his eyes. A touch of "chuchu" had taken strength and vitality, and an intense depression weighed like a stone on body and soul. There could be no news in this South American republic that interested him. The president had probably made a speech; the weekly steamship from England had arrived. At the thought a sob surged up into his throat. England, his country, how far away and how dear!

Resting there, motionless, passive, picture after picture began to file through his brain—the trim little country houses, covered with vines and with trees where the rooks cawed eternally; the narrow, honeysuckle hedged lanes. And Tom—dear old Tom. The man's face softened. And Alice. He moved restlessly and strove to think of other things, of his life in the ten years since he had watched the white cliffs of the Needles fading into the distance. Sheep raising, farming, mining, he had tried his hand at them all.

And now, ill and forlorn, he lay alone in this room in Buenos Ayres. It was time for his medicine. The doctor had bidden him be particular about it, but Rockhill frowned. What was the use of getting well? he mused listlessly. Nobody cared; there was nobody to care.

The thoughts of England came thronging back, strong, insistent, refusing to be suppressed. Rockhill, weak physically and mentally, let himself drift on the tide. What had become of Tom—Tom, with his brave blue eyes, his glorious voice? He could not remember the time when he and Tom had not been sworn companions, robbing the orchards, whipping the pools together. To Rockhill, a lonely boy living with a stern old uncle, the companionship of the other lad had been the brilliant web woven against the dull woof of home life. And the golden thread worked into the pattern, giving it the final touch of beauty and preciousness—ah, that had been Alice!

Closing his eyes, the man saw again the sweet, girlish face surrounded by its tangle of gold brown hair. How joyously they all had lived and frolicked together until the time when Rockhill, eager and ambitious, had departed for college.

The man on the bed shivered, the memory of that return from college was yet so poignant. In one night the hope of a life had been undone. It was then that he had left England. And from that day he had heard no word of those behind. Were they happy, those two? That Alice and Tom were long since married he never doubted. Did they ever speak of him, wonder about his abrupt disappearance? He brooded over it wistfully. Had they cared?

Still drowsing in the grip of old memories, Rockhill lay, as the daylight faded, half dreaming, half awake, when suddenly the sound of a voice in the next room brought him up with a start. A man was singing softly below his breath, but still quite distinguishably. Rockhill, clutching the bedclothes with shaking hands, tried to reason with himself. It was a dream, an illusion conjured up by fancy and fever. But the voice kept steadily on. There was no mistaking those clear, mellow tones. It was Tom's voice. Tom himself was singing in the next room.

Rockhill's dry lips tried to form a word. "Tom," he breathed, "Tom." But no sound came. A sudden unreasoning despair seized him. Tom was there, close to him, and he could not call him, could not attract his attention. He would go and Rockhill would be left alone again, this time forever. He must make Tom hear, he must. And then slowly, carefully, his voice breaking on the feeble notes, the man on the bed began to sing. Weak, barely audible, in phrasing and intonation the notes were yet a recognizable imitation of Tom singing his favorite song as he had sung it so often in those old days.

There was a stir in the next room, then the sound of the quickly opening and shutting of a door. The next moment Rockhill's own door flew open and on the threshold stood a man, tall, eager faced, with clear blue eyes.

"Tom!" cried Rockhill. "Tom!" And he fainted. When he recovered consciousness Tom, his eyes suspiciously bright, was kneeling by the bedside. He held Rockhill's two wasted hands tightly clasped in his own.

"Gilbert, old fellow," he was saying, "Gilbert, where have you kept yourself all these years?" he pursued, and his voice was tenderly reproachful. "How could you run off that way?"

Gilbert smiled in pure content at hearing the well known voice.

"I—oh, never mind me," he answered. "I was all right till I was taken ill in this confounded hole. But you, Tom—you," as if famished for news—"how did you come here and your wife"—his voice faltering on the word.

But Tom did not notice.

"Yes, my wife is with me," he said cheerily. "But how did you know that I was married? Oh, guessed," as the other nodded. "You must know, too, then, that I am now a celebrity," with a sudden seriousness. "No? You hadn't guessed that? Well, at least you were aware that I had taken up singing as my profession. Therefore I let myself be persuaded into coming to South America for a series of concerts. And so here I am," shrugging an amused shoulder. "But now you must tell me about yourself," he went on, his tone suddenly changing. "Why did you slip off so, Gilbert? Was it kind to leave us all these years without a word?"

The sick man hesitated. What he had done suddenly seemed to him unmanly and foolish. But at twenty-one heroics are sometimes strong in their appeal. And he had tried to do his best. It was all over now, though. The truth could do no harm now. He looked up into Tom's face.

"Do you remember the night after my return from college," he began slowly—"how we sat in your room and talked? I had come home feeling that at last I had accomplished something; that I was nearing the goal on which my eyes had been set since I could remember seeing anything. And then"—he paused again—"that night you told me of your love for Alice," he said quietly. "And in that moment I renounced my dream. Oh, don't mind," he added hastily as the other started. "It is all ended long ago. I should not tell were it not," lying manfully. "I have long since left that love behind. But, then, I felt that there was nothing for me but flight. And so"—

"And you sacrificed yourself for me?" cried Tom, deeply moved. "Oh, Gilbert!" But Gilbert stretched out a remonstrant hand.

"Dear old boy," he said tenderly, "was there ever anything that I could not have done for you? You loved her"—

"Yes," said Tom musingly, "I loved her. But now—you are sure that you have quite, quite forgotten"—with a sudden eagerness.

"Sure," returned the other with loyal lips. "I can meet her without a pang. And—and anyway I am going to die," he added faintly.

"Die!" shouted Tom. "Die! Not much. We will see what Mabel has to say about that."

"Mabel?" questioned Rockhill.

"Why, yes, my wife," laughed Tom. "Oh, of course, I forgot she was only a child when you went away. She is Alice's little sister."

"Alice's sister!" gasped Rockhill. Tom's face altered suddenly.

"Why—you didn't think—did you believe that I had married Alice?" he demanded. "You did?" He stopped. "Although I refused me," he went on a moment later. "She has never married. I think she never has cared but for one man," he said with slow significance. "Yet—if you have forgotten"—

The sick man, stirred by a sudden energy, sat up in bed.

"Give me my medicine, please," he said hastily. "I am going to get well. Where is Mabel?"

The Change in Disraeli's Name.

In the year 1872 the printing plant and effects of the late John Grundy (a successor in the business of Vine Hall, author of "The Sinner's Friend" and father of the late Rev. Newman Hall) of Bank street, Maidstone, were sold by auction, and after the sale, as an apprentice to John Grundy, I was employed in the clearing up process, during which I came across file and other copies of Conservative literature printed at that establishment in connection with the election by which Disraeli was returned one of the two members of parliament for Maidstone. Some of it had the name spelled Disraeli, but a roll of from a dozen to a score of copies of an election address bore the printed signature D'Israeli. I asked the overseer (Highstead, who was then elderly and had been continuously in employment in that establishment since boyhood days) for an explanation, and he said that when Disraeli came to examine a proof of his election address somebody suggested (the overseer's belief being that it came from Vine Hall) that the name would look more English-like if the apostrophe were taken out. Disraeli assented, and it came out, and in further printing work a like omission was observed.—John H. Burrows in Athenæum.

A trip around the world in 60 minutes at a mere trifle.

Laughable, interesting and exciting scenes from every land—A trip around the world at almost no cost.

Scores upon scores of people are daily taking advantage of our very liberal and decidedly interesting offer.

Magnificently finished and exquisitely photo-color views in place of the oldtime and antiquated views of the past. A most pleasant and interesting hour to spend journeying around the globe viewing the places of greatest interest, most beautiful scenery, etc., at a mere trifle of cost through our liberal plan. These views illustrate some of the most noted places in the world—mountain scenery both in America and Europe—waterfalls and other famous natural phenomena, some of the world's most famous buildings, places of historical interest and places famous for beautiful architecture or beautiful natural scenery. This set is of the greatest educational value, presenting, as it does, such realistic likenesses of scenes and places that we all should know about. We want every household in this city to have one of these sets. Imagine yourself taken through the Orient, on a trip to California, through the world's Fair to see the splendid scenes as though you were right there on the spot. By a special process, a combination of lithographing and half-tone work, we are able to offer a collection of colored views from every part of the world in the most beautiful, natural and startling life-like color effects, which must be seen to be appreciated. It is impossible to describe the grandeur and beauty of these views. Come and see them. We want each and every household in this city to have a set of these.

The most beautiful scenes from every land, among which are the following:

Yellow Stone Park, U. S. A.; The Swiss Alps; On board a Russian Man-of-War; Scene from a Klondyke Camp; The Famous Ferry Depot, San Francisco; Cathedral from the Grand Canal, Rotterdam; Moulin Rouge, Paris; Street Scene, Mexico City; Emperor Wm. II Inspecting a Regiment; Chickamauga Park; Cotton Plantation Scene; On the Pike at the World's Fair, St. Louis; Holiday Street Scene Parade in Havana, Cuba; Scene Showing a Public Well, Pekin, China; Lookout Mountain; Steamboat Scene on the Mississippi; Garden of Gethsemane, Palestine; Scene Showing the Famous Southern Trestle; Hauling Trains Through Mountains in the South; The National Capitol at Washington, D. C.; The Pantheon at Rome; Victory Monument; Leipsic; Luna Island at Niagara Falls; David's Judgment Seat, Jerusalem; Interior View of President Diaz' Palace, Mexico; Ostrich Farm, Egypt; Royal Gardens, Dresden, Germany; (very beautiful), Palm Garden, Frankfort, Germany; Morro Castle, Havana; Plaza, World's Fair, St. Louis; Bird's Eye View of St. Louis Exposition; The Tomb of Gen. Grant, N. Y., Street Scene of Cairo, Egypt; Street Scene in Venice, Italy; Japanese Royal Garden Scene; Zoological Garden at Berlin, Germany; Ice Cave at Niagara Falls, N. Y., etc., etc., besides dozens of comic, sentimental and interesting views of every nature. These pictures are the genuine Oleo Stereoscopic Views, made especially for this purpose and are executed in a most artistic manner, being a combination process of lithographing and half-tone work enabling a magnificent depth of detail and splendid color reproduction true to life. You cannot enjoy an hour more delightfully than by viewing a set of these beautiful and decidedly interesting pictures.

It wasn't so very long ago that hundreds of thousands of people spent many pleasant hours with the stereoscope, but heretofore they were compelled to pay enormous prices for views, think of it, as high as 50c each for colored pictures. We sold thousands upon thousands of stereoscopic views, in colors, at 50c each in those days, but imagine each and every view had to be colored by hand. In the past few months we have had repeated demands for them, and being able to secure the latest and most beautiful colored views to furnish to the public at a ridiculously low price, we entered into the stereoscope plan on quite a large scale, and have taken immediate advantage of the International Art Association, who have spent an enormous amount of money to get out special color plates and have finally completed their end, namely: To place on the market thousands of magnificent stereoscopic views, the most beautiful, interesting and exciting scenes from every land, in the grandest and most exquisite natural colors.

Now we come to our great special offer. Read our plan carefully as it describes the stereoscope and tells how to secure the scope and views at almost no cost to you.

First the stereoscope. The Stereoscope is our world-famous "Aluminum Crystal Lens" Stereoscope. Genuine aluminum hood, bound with dark rich red velvet. Frame is of fine finished cherry wood with patent folding handle, folding underneath frame, and sliding bar. The lenses are extra fine quality, selected for clearness and brilliancy, 1¼ inches in diameter, ground from best quality glass and carefully adjusted. This Crystal Lens Aluminum "Scope" has won universal praise from lovers of the beautiful, and as a means of entertainment stands second to nothing.

OFFER No. 1 The Stereoscope and 25 beautiful Colored Views and THE DAILY TIMES for one year, for $4.00

OFFER No. 2 The Stereoscope and 25 beautiful Colored Views and THE WEEKLY TIMES for one year, for $2.50

CARGO REMOVED FROM BAVARIAN

Investigation Ordered by Gov't Will Commence To-morrow

Quebec, Nov. 16.—The Government steamer Canadienne arrived here last night, with Mr. Andrew Allan and twenty Montreal laborers, who are being returned to their homes. All the cargo that can be possibly saved at present has been lightered from the Bavarian into small craft and brought to Quebec.

The investigation ordered by the Department of Marine and Fisheries will be commenced to-morrow in this city, under the presidency of Hon. Chief Justice Routhier, who will be associated with him Commander Seale and the sailing master of the Second Squadron, who is due to arrive this evening from New York.

The Government will be represented by Mr. A. Gilmour, advocate of this city, with Mr. Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice, as counsel. Messrs. A. H. Dyde and C. Pentland, K.C., will represent the Messrs. Allans, and Mr. F. E. Meredith, K.C., the Canadian Shipping Confederation. Considerable public interest is manifested in the outcome of the investigation, which is expected to reveal a state of affairs that will call for legislation in the interest of the St. Lawrence route.

Indemnity Bill Condemned

Port Hope, November 17.—At a meeting of the Port Hope Conservative Association, Mr. Jas. McLean, ex-president, introduced a resolution condemning the bill put through at the last session of Parliament, which provided increased indemnities to members and pensions to ex-ministers. The resolution was unanimously carried.

Gold Bug Stock

Has been withdrawn from the market by the Company. There is none of it for sale except a small block on which I have an option. This stock is now pooling at 25 cents per share. 100 shares will cost you $25.00. In my judgment it will sell for 60 cents per share on the open market inside of 60 days. The papers of Oregon say that the rich find of ore in the Gold Bug mine is the greatest sensation known in the State in many months. Hon. George A. Newman, Assistant adjutant General of Iowa, has just been to Sumpter, visited the Gold Bug, bought heavily of the stock, and on his return tells me it has the finest ore and is the best looking property he saw any place in the West.

I give Bank references, the very best. I sell every share of this stock on honor. If you want 100 shares send $25.00 to the Mechanics' Savings Bank, Des Moines, telling them to turn the money over to me when I deliver the stock, to be sent to you. If you want 1,000 shares you send $200. Everything about the Gold Bug is legitimate. It is now one of the richest mines of the North-West. We think that the first dividends will be paid in January or February, 1906, and you will see this stock selling at $1.50 per share on the open market in less than one year. Five strong veins, much of the ore liberally sprinkled with free gold. Let me tell you about it more in detail. Address,

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS

DASHES HERE AND THERE BY TIMES' REPORTERS.

Will Live in Cuba.

Dr. J. W. Berry, of Hastings, well known in Peterboro, with his wife and family, accompanied by Miss Powlds, Mrs. (Dr.) Berry's sister, leave next week for Havana, Cuba, where they will reside in future. They have joined the Canadian colony in the land of sunshine.

Children's Aid Society Needs Funds

The Children's Aid Society one of Peterboro's most commendable charities, which is the direct means of making respectable and responsible citizens out of boys and girls, that without the society's fostering care would have gone to the bad, is out of funds. Here is a good opportunity for those with money oozing to do good during the approaching Christmas season.

Rev. Dr. Symonds Here

Rev. Dr. Symonds, the eloquent Anglican minister arrived last night per C.P.R. express from Montreal.

Mr. Symonds is the guest of Mr. G. F. Ward, east side of Sunday. At the morning service he will preach at St. Luke's, and in the evening at St. John's church. The rev. gentleman will deliver a lecture in the Y.M.C.A. Hall on Monday evening. This is a good opportunity for those enjoying an eloquent and instructive sermon or lecture to avail themselves of so good an opportunity. Rev. J. C. Davidson, rector of St. John's church met Mr. Symonds at the depot.

Mr. Clerk's Patriotism

Mr. Fred A. Clark, the George street furrier is not only a thorough bred sportsman himself, but yesterday demonstrated the fact that he is ready and able to assist local clubs in any case the club's patronage to victory. He has most generously supplied the local rugby team with handsome and serviceable white and blue toques for their fight with the Dundas team to-day. The locals are thoroughly appreciative of Mr. Clarke's kindness. It is such acts of patriotism and evidence of interest in Peterboro's representatives abroad that engenders a deep seated love for our city, and creates a good name for us abroad.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

—Mr. T. H. Crowley went to Bancroft yesterday.

—Miss Hunt, Cobourg, was in the city yesterday.

—Mr. George Bonner of Galt, was in the city on Thursday.

—Dr. Malcolm McCullough, of the Central Ontario Medical Association's meeting on Thursday evening, read a most interesting and instructive paper on examination of the blood in relation to diagnosis of Disease.

—Yesterday Messrs. Thorn & Co., the Charlotte street plumbers, had a member of the firm out distributing an elegant souvenir adv. of that progressive and hustling concern. It consisted of a nice looking wall match scratcher, to hang on parlor or other walls of private or public edifices.

—Mr. D. Bellegham yesterday morning drove his private ambulance out to Ennismore. His trip was to bring in to St. Joseph's Hospital Mr. P. Phelan, who is ill with typhoid fever. It will be remembered by our readers that this young man's father, died in St. Joseph's Hospital about two weeks ago. We trust soon to hear of Mr. Phelan's recovery.

SHIFT

If Your Food Fails to Sustain You: Change

One sort of diet may make a person despondent, depressed and blue and a change to the kind of food the body demands will change the whole thing.

A young woman from Phila. says:

"For several years I kept in a rundown miserable sort of condition, was depressed and apprehensive of trouble. I went from bad to distressing way and seemed in a perpetual sort of dreamy night mare. No one organic disease showed, but the 'all-over' sickness was enough.

"Finally between the doctor and father I was put on Grape-Nuts and cream as it was decided I must have nourishing food that the body could make use of.

"The wonderful change that came over me was not, like Jonah's gourd, the growth of a single night, and yet it came with a rapidity that astonished me. During the first week I gained several pounds in weight, my spirits improved, and the world began to look brighter and more worth while. And this has continued steadily, till now, after the use of Grape-Nuts for only a few weeks, I am perfectly well, feel splendidly, take a lively interest in everything, and am a changed person in every way."

FIRE AT CAMPBELLFORD

Mr. Ernest Cassan Loses His Barns by Fire

Campbellford, Nov. 17.—The barns and outbuildings of Ernest Cassan, a farmer near Campbellford, were totally destroyed by fire Thursday night, with all the five stock, including twenty cows, seven horses, a number of hogs and fowl; the season's crop of grain, farm implements, vehicles, etc.

Whilst full particulars were not available yesterday, The Times entertained that Mr. Cassan's loss will approximate $7,000, whilst his insurance only amounts to about $1300 to $1400.

No particulars were yesterday ascertainable as to the origin of this disastrous fire.

Entertaining Fiction

One advantage of reading a serial story in a daily newspaper is that an installment of convenient length is received every day that does not consume an undue amount of the reader's time. An instalment of a high grade serial story appears in every issue of the Chicago Record-Herald, a popular feature of that enterprising Chicago daily. Among the successful stories which have recently been enjoyed by Record-Herald readers are "Soldiers of Fortune," by Richard Harding Davis; "The Thrall of Lief the Lucky," by Ottilie Liljencrantz; "Trilrose of Blest," by Anthony Hope; "When Knighthood Was in Flower," by Charles Major; "Alice of Old Vincennes," by Maurice Thompson, and "Graustark," by George B. McCutcheon. Every issue contains also a short illustrated "human interest" story on the editorial page. Readers of the Record-Herald can depend upon a never-failing source of pleasant entertainment in the noteworthy fiction that is always to be found in its columns.

Keep Yourself Neat

For the benefit of our bachelor or married male readers, we would respectfully call their attention to the adv. of Mr. W. Fowler, on page 6, whom we can recommend as an all round expert of the needle. As may be seen by Mr. Fowler's adv. he keeps a first-class line of tweeds and cloths in stock and is prepared and well qualified to build suits of the latest fashions to order at most reasonable rates. Mr. Fowler makes a specialty of repairing and can take an old overcoat or suit and, by his experienced handling of needle and pressing iron, turn out old goods looking like new. He has the experience of a thoroughly English training and up-to-date knowledge.

BODY DISCOVERED

Last Mortal Remains of Late Miss Grice Found

Adverting to our report of yesterday's issue, respecting the sad fatality, whereby the late Chief of Police Bond of Port Hope, and his sister-in-law Miss Grice, lost their lives by drowning.

A telegram has been received from Mr. Alf. George, stating that the body of Miss Grice had been recovered, and that a party were busily engaged dragging for the remains of the late Chief Bond. Mr. George at the time was just leaving Haliburton for the scene of the accident, which was fifteen miles north. We learn that the accident occurred at Crooked Lake and not at Eagle Lake as first reported. The party in the skiff at the time were the late Chief Bond, the late Miss Grice and Mr. Peterson, of Harboro, and the accident occurred at the head of the lake, fifteen miles north of Haliburton.

Mr. Peterson, who was the only member of the party saved, was very weak when he reached the shore and is unable to give a clear account of the accident. What can be learned from his story is that he endeavored to save Miss Grice and succeeded in carrying her until only a short distance from shore. This of course has not been verified.

Chief Bond's two brothers, one a member of the detective force of Toronto and the other engaged on the Toronto Street Railway, went out to Haliburton yesterday morning. The first intimation they had of the accident was through the press on Thursday.

MASON'S FLOWERS

Splendid Display of Flowers Now Made by Mr. F. Mason

Those who are dubious what to spend their money on for a small or large Christmas present, would make no mistake in buying a mother, sister, friend or sweetheart a fine basket or suitable plants for house decorations.

Mr. Frank Mason, Peterboro's veteran florist, in his new and commodious quarters at the corner of Water and Brock streets, is now prepared to supply his customers and the general public with everything in the flower line, from a hand bouquet, bridal bouquet, mourning wreaths or any floral design to any assortment of plants for window or house decorations.

Those wanting anything in flowers or plants, can call at Mason's George street display store or at the green house, corner of Water and Brock streets.

Mr. Mason has the most complete display of flowers, bulbs and plants, to be found outside the largest cities. Look for his adv. in next Saturday's and succeeding issues of The Times.

St. Railway Gets New Snow Plough

Yesterday morning the Peterboro Radial Railway Company received a wing plow, which will be used this winter on the streets. It will be used to follow the street sweeper, and will take the place of the scraper which was used last winter. After every storm the company found it necessary to engage the city grader, and teams, to level the snow swept out by the sweeper. It is intended that this new plow will do the work formerly performed by the grader. The machine is at the C.P.R. station and will be unloaded and placed in the car barns, preparatory to its being fitted up for use.

C. P. R. Hotel Improvements

As noted in The Times a few days ago, Mr. J. Allen has recently purchased a half interest in the C.P.R. Hotel, Simcoe street. The present proprietors, Messrs. Rickerby & Allen, have made quite a change in the interior of the hotel. A partition entirely separating the bar from a large back room has been introduced. Mr. John Rickerby, the popular former proprietor of this hotel, had previous to the return of Mr. Allen into co-partnership, worked up a large clientele which, judging by present appearances will likely eventuate.

Miss Alicia Newell

Prominent Charity Worker A Victim of La Grippe.

PRAISES PE-RU-NA.

Miss Alicia Newell, 6 Stanley street, Montreal, Can., charter member Societe Francais Bienfaisance, writes:

"We had a siege of la grippe in the family and I, as well as some of my friends, was a victim to the malady.

"Three bottles of Peruna assisted me to perfect recovery and some of my friends regained their health by using even less.

"La grippe, as a rule, leaves one debilitated and nervous, but I noticed in every case where Peruna was used, the recovery was not only complete, but the medicine itself seemed to infuse new life and vigor."

La grippe is acute epidemic catarrh. In many instances it leaves the mucous membranes lining various organs of the body in an inflamed and catarrhal condition. Peruna at once cures this condition.

THE TIMES CHEERED.

Ottawa Rugby Football Team Pass Through the City

Yesterday evening as the C.P.R. express passed through the city en route to Toronto from Montreal and Ottawa, a merry crowd of young fellows were found by a Times representative to be occupying a private and specially reserved car.

When the train pulled into the C.P.R. depot, the young men, members and friends of the Ottawa Rugby team, tumbled out onto the local platform to get a brief glimpse of Peterboro.

The Times man, of course, as soon as the Ottawa's historic "yell" subsided for a moment, proceeded to get busy interviewing the enthusiastic pig skin pushers.

Capt. Joe Gleason, with great affability stated that the Ottawa boys were on their way to Toronto where they will "Measure swords" if we might be pardoned the expression, with the Varsity club.

Among the Ottawa players, was a gentleman well known here, Mr. McCue, son of Senator of that name, who is well known here.

On learning that the newspaper men represented The Times, the players formed a ring about him and gave, first "Varsity, Rah, Rah, Rah, and then Reporter of The Times, Rah, Rah, Rah. This was explained by the fact that Mr. McCue knew the paper well as an ardent advocate of all sports and our willingness to leave its columns open at all times, to further every class of field or athletic sports.

MORE SMALLPOX CASES

Guards Now Stationed Along Affected Locality at Methuen

And now smallpox has broken out in Methuen township, in the Carnell settlement. This locality is situated about 30 miles almost due north of Havelock. Dr. Hubbardt, an M.D. qualified, at once drove out and investigated the report sent him. The investigation proved that there were seven recently developed cases, two in a family by the name of Hingman and five among the Carroll family.

By a strange perversion of common sense and responsibility towards their neighbors, and surrounding towns and villages, there has been a criminal attempt to suppress the truth. Guards are now stationed to keep the affected locality in quarantine.

Congratulations Mr. Salisbury

It was generally reported through out the city yesterday that Mr. Wm. Salisbury has been appointed to a position in Toronto in the License Department, and that he will remove to that city in a short time to take up the duties of his new position. Mr. T. H. Henderson, M.P.P., was asked as to the truth of the part that he had been appointed to the position, and he stated that he believed the appointment had been made.

Members of 57th Can Get Paid

Major Dennistoun, paymaster of the 57th Regiment, has returned from his hunting trip, and yesterday told The Times that the men of the 57th Regiment can get their officers pay at the Bank of Ottawa at any time now. He also wishes to inform them that they must be identified at the bank the same as if they were cashing a cheque.

Oats Goes Up in Price

The American Cereal Company, who have been paying 25 cents per bushel for oats, yesterday announced that they had advanced the price to 26 cents. The farmers are bringing in large loads and it is expected the deliveries from this out will be heavy.

Your Last Opportunity Will Soon Pass.

We have had an advertisement in The Times several days giving some facts about the BIG CASINO MINES, but some people seem to think it impossible for so good an investment to be offered in Peterboro.

We will give $500.00 to anyone who will disprove one of the following statements

The Big Casino Mines are located at Big Oak Flat, Tuolumne County, California, on the great "Mother Lode."

We have 276 acres of ground. Have been developing and equipping the property more than three years and a half. Have spent over $200,000.00 on the property.

We have 10,000 feet of underground work done. Have a very large amount of good ore blocked out ready to break down and mill, and have more ore in our property than can be mined out in two or three life times.

We have apparently inexhaustible bodies of good ore. We also have ore that will mill $1,000.00 per ton.

We have a modern 20 stamp mill in good condition, to which we propose to add 30 stamps as soon as possible. With 50 stamps we will pay $30,000.00 to $40,000.00 per month in dividends. $30,000.00 per month will be 2 cents per share per month, or 48 per cent. on the money you invest in the stock at 50 cents per share.

We will lay aside a sinking fund to double the capacity of the mill, making 100 stamps which we propose to put in inside of the next twelve months, then your dividends should every year be at least equal to your investment.

$250.00 and two weeks' time should cover every expense of a trip to the mines, so that you can personally examine them and have the opportunity of disproving the above facts and get the $500.00.

Are you satisfied with interest or would you prefer profits like those we have told you the Big Casino will pay?

Your money is no safer in real estate, in the bank or anywhere else, than invested in Big Casino stock.

Four years ago Calumet, of Arizona, sold at $1.00 per share to raise money to develop and equip the mines. Certain people said it can't be any good or it would all be taken up out there; but they sold their stock and developed the mine, and paid their first dividend on Dec. 15th, 1903. The dividend was $2.00 per share, just twice what the stock cost, and they paid $10.00 per share last year, and will pay their last quarterly dividend for this year next month, which will make $10.00 per share this year, and the stock is quoted on the open markets of the world at $115.00 to $120 per share.

Granite Mountain stock was sold in St. Louis at 10 cents per share, and in 18 months after their mill started the stock was worth $72.00 per share in the open market and paid the St. Louis stockholders $18,000,000.00 in dividends during the next three years.

Neither of the above named mines gave more promise of making the wonderful producer they have proved to be, at the same stage of development, than the Big Casino does at present.

The directors of the Big Casino know their stock, based on the ore developed and equipment of the property, would be cheap at par, $1.00 per share, and will advance the price to $1.00 Nov. 25th, if not sooner. Right to advance the price to $1.00 any day is reserved, and the 25th is positively the last day you can buy the stock for less than $1.00 per share.

The Big Casino is a developed mine, and we will make one of the large dividend payers of the State of California out of it if we never sold a share of stock, for we can get all the money out of the mine to add to the mill, and it would only delay dividends a little longer.

The Big Casino will become a permanent dividend payer early in the coming year, and should pay not less than 24 per cent. on your investment at 50 cents per share the first year.

Remember the price may advance any day, and there will be none offered you for less than $1.00 per share after the 25th.

Yours truly,

GEO. L. PORTER,

Peterboro, Ont., Nov. 14th, 1903.

P. S.—See me at the White House.

AN AMERICAN DISEASE

Indigestion is Responsible for More Sickness in America Than Any Other Disease.

Some doctors go so far as to say that indigestion is the national disease of America. Repeated attacks inflame the lining of the stomach and cause the glands to secrete mucous in stead of the juice of natural digestion. Consequently the blood is poisoned, nerve force is reduced, the vitality of the entire system is weakened.

There is but one national remedy for indigestion and that remedy is Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are being used by thousands with marvellous success.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills accelerate the action of the gastric glands and give tone to the digestive organs. They strengthen the kidneys and liver, cleanse and purify the blood, and thus add general tone to every organ of the body. Flesh and strength are fast restored and the patient can eat and digest any food he pleases.

Under the vitalizing effect of Dr. Hamilton's Pills your system will soon rally; once more you'll enjoy the blessings of health. Test Dr. Hamilton's Pills yourself. 25c. per box or five boxes for $1; at all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., and Kingston, Ont.

A Fine Lot of Deer.

The Eagle Lake Hunt Club yesterday had on view, in front of Westlake's city butcher shop, corner of George and Brock streets, the result of their recent hunting expedition. The party killed nine deer, whose weights, dressed, made a splendid average, although some of them were of exceptional size. One of the bucks, weighing 183 pounds, had a grand pair of antlers. The respective weights of the deer were: 117, 131, 150, 154, 164, 143, 143, 183, and 120 pounds each. This is a great showing. The party had eaten one fine buck whilst out at Eagle Lake.

Rugby Club's Excursion to Hamilton.

The Rugby Club will run an excursion from Peterboro, via Canadian Pacific, to Hamilton, on Saturday, Nov. 18th, leaving on the regular train leaving Peterboro; there by special from Toronto to Hamilton. Returning, special train leaves Hamilton at 6.15 p.m. for Toronto, thence to Peterboro by regular train leaving Toronto at 10 p.m. Fare for the round trip $3.40. All tickets good to return any regular train until Monday, Nov. 20th.

Probably This Isn't True.

A young newspaper man, so The Times is informed, was recently invited to a residence where the home had lately been blessed with an addition to the family. Accompanied by his best girl, he met his kind hostess at the door, and, after the customary salutations, asked about the welfare of the baby. The lady was suffering from a severe cold, which made her slightly deaf, and she supposed the young man was enquiring about her cold. She replied that though she usually had one every winter, this was the worst one she had ever had; it had kept her awake at night a great deal at first, and confined to her bed. Then, noticing that the scribe was becoming pale about the gills, she said she could see by his looks that he was going to have one just like hers.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured.

with Local Applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrh. Send for testimonials free.

A BEAR STORY

A Civic Official Goes Gunning After a Brush Pile.

The Eagle Lake hunting party, who returned Thursday night, have many stories of adventure by field and lake to relate.

One that bears repetition involves a prominent civic official, whose name we will not divulge, but simply call him "Tom" for short.

Tom, on returning from the day's hunt, on arrival at the lodge, discovered fresh bear tracks quite close to their place of abode. He at once filled the magazine of his Winchester and followed the bear tracks for about two miles without success. To use his own words: "The bear ran faster than I did."

That afternoon the boys put up a job on Tom. On the roof of the nearby little shanty, where provisions were stored, they piled a lot of brushwood. To this they attached a trolling line, reaching to and through the lodge window.

After the party had retired to bed that night, Tom, which was unusual during hunting trips, became hungry and made a quick slide for the provision depot, clad in his sleeping apparel. As he was about to open the door, he was startled to hear a scraping, scratching noise near-by. "The bear" he ejaculated, as he rushed back to the lodge for his rifle. The cook of the party, also attired in pajamas, grabbed up the lighted lantern and started to help Tom look for the bear. The two sleuths crept carefully towards the provision cache, armed with their guns.

The scraping sound once more broke forth. Tom sneaked through the bushes to the provision shed, his rifle at full cock. He crept completely round the shed and still did not see the bear. Again the scraping was heard.

"Say," said Tom, "you climb up on the roof and chase that —— bear off, so that I can get a shot at him." "Not in a hundred years," answered the cook. They decided to chase away the brushwood, dragged at intervals by the trolling line by those in the secret, by firing sticks and rocks at it. At last Tom tumbled over the trolling line and consequently "on to the racket."

HARD TO PLEASE

This Great Family Journal Runs Against a Snag.

That you can't please some people was demonstrated the other day by this great family journal. A man called to see the editor; he had a roll of manuscript in his hands. He asked us to look it over, remarking:

"Here is some trivial stuff I have just dashed off. You know it is entirely out of my line to write anything, but once in a while I think I strike a good idea. Still, I know my stuff has its weak spots. Of course it is an imposition on you to ask you to waste your time on it, but I'd like you to give me an honest opinion on it. Not much to it, of course, but then I'd——"

We stopped him by taking the manuscript and looking over it. Then this g. f. j. remembered the old axiom that the way to please people is to agree with what they say, so we told him: "Yes it is some trivial stuff, and you have just dashed it off, as you say. It is entirely out of your line to write anything, but once in a while you think you have struck a good idea. You know that the stuff has its weak spots. It is an imposition on this g. f. j. to ask us to waste our time on it, but——"

But by that time he had snatched his manuscript and was rushing out with his hat jabbed down over his eyes. Even when you agree with people you cannot please them.

The Girls Get Together.

A well known society chap evolved a fine scheme to jolly up the numerous girls he took riding, one at a time, in his new turnout. In speaking to his driving mare, he would incidentally call her by the name of the girl he had out that time.

"Why did you name her that?" each girl would ask.

"After you, my dear," was always his reply.

This jollied the girl. The chap was getting along swimmingly until five or six of the girls met at a party the other night. Now the stuff is all off with him.

MASKED

An Enemy Masquerades as Friend.

It seemed almost incredible to the lady who writes from Clintonville, Conn., that coffee caused the physical ailments from which she had so long suffered.

In such cases the real cause is often the one least suspected, and one is loth to believe that the mask of friendship has hidden the face of a relentless foe.

"I had suffered much for years from nervous troubles which finally so affected me that my whole system was run down, I grew pale and emaciated and had to practically give up domestic duties. The doctor did his best with me, but after 3 years faithful ministration was compelled to admit that he had done me no good. I almost despaired of ever being any better.

"September, 1902, will never be forgotten by me, for it was in that month that my emancipation, accomplished through the use of Postum Food Coffee after I had entirely quit the old kind, commenced. I shall always remember the date with gratitude.

"My improvement was a cause of wondering—almost incredulous rejoicing, to not only myself but my friends as well, so rapid and so great was it. I positively feared it would not last. My nerves quieted down and became steady and firm, the old headaches that used to follow any extra exertion ceased to trouble me, my weight increased and soon became greater than ever before, my mental powers grew more active and accurate, and the fresh glow came back to my cheeks, renewing the complexion of healthy girlhood.

"I cannot tell you how glad I was at the splendid change that Postum wrough tin my condition, nor how I prize it for the good it continues to do me. We were out of it for a week or so not long ago and used the old kind of coffee instead, for several days. All my bad symptoms began to return to trouble me, and it seemed like an old friend back again when I found the cup of Postum once more smoking and fragrant, on the board. It is food and drink to me." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason.

DENIED ENGAGEMENT

Well Dressed Lady Brings Marriage License to Times Sanctum.

A stylishly attired, handsome young woman waled into the Times' Office yesterday and approaching one of the staff, handed him a duly made out marriage license, saying: "What had I better do with this? It never should have been issued in the first place, and the man who secured it had no right to do so. I am not engaged to him, never was engaged to him and wouldn't marry him under any circumstances." Then the young woman walked out.

The Times' man, being naturally bashful, felt greatly relieved when the vision of injured dignity had disappeared up George street. The lady herself wanted the Times' man to publish the circumstance and had further informed him that if he did not tell about it she would go to the evening papers herself and see that it was published.

However, not knowing what state of muscular development the gentleman involved might possess, the Times' man decided to delay publication until the Fighting Editor recovers from his last dispute, and is on deck again.

SMALLPOX IN METHUEN

Seven New Cases Reported in Back Country.

That a very serious outbreak of smallpox has taken place, is beyond doubt. The Havelock Standard says:

The smallpox outbreak in Chandos, is responsible for seven more cases in the north end of Methuen township, at the Carroll settlement, about thirty miles north of this place. Dr. Jos. Holdcroft, medical health officer, was notified on Saturday that new cases had developed in that vicinity and he investigated the matter on Sunday and found seven new cases, two in the Dingman family and five in the Carroll family. In the Carroll family members had been sick as long as five weeks ago, and had refrained from reporting the fact, owing to dislike of being quarantined. Other members of the same family, with the disease plainly showing on their face and hands, assisted last week at the raising of a mill frame for Mr. F. Hart. In the Dingman family the same criminal negligence was found. Both cases have been running for over a month and they were trying to keep the matter quiet. A fence has been erected across the road at Oak Lake and another at the Carrol Settlement, and guards will see that no one is allowed egress or ingress to the infected district.

A Successful Sportsman.

The Hastings Star says: The best day's shoot that has been made around these parts in many a day was that scored by Mr. A. B. Spellman, proprietor of the Clarendon House, on Saturday morning, when, after a two hours' outing he returned home with eighteen partridge. On the afternoon of the same day our scribe noticed a fine buck hanging in front of Riendeau's butcher shop and upon inquiry learned that "Hec" had been out with A. A. and the deer was his luck. "Miss Host" Spellman says if he had had time he would have cleaned out all the partridge, but the most of the time he did have was taken up in letting the barrel of the gun cool off.

Found His Watch.

Hastings Star: While fishing off the boom above the dam in Hastings on August 23rd last, Mr. H. C. Castle lost a very valuable watch. Several attempts made to recover it at the time were unsuccessful and not till Tuesday was the watch recovered. On Tuesday, Mr. A. Northy, who has been doing the "underwater" work of the repairing of the bridge pier, donned his outfit and after a few minutes' work was rewarded for his trouble.

The Russian Empire Crumbling to Pieces

London, November 21. — That the whole Russian Empire is in a seething state of revolt, is no longer denied. The most sensational reports come from St. Petersburg regarding the situation throughout the empire. A special to the Morning Post says that the Czar and family are preparing for flight, if they have not already gone. For some time German warships have been close by for the purpose of affording means of escape for the royal family.

All indications are that the men at the head of Russian affairs are thoroughly alarmed lest the loosening of the central authority will lead to the disintegration of the empire. Russia is like a house of blocks, and shows a similar tendency to fall to pieces when thrown off its equilibrium. The German Empire rests largely upon racial kinship, and the British Empire —outside of India—is bound together by the same powerful cement. But if there were no authority at St. Petersburg, there are important sections of the Russian Empire—which rests chiefly upon conquest—which would automatically set up independent governments for themselves.

This probably accounts for the revival of the central power pending the establishment of a government based upon the suffrages of the middle class. They feel that they cannot, for national reasons, afford just yet to throw the reins upon the neck of the horses. Against this revival the revolutionists are protesting, naturally seeing in it a breach of faith. But there seem to be evidences that the moderates, who really hold the casting vote as yet, are inclined to stand by the Government for the present.

It is unfortunate that the legitimate aspirations of Poland cannot be granted as readily as were those of Finland. There could be no fear in this case of the dismemberment of the empire. Polish autonomy could never lead to Polish independence. The united forces of Germany and Austria are pledged against it. Doubly unfortunate is that the men in authority cannot now sacrifice everything else to winning the confidence of their own people. Once that were secure, then the outlying sections of the empire could be saved oy a united Russia. A revolutionary government would not take more kindly to dismemberment than any other, as we may call that of France or that of Cromwell to witness. They would grant autonomy, of course, as a matter of principle; but, as every British colony can testify, autonomy will strengthen rather than weaken the bonds of empire.

PRESENTATION MADE

Orillia Methodist Church Gives Handsome Presents to Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Johnson on their leaving for Peterborough.

Referring to a family that has just been added to our city, the Orillia Packet says;

"Mr. G. W. Johnson's family is removing to Peterboro this week. They will be greatly missed in this community. May the blessing of the Most High rest upon them in their new home, is the prayer of their co-workers in the Master's vineyard here.

"Previous to their leaving the members and friends of the Methodist church tendered a farewell and presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Johnston, Or behalf of the congregation, Mr. C. Quibell and Miss Nellie Roberts presented Mr. and Mrs. Johnston with a handsome mantle clock finished in bronze and marble, and a silver card tray inlaid with gold; and Mrs. Waugh on behalf of the Ladies' Aid, in which Mrs. Johnston has been a earnest worker, presented her with a fine linen set. An address was read by Mr. Mark Vasey, descriptive of their regret at the family leaving and wishing them every happiness in their new home. The address was signed on behalf of the congregation by Mrs. C. Quibell, Mrs. M. Vasey, Mrs. A. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Johnston made appropriate replies."

Mrs. Johnston is a sister of the Hon. G. A. Cox, Toronto.

THE ICE HARVEST?

Board of Health Say No More Ice From Little Lake Must Be Used.

A meeting of the local Board of Health was held on Saturday morning to consider a report sent by the Toronto health authorities, on samples of water sent from our Little Lake, where the icemen get all their ice in the winter, to Toronto. A good portion of sewage from this city empties into Little Lake and the water there is very bad. Such was the report from the analyst in Toronto, and now the guardians of the city's health are considering what is best to do. There is no doubt in the minds of the members but what the practice of using the Little Lake ice is very dangerous, but what is worrying them is where to the next place to get pure ice.

The following is the report on the water;—

Dr. Bingham, M.H.O.,
Peterboro.

Dear Sir,—Your specimen of water from the proposed ice supply pond arrived here on N.v. 4th, 1905.

It shows color-bacilli, intestinal bacteria, in one cubic centimeter quantities. This means that they are present in a dangerous quantity. Water so infected should not be used for ice production, when the ice is to go into either food or drink. It is not surprising that this infection does exist with the drainage into the creek or lake that does take place. Without analysis this condition alone should condemn the source.

Yours truly,
JOHN A. AMYOTT.

Mr. J. F. Allin of the Allin Ice Co., who is greatly interested in Little Lake ice, was present and discussed the question with the members of the Board. As one means of overcoming the difficulty, Mr. Allin suggested the company placing padlocks on every ice box in the city and the company hold the keys. This would prevent, he thought, the consumers from taking chunks of ice to put in tea, water, milk and other drinks.

Several places including Stony and Clear-ing lakes, were discussed as being likely grounds for the ice harvests.

Finally the Board decidedt o adjourn until Thursday morning at 9.30. In the meantime a further investigation will be made. All icemen or others interested in this question, who have anything to say, will be given a hearing at the meeting next Thursday.

TO TRAVEL AND SEE THE WORLD

And Then Settle in the State of California.

HEIRS OF GEORGE THE IV.

This is What They Will do With Their Enormous Fortune.

Chicago, November 18.—To travel and see the world leisurely and thoroughly and then a home in California. This is what Mrs. James L. Ord, wife of the Chicagoan who is a direct descendant of George IV., of England, and his wife, Mrs. Fitzherbert, is planning in the event the heirs secure restitution of the enormous fortune in England, claimed to be rightfully theirs. Mrs. Ord was a Miss Maud Warren and a belle of Santa Cruz, Cal., before her marriage. She is a beautiful woman of about 25 years.

"I would rather be queen of my flat, with the present responsibilities and the love of my husband, than the Queen of England, responsibilities which I could not meet," she said today.

"Of course the family, all the heirs, intend to take steps to obtain the fortune. We have known all the time that the proofs existed. Mr. Ord has two cousins who live in London, Mrs. Reginald Brooks and Mrs. Allen Messer, the daughters of Mrs. Holladay, of San Francisco. Mrs. Brooks was, before her second marriage, a Mrs. Blackwell, whose husband was a member of the firm of Crosse & Blackwell. They will be right on the ground to attend to the details.

"The legal processes will undoubtedly be long. In the meantime we shall keep on living just as we have always lived, and we'll be perfectly happy. I've noticed that wealth does not always bring happiness. Sometimes it has taken it away.

"The only happiness this wealth can bring me will be in the power it will give me to do good to others."

ATHLETIC WORLD

BY OUR SPORTING EDITOR

RUGBY.

The Peterboro Rugby team accompanied by over one hundred supporters, left Saturday morning for Hamilton and Dundas. The team lined up as follows:—

Back—Ford.
Halves—Quinlan, Shaw, Mathews.
Quarter—Gillespie.
Centre,—Hurtubise.
Inside wings—Dixon, Craig.
Middle wings—Regan, McDonald.
Outsides—Orough, Gilbert.
Scrum—Fitzpatrick, Hall.

Although handicapped by Crowley's absence the boys were confident of winning the game, or at the worst of keeping the score down, and in this latter object they were right, as the game ended a tie, 4-4.

As the play off will take place here next Saturday, with the local's heavy lead now in hand, its dollars to cancelled postage stamps that Peterboro gets the championship. A tremendous crowd from Hamilton went out to see the game.

T.A.S. SMOKER.

The program for the T.A.S. smoker was arranged on Friday night by the Program Committee. The principal bout will be a handicap match between "Gene" Hurtubuise and W. Grady. Hurtubuise agreeing to throw Grady twice in half an hour. W. O'Toole and Harry Donovan will box for six rounds. There will be a buck and wing and jig dancing by J. Callaghan and "Dave" Quinlan. Selections will be rendered by Mr. Ed. Hickey, the well known local mouth organ soloist. Mandolin solos, clog dancing by a four-year-old marvel and several athletic contests other than those mentioned will be on the bill. Mr. Geo. Schneider will preside at the piano.

This will be one of the best smokers ever held in Peterboro and the performance should be well patronized. The date of the concert is the 22nd of this month.

THE TURF.

Mr. Geo. Liggett has sold his splendid three-year-old iron grey colt to Mr. Whysler, the east side butcher. The colt is about 15 1-2 hands in height and gives promise of being a good one. Mr. Whysler has a splendid mate for it and pair should make one of the best matched teams in the city. Trainer Quinn has been engaged to break in the recently purchased colt both single and with the other horse.

THE CIVIL SERVICE EXAMS

Three Hundred Candidates Writing at Capital—Stiff Papers.

Ottawa, November 18. — It is likely that a smaller percentage of those trying the civil service examinations this year will be successful than in other years. The examination this year is said to be much harder than usual. The reason assigned for the change this year is that the government officials find that too many annually pass the examinations and that many who qualified even according to the examinations were not fit for civil service positions. The idea is to lessen the number of those who qualify by raising the standard of efficiency. About three hundred candidates are writing on the examinations which are being held in the House of Commons chamber.

ANNUAL MEETING

Local Street Railway Co. Appoints Officers.

The annual meeting of the directors of the Peterboro Radial Railway Company was held in the office of Mr. R. M. Denniston. A number of by-laws were passed and it was decided to change the date of the annual meeting to the third week in February so that reports for the financial year which will close on December 31st, may be presented. No reports were therefore read yesterday.

The following officers were elected, President, Mr. Robert Stuart, of Chicago; vice, president, Mr. J. C. Shook, secretary and manager, Mr. J. H. Larmonth. The other directors are Mr. H. P. Crowell, of Chicago, and Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P.

No decision was reached with respect to the extension of the road to Young's Point.

HYDRAULIC POWER CO.

The annual meeting of the Peterboro Hydraulic Power Co., which owns water lots along the river was also held at Mr. Denniston's office. Some by-laws were passed and it was resolved to hold the next annual meeting in February. The following directors were elected—Messrs. Robert Stuart, H. P. Crowell, Hon. Geo. A. Cox, John Stuart and J. H. Larmonth. The officers of the company are Robert Stuart, president; John Stuart, vice-president; Reeg. Gordon, Chicago, secretary; W. L. Templeton, Chicago; assistant secretary and J. H. Larmonth, manager.

CHURCH ECONOMY

Methodists of Bobcaygeon Cut Out Tea Meetings as Non-production of Coin.

The Bobcaygeon Independent says;

The anniversary services will be held at the Methodist church, on Sunday, Rev. J. G. Lewis, B.A., of Peterboro, will conduct both morning and evening services and there will be a thank offering at each service. It has been decided not to have any tea meeting, the opinion prevailing that if all persons will make their thank offering equal to what the tea meeting would cost them, it will be more productive financially and save all the trouble of the tea. The Methodists are to be commended for their course in this regard, for after all, feasting and filling the stomach is pure barbarism. To the Indians in the far north whose supply of food is irregular and precarious, and whose opportunities for pleasures, and whose opportunities of intellectual pleasures are nil, a big blow out of food, and a full stomach are his greatest enjoyment. The Indian pot latch, the feed of boiled fowl over a camp fire, the full dress banquet, at $5 a plate, are all the same savage pleasure. It is quite time that the ordinary civilized being, with an assurance of all necessary food, and with such vast opportunities for intellectual pleasures, should wean himself from the purely animal delight of feeding.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION

The Commission Will Sit in Peterboro on Nov. 30th

The date of the sitting of the Tariff Commission in Peterboro has been decided. The commission, which is composed of Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance; Hon. Sydney Fisher, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Sir Richard Cartwright, Hon. Wm. Patterson will be in Peterboro on Thursday, November 30th, when representatives from those interested in the revision of the tariff will be heard. The secretary of the Board of Trade has sent letters to the Boards of Trade in other towns and cities in this district asking that representatives be sent to the meeting of the commission here.

It is probable that question of the Trent Canal will form one of the important matters of discussion at this sitting.

As far as has been learned there are no local interests which are demanding any particular change in the tariff, but the commissioners are anxious to receive deputations from all who believe that any revision should be made.

Mr. H. H. Hall, the representative of West Peterboro at Ottawa, is to be congratulated on having secured a sitting of the commission for this city.

The fact that Peterboro has been selected as the place where the sitting will be held in this district is a tribute to its importance from an industrial and commercial standpoint.

Mr. Quartermaine has sent the following notice to the members of the Board of Trade, import and export merchants of the city of Peterboro;—

"The following telegram was received last Thursday evening by Mr. T. Q. Quartermaine, secretary of Board of Trade, from Mr. John Blain, secretary of Tariff Commission;

"Tariff Commission will visit Peterboro Thursday, thirteenth instant. Kindly receive application and make necessary arrangements for hearing. Notify press and public."

The secretary of the Board of Trade will therefore feel obliged to members of the Board, manufacturers, import and export merchants and all others interested if they will kindly notify him by mail, at their earliest convenience, if they have any matter which they would wish to bring before the Commissioners, and will also endorse applications for hearing of same.

King Edward's Injury Slight.

MR. FAWCETT'S DEATH.

Mr. Michael Fawcett, Well Known Here, Dies in Detroit Mich.

The many friends of Mr. Michael Fawcett, formerly of this city, will regret to hear of his death, at the residence of his son-in-law, Dr. Curran, 4th avenue, Detroit, Mich., on Nov. 10th.

Mr. Fawcett was for many years employed as superintendent by the late Mr. Dalton Triyott, when the latter gentleman was so extensively engaged in lumbering operations in Victoria and Peterboro counties.

After completing his very important engagements with Mr. Triyott, Mr. Fawcett moved to this city and lived on Antrim street. He was for a long time engaged in the livery business in Peterboro. Mr. Fawcett, with his family, subsequently moved to Toronto, where they have resided ever since.

Mr. Fawcett leaves a widow and two daughters, Mrs. S. G. Parkin, Lindsay, and Mrs. Curran, Detroit.

The interment, which was private, was in Mount Pleasant cemetery, Toronto.

FROST PROOF WINDOW

Mr. Pappas Introduces a System By Which in Coldest Weather His Store Window will be Clean

Mr. Pappas, 230 George street, on Saturday, attracted the attention of many citizens by the handsome silent salesman in his window. The salesman has the glass shelves, held up by silver plated brackets. This morning Mr. Pappas begins his extensive alterations. He will discard all the old fixtures, and replace by marble counters and new show cases. Mr. Pappas is the first to introduce to this city, the system used in Montreal, whereby frost is prevented from obscuring the show windows of stores.
